Sales Tax Gains Favor With House Committee

May Have to Tap All Revenue Sources Listed by President, Doughton Says

12 Billions for Planes

AN ALL-AVIATION BILL carrying 12 to 13 billion dollars for planes is due from White House soon. Page 2.

'Taxes and Bonds . . .'

Temporary resort to a general sales tax to help raise the nine-billion-dollar total of new taxes projected by the President in his budget message gained favor in the House Ways and Means Committee yesterday.

Awaiting specific tax recommendations from the Treasury Department within the next fortnight, Chairman Robert L. Doughton reserved commitments, but said the committee might have to tap all of the sources mentioned in the President's message.

Representative A. Willis Robertson (Democrat), of Virginia, meanwhile told the committee in a closed conference Wednesday he was convinced Congress would have to turn to a general sales tax, although he has opposed it in the past.

Favor Excise Levy

Three ranking Republicans on the committee, Representatives Treadway, of Massachusetts; Crowther, of New York, and Knutson, of Minnesota, immediately declared for a general manufacturers excise levy. The Republican minority on the committee has traditionally favored the levy and it was pointed out that only two or three Democratic shifts would give the proposal a numerical majority.

The President in his message said he was as convinced as ever that the sales tax had no permanent place in the tax structure but in the face of the emergency "we may later be compelled to reconsider the temporary necessity of such measures." He told reporters he meant selective excises, designed to curtail consumer demand for scarce articles needed for war.

Although a majority of the Democratic committeemen still were opposed to the levy, they reflected the attitude of Representative Boehne, jr. (Democrat), of Indiana:

Plane Reported Down North Of Newmarket

Newmarket, Va., Jan. 8 (AP).—Sheriff Carl Gochenour early tonight led a posse into the mountains 5 miles north of Newmarket in search of a plane reported to have crashed in that area.

The plane is believed to be the same craft seen flying east at 4:55 p. m. by the air raid spotter station at Shenandoah Caverns, 10 miles from the crash scene. The crash was reported to the Shenandoah County sheriff's office here shortly after 5 p. m.

The scene of the crash is located east of U. S. Highway No. 11 between Newmarket and Mount Jackson, Va. The report of the crash gave no indication whether the plane was a transport, private or military craft.

Hull Lauds Latin Cooperation As Welles Leaves for Conference

Secretary of State Hull yesterday expressed warm satisfaction over Latin-American cooperation in Western Hemisphere defense measures, as leaders of the United States delegation left Washington for the Rio de Janeiro conference of American foreign ministers.

Undersecretary of State Welles heads this country's mission to the conference, which convenes Thursday.

Hull, asked at his press conference to express his "hopes" for the Rio meeting, declined to discuss specific measures or issues awaiting the foreign ministers, but made plain his gratification with the policies of the Latin-American republics since outbreak of the war between the Axis and the United States.

Nine Latin-American republics, all Central American Caribbean states, have declared war on the Axis powers. Others have severed

Hill's Counsel Hotly Denies Viereck Link

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

Former Representative John O'Connor shouted denials in the District Court yesterday that he and his client, George Hill, a clerk in the office of Representative Hamilton Fish, had anything to do with the indicted German propagandist, George Sylvester Viereck.

O'Connor's angry protests enlivened the second day of Hill's trial on two charges that he committeed perjury before the special grand jury on Axis agents, by swearing:

1. That he didn't know Viereck, never talked to him on the telephone and never made contacts with the German agent in the offices of the late Senator Ernest Lundeen (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota.

2. That he didn't give the orders for eight mailbags full of franked envelopes to be placed in one of Fish's storerooms at the Capitol. The Post exposed the fact that Hill sent a House truck which hauled the mailbags, full of evidence, away from a propaganda base operated with Hill's help and Viereck's money.)

House Votes To Place OCD In War Dept.

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

The House yesterday voted to transfer direction of the Office of Civilian Defense from Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia of New York, to the Secretary of War, but turned about under the lash of Administration leaders and by a one-vote margin rejected proposed creation of a new assistant war secretaryship to handle the job.

Outwardly the performance, coming at the close of a heated floor battle, produced one of the more remarkable legislative anomalies, but clearly the leadership expected LaGuardia's position to be saved in the Senate-House conference.

The House had under consideration legislation authorizing funds to be spent by the OCD for the wartime protection of American civilian populations.

It made its first departure from the Senate version of the bill by accepting, without opposition, a Military Affairs Committee amendment to limit authorization for OCD expenditures to 100 million dollars.

Then, after many Republicans and some Democrats professed their admiration for LaGuardia's ability but contended that no man could

Senate Farm Bloc to Defy President on Price Control

President Roosevelt jumped into the Senate fight over farm-price control yesterday with a declaration that there should be no deviation from the principle of one-man rule of the machinery projected for checking wartime inflation.

But last night farm bloc leaders remained as confident as ever of victory when the Senate votes, probably today, on the Bankhead price bill amendment which would give Secretary of Agriculture Wickard the right to block all maximum farm prices of which he did not approve.

The President made known his stand in a telegram read to the Senate by Majority Leader Barkley as prolonged debate over the farm issue upset leadership plans for final action on the entire bill today. Barkley announced that the Senate would be held in session tomorrow, when he hoped to "finish the bill."

"I appreciate the speed with which the Senate Committee is handling the price control bill, for price control legislation is a very important part of the whole war structure," Mr. Roosevelt declared.

"But I am somewhat disturbed by reports that a board has been suggested as a substitute for a single responsible individual. I am also disturbed at the suggestion that control over agricultural commodities be separated from all other

Bern, Switzerland (Friday), Jan. 9.—The siege of Sevastopol has been lifted and the Germans' main forces southeast of that town are withdrawing to new positions southwest of Simferopol for what may develop into the battle for southern Crimea, according to the military spokesman from Moscow in his broadcast this morning.

This change in the situation was brought about when Soviet forces pushing north from Yalta succeeded after two days of heavy fighting in consolidating their positions at Sjuren, while other units pushing westward from their advance outposts on the Sevastopol defenses succeeded in effecting an encirclement movement to the north and west of that town to cut off important German tank forces.

Aviation on both sides was virtually grounded during the greater part of the offensive, owing to "utterly impossible" weather conditions, but the spokesman claimed that Russian bombers on four separate occasions were able to inflict terrific punishment on German communication lines, which finally swung the balance in the Russians' favor.

Mighty Clash Shapes Up

[Meanwhile the Associated Press reported vast columns of newly trained troops from Russia's limitless reserves were moving up to the central front, where the Soviet offensive was rolling on toward a great collision with German forces attempting to dig in on the Vyazma-Bryansk line, 130 miles west of Moscow and halfway to Smolensk.

[Information from reliable quarters in London said that the command of the Red army's center had just begun to draw upon its manpower reserve, after more than a month of unending offensive action against the invader. This information was coupled with word that

Singapore's Defenders Stand 50 Miles North Of Kuala Lumpur

By C. Yates McDaniel
Associated Press Staff Writer

Singapore, Jan. 8.—The defense of Singapore—a month-long succession of brief stands along natural lines of resistance, each followed by withdrawal in face of the foe's overwhelming numbers—centered tonight on Kuala Lumpur, crude rubber capital of the world.

Thus, in a month of fighting since the Japanese opened their great Far Eastern offensive, the threat to Singapore had been advanced across about 200 miles of verdant, sweltering Malaya—or half the distance from the northern border to Singapore.

Perak Lines Penetrated

The British high command acknowledged today that a spearhead of Japanese tanks had penetrated the western Malayan defenses north of Kuala Lumpur on the lower Perak front and that, apparently as a result of this and heavy infantry pressure, the British imperial forces had fallen back for a new stand south of the Slim River.

"We suffered some losses in guns and transport," the communique said.

The Slim River lies about 50 miles north of Kuala Lumpur. It is a tributary of the Bernam which debouches side by side with the lower Perak into the Strait of Malacca. The two rivers had formed a double barrier against the Japanese coastwise thrust southward toward Selangor state, whose capital, Kuala Lumpur, is also capital of the Federated Malay States and the second city of Malaya.

Threat From Selangor

But it was not at all certain tonight that the only threat to Kuala Lumpur lay in this offensive across the Perak, Bernam and Slim Rivers. Illustrating the fluidity of the offensive, the communique contained this unelaborated sentence:

"In the Selangor area, there were indications of some enemy infiltration eastward."

[The United Press reported that Japanese bicycle troops had swarmed into Selangor and said that officials talked of moving the Malayan headquarters to the Netherlands East Indies.

[Heavier mechanized units followed the bicycle units, the reports said, indicating the Japanese had reconstructed the demolished roads

U. S. to Put Teeth in System Of Rating Federal Employes

By Jerry Kluttz
Post Staff Writer

An efficiency rating system with teeth—and sharp ones—which will affect an estimated 150,000 Federal employes here was announced yesterday by the Civil Service Commission. More than 400,000 Government workers here and in the field will be covered by the revised plan, which will become effective March 31.

The new system, designed to make Federal workers more efficient, will be used to determine what employes will be promoted, demoted, raised in pay, or fired.

It is also expected to aid the new boards on efficiency ratings in disposing of grievances. The amended efficiency plan provides:

1. An employe given an "excellent" or "very good" rating is eligible for administrative pay raises to the highest step in his grade.

2. An employe whose efficiency rating is "good" is eligible for administrative raises up to and including the middle step in the grade. Steps within a grade range from 2 to 9.

3. An employe given a "fair" rating will be reduced one step within the grade if his salary is above the middle rate of the grade. If his salary is equal to or below the middle rate, his salary will remain unchanged.

4. An employe given an "unsatisfactory" rating will either be demoted or fired. If the employe is serving his probationary period, he will be fired outright. But if he is a regular employe, he will be assigned to a position in a lower grade more nearly fitted to his ability, if a vacancy exists. In the lower grade the employe will not to be paid in excess of the middle rate for the grade. If no vacancy exists, the employe will be fired as inefficient.

However, salary reductions, demotions and dismissals among the 150,000 employes here must be approved by the Civil Service Commission before the actions are taken. Employes affected will be given 30 days notice.

Backing up the efficiency rating plan to make it effective is the Ramspeck-Mead Act which guarantees employes automatic administrative promotions. Nearly 225,000 will get promotions this year under the act. Until now employes had no cash incentive to get excellent efficiency ratings because they didn't Marines' Own Story of Island's Gallant Defense Reaches U. S.

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

The gallant Marine defenders of Wake Island sank seven Japanese warships—two more than previously reported—during their epic 14-day stand, the Navy announced yesterday.

This was made known in reports dramatically flown off the island December 20, two days before it fell before overwhelming odds, and just received here. The detailed reports, from the island's air commander, and an air observer, give some light on how the handful of Marines were able to wreak such havoc on the attacking fleet.

Held Fire Till They Saw 'the Whites of Their Eyes'

They followed the tradition of Bunker Hill and figuratively "held their fire until they saw the whites of the enemy's eyes," the Navy said.

In cold fact, Maj. James P. S. Devereux, of Chevy Chase, Md., Marine commander at Wake, let the Japanese fleet get within 4700 yards before ordering 5-inch and 3-inch guns to fire. At this "point-blank range," the Navy said, a cruiser, two destroyers and one gunboat went down.

One ranking official, who years ago was a star on the Navy

Sergt. William J. Hamilton

Lieut. John F. Kinney

football team, described Devereux's tactics a little differently, declaring:

"He mouse-trapped 'em."

Later, a submarine and two destroyers were sunk by air action and gunfire.

The thrilling eyewitness stories of Wake Island's defense were given out simultaneously with a formal citation of the garrison for heroism issued by their Commander in Chief, President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

This rare citation, published in Navy Department Communique No. 25, declares that the "courageous conduct" of Wake's defenders "against an overwhelming superiority of enemy air, sea and land attacks from December 8 to 22, 1941, has been noted with admiration by their fellow countrymen and the civilized world, and will not be forgotten so long as gallantry and heroism are respected and honored."

Detachments Are Identified for First Time

The citation identified the units on the island for the first time. They were the Wake detachment of the First Defense Battalion, U. S. Marines and Marine Fighting Squadron 211 of Marine Aircraft Group 21.

The sinking of the two additional Japanese warships was disclosed in a report made by Maj. Walter L. J. Bayler, who was on temporary duty on Wake when the attack occurred and left the island December 20 in a patrol plane.

His penciled notes of the day-to-day progress of the siege were submitted to the commander in chief of the Pacific Fleet, and then sent on to the Navy Department. They place the Japanese losses as the result of the point-blank fire of the Marine batteries in the first attack as one light cruiser, two destroyers and a gunboat.

Prior radio reports to the Navy Department fom Wake had told of

Roosevelt's Cousin

Joseph Alsop, Capital Writer, Reported Captured by Japs

Copyright by New York Times

Joseph W. Alsop, jr., sixth cousin of President Roosevelt and second cousin of the First Lady, is a prisoner of the Japanese at Hongkong, the State Department believes.

Alsop, formerly a newspaper syndicate writer, has recently been serving as an adviser to the Chinese nationalist government. He was in Manila on a mission for Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek just before Japan launched its surprise attack against the United States, but later flew to Hongkong.

His mother, Mrs. Corinne Robinson Alsop, first cousin of Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt and fifth cousin of Franklin D. Roosevelt, received a cable from her son sent from Hongkong December 12, saying he was safe and well. No word has been heard from him since that time. An official inquiry sent to Chungking since Japanese forces captured the British island brought a reply from the Chinese government that Alsop had been scheduled to take the first plane leaving Hongkong after December 9. Subsequent flights were cancelled, and the Chinese government believes Alsop to be a prisoner.

Enemy Masses For Knockout Blow at Our Men on Luzon

By Marshall Andrews
Post Staff Writer

One United States submarine prowling through Far Eastern waters has sent four Japanese ships, one a troop transport, to the bottom, the Navy Department reported yesterday.

This submarine, part of Admiral Thomas C. Hart's Asiatic Fleet, has sunk three cargo vessels in addition to the transport, the Navy communique revealed. Each of these ships was estimated to be 10,000 tons.

In the Philippines, where an American-Filipino force under Gen. Douglas MacArthur is standing behind its defenses across mountainous Bataan peninsula, the Japanese apparently were marshaling their forces for what they expect to be the knockout blow. Fighting "of varying intensity" all along the front was described in yesterday's War Department communique as "probably preparatory to a large-scale general attack by the enemy."

Foe Concentrates Forces

Reinforcements were being brought up to the front from the scattered sectors of Luzon from which the Japanese operated prior to the evacuation of Manila. This additional fighting strength was held here to indicate an early renewal of Japanese assaults, this time against a prepared line, shortened and strongly defended.

Among the American and Filipino soldiers who man the defenses, Gen. MacArthur reported to the War Department, morale and determination are high, and these men, fighting almost constantly for a month, "may be counted on to continue their resistance with skill and courage."

Corregidor and its flanking chain of forts across Manila Bay escaped bombardment from the air for the first time in several days. Enemy air activity, the communique said, "was confined to reconnaissance."

Whatever the result, it was agreed here that a frontal assault on the American-Filipino position will be immeasurably costly to the enemy. There was nothing in reports here to indicate that an operation to outflank the position had begun.

While the War Department has had no complete casualty reports from the Philippines, Assistant Secretary of War John J. McCloy said yesterday at a press conference that American casualties were "not unduly heavy," while those of the enemy were "considerably heavier than our own."

McCloy added that MacArthur is directing operations either from the fortress of Corregidor or from field headquarters behind the lines on Bataan.

It was pointed out that a measure of Japanese losses lies in the fact that the enemy has been forced time and again to reinforce the attacking force which at the outset outnumbered the defenders. This has required the use on Luzon of veteran troops which might otherwise have been employed in other

Congress to Speed Funds for Air War

Between 12 and 13 Billions Are Expected To Be Appropriated for U. S. Planes

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

An "all-aviation" war appropriation bill, giving wings to the President's program for 65,000 fighting planes this year and redoubled production next, last night was awaited at the Capitol as the first of the new war supplemental appropriations.

Between 12 and 13 billion dollars was expected to be asked out of current fiscal year funds for the Nation's maximum effort to cloud enemy horizons with American bombers, fighters and pursuit planes.

Estimates for the immediate supplemental appropriations were not included in the President's budget, which listed chiefly outlays for the fiscal year 1943. Taking precedence over these, at least three big current-year appropriations are planned, it was indicated.

Due for Swift Action

In addition to the "all-air" bill expected in the next few days, the following big supplemental estimates were expected to follow shortly, and be cleared on short notice by the House Appropriations Committee:

An omnibus war bill, probably totaling between 18 and 20 billion dollars, covering nonair needs of all military and naval branches, and including funds to meet the President's 1942 and 1943 goals for tank and antiaircraft gun production.

An "all-Navy" bill, of unestimated proportions, probably including funds to speed the 150,000-ton increases in the Navy and the proposed 845-million-dollar expansion in naval construction facilities.

Plant Conversion Included

The vast plane-building program, first war production goal set by the President in his opening address to the new session of Congress on Tuesday, contemplates wide-scale conversion of plants as well as actual plane costs.

All of the funds cannot be spent in one year but will be ready for obligation as rapidly as plants can be tooled. Objective, as stated Tuesday by the President, is 60,000 planes overall in 1942, with 45,000 of them combat ships; and 125,000 planes next year, 100,000 of them bombers, dive bombers and pursuit ships.

The House Appropriations Committee meanwhile, under Chairman Clarence Cannon, organized to speed the 1943 fiscal year budget laid down by the President Wednesday. Two subcommittees were pratically ready to report the first of the departmental bills—Independent Offices and Treasury-Postoffice. Hearings on Agriculture Department budget open today.

Hearings Start Monday

Hearings on the regular Navy Department bill, set down in the budget for $5,932,746,768, but subject to sharp upward revision, will open Monday before the House Navy Appropriations Subcommittee headed by Representative Scrugham (Democrat), of Nevada. Admiral Ernest J. King, commander in chief of the United States fleet, may testify.

Hearings on the regular War Department appropriation bill were not expected to start until April, before the subcommittee headed by Representative Snyder (Democrat), of Pennsylvania. The initial War Department item included in the budget called for $6,886,091,747, but this may be doubled or tripled. Only on his plane, tank and antiaircraft gun and shipbuilding goals has the President departed from the strict military secrecy that will prevail on all details.

Sales Tax Gains Favor in House

"I would vote for a sales tax only if I were convinced there were no other ways of raising the money." Others pointed out the conflict with State taxes in this field, the already wide Federal use of excises and the limited revenue unless necessities were taxed.

Other Possibilities

Other tax hints thrown out in the President's message included: Income taxes collected at the source, two billion dollars in payroll taxes to carry an expanded social security program and implement Treasury borrowings, lowered estate and gift tax exemptions, taxation of State and local bond issues and revision of excess profits taxes.

In line with his general outline, House tax experts expected the Treasury to resubmit in some form its recent proposal for a 15 per cent withholding tax on income in excess of personal exemptions, for possible collection monthly during 1942.

A fight appeared in prospect both on this plan and on any effort to revive the Treasury's twice-rejected invested capital method of excess profits taxation.

Some members said that if a withholding tax were invoked, they would urge that the Treasury issue bonds to the taxpayers for part of it.

Several Have Own Proposals

In line with Chairman Doughton's assertions that the committee will write its own bill, several members will present individual proposals. Representative Boehne will ruge revival of the committee's 1941 plan for compulsory joint returns. Representative Knutson said he would ask raising of at least part of the revenue by the national lottery method and Federal collection of all taxes, with each State's share remitted to it by the Federal Government.

The two billion dollars proposed by the President in added social security taxes, it was suggested, might be raised principally by advancing the January 1, 1943, automatic increase in payroll taxes for old age and survivor insurance. The tax is now 1 per cent each on employer and employe, but scheduled to go to 2 per cent each on the next year. On the basis of yields this would raise about $1,000,000,000. Another 650 million dollars might be added by reviving the Treasury plan to swell unemployment-compensation revenues by adding a 1 per cent tax on employes to the 3 per cent tax now entirely borne by the employer.

only a cruiser and a destroyer being sunk in the first action. Wake's toll of enemy war vessels thus adds up to seven—a cruiser, four destroyers, a gunboat and submarine.

Maj. Bayler brought back a report from Maj. Paul A. Putnam, commander of Wake's air fighters, which told of aerial operations up to December 20. This told of how the little squadron, its strength reduced from 12 to 4 planes in the first bombing raid, managed to keep planes in the air by literally building them out of the wreckage of others.

Since the first raid, Putnam reported, "parts and assemblies have been traded back and forth so that no airplane can be identified. Engines have been traded from plane to plane, have been junked, stripped, rebuilt and all but created."

Maj. Putnam gives credit in this connection to First Lieut. John F. Kinney and Technical Sergt. William J. Hamilton.

Praising the men of his command, Putnam said:

"All hands have behaved splendidly and held up in a manner of which the Marine Corps may well tell. I have no report to make regarding any officer or man being outstanding in bravery or fortitude; they have all acquitted themselves with equal distinction.

"On the other hand, I particularly wish to comment on the indefatigable labor and ingenuity, skill and technical knowledge of Lieut. Kinney and Technical Sergt. Hamilton. It is solely due to their effort that the squadron is still operating."

The text of the communique:

Navy Communique No. 25

Far East: The commanding officer of a U. S. submarine of the Asiatic Fleet has reported the sinking of an enemy transport. In addition this vessel succeeded in sinking three enemy cargo vessels, each estimated to be of 10,000 tons displacement.

Central Pacific: The defense of Wake Island by United States Marines has been cited by the President of the United States as follows:

The White House

January 5, 1942

Citation by
THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES
of
The Wake detachment of the First Defense Battalion, U. S. Marine Corps, under command of Maj. James P. S. Devereux, U. S. Marines

Marine Fighting Squadron 211 of Marine Aircraft Group 21, under command of Maj. Paul A. Putnam, U. S. Marines

"The courageous conduct of the officers and men of these units, who defended Wake Island against an overwhelming superiority of enemy air, sea and land attacks from December 8 to 22, 1941, has been noted with admiration by their fellow countrymen and the civilized world, and will not be forgotten so long as gallantry and heroism are respected and honored. These units are commended for their devotion to duty and splendid conduct at their battle stations under most adverse conditions. With limited defensive means against attacks in great force, they manned their shore installations and flew their aircraft so well that five enemy warships were either sunk or severely damaged, many hostile planes shot down, and an unknown number of land troops destroyed."

Wake: An increase of two Japanese warships—a destroyer and a gunboat—over the originally reported cruiser, submarine and three destroyers that the Japs lost in the attack on Wake Island, was indicated in two reports to Marine Corps headquarters, received from the Pacific area.

These reports were sent from Wake Island by a patrol plane. One, written on December 20, is from Maj. Paul A. Putnam, commanding aviation on Wake. The other is a day-by-day account of Marine aviation's participation in the Battle of Wake Island up to December 20 by Maj. W. Bayler.

The day-by-day record of the battle, though not an official report, is Maj. Bayler's account of what Marine aviation and Maj. Devereux's men did.

Maj. Bayler's report has but little reference to the Marines on the isle besides the aviation group, but one brief note—"Japs closed into 4700 yards before 5 and 3-inch guns opened up at point-blank range"—indicates a cool courage on the part of Devereux's men that ranks with the classic "whites of their eyes" line of Bunker Hill, in the opinion of ranking officers at Marine Corps headquarters.

Added to the two Japanese destroyers which were lost in the final phase of the battle of December 22, the new information received brings Japanese losses in taking the Island of Wake up to a total of seven warships—one cruiser, four destroyers, one submarine and one gunboat.

Maj. Bayler was on temporary duty in Wake in connection with the establishment of a base of operations for the Marine Corps Aviation unit. This unit composed of 12 planes, with pilots, 49 ground personnel, arrived shortly before the outbreak of hostilities. Following is a copy of the penciled notes the major made from the records kept by him and sent to the Commander in Chief, United States Pacific Fleet. He was present at Wake until December 20.

First Raid Casualties Heavy

Synopsis of events (Wake local time) December 8-20:

December 8, 7 a. m.—Received word bombing Oahu. General quarters station. 11:58 a. m.—Twenty-four Jap bombers on a northern course hit airdrome in close column of division "Vs" from 3000 feet. One-hundred pound fragmentation bombs and simultaneous strafing. Casualties, 25 dead; 7 wounded, 7 airplanes burned, destroyed.

December 9, 11:45 a. m.—Twenty-seven Japs. Bombed hospital, Camp No. 2. Killed several patients. 3 dead. Got one Jap plane.

December 10, 10:45 a. m.—Twenty-seven Jap bombers. No casualties.

December 11, 5 a. m.—Landing attempt by 12 Jap ships, including light cruisers, destroyers, gunboats, 2 troop or supply ships. Jap casualties: One light cruiser, 2 destroyers, 1 gunboat, 2 bombers.

Note: That Japs closed into 4700 yards before 5 and 3-inch guns opened up at point-blank range.

December 12—27 Jap planes bombed Peale and Wake from 22,000 feet. No casualties.

December 13—All quiet.

Raid by 4-Engine Planes

December 15, 11 a. m.—Dawn raid by three four-engined seaplanes. 27 Jap bombers. Shot down two Japs.

December 16, 5:45 p. m.—41 Jap bombers hit Camp Two and airdrome. Jap four-motor plane raid. One Jap shot down.

December 17—32 Jap bombers at 13:17 hit Camp 1, Peale Island, Diesel oil supply, mess hall and pumps of evaporators, Camp 1.

December 18, 11:40 a. m.—One Jap high rec. plane (two-engine) (photo?).

December 19, 10:30 a. m.—Jap bombers hit airport and camp.

December 20—All quiet, first day of bad weather.

Total casualties: 28 dead, 6 wounded as of December 20 from VMF-211.

Notes: (1) Jap bombers of Dornier type, two-engine, twin tail, 160 knots. (2) Attack formations always in form of line of division V's in close formation. Excellent air discipline. (3) Nine sure Jap bombers shot down; three more possibly. One four-engine P boat, one CL, two DD, one gunboat.

Putnam's Report in Detail

Maj. Putnam's report of operations to his commanding officer in Pearl Harbor goes into more detail on the efforts of the tiny aviation complement to keep the planes that were left after the first attack in the air against each new attack.

Of the original aviation force of 12 officers and 49 enlisted men, 19 enlisted men and 8 officers were still on duty by December 20. Of these, four enlisted men and two officers were wounded but still on duty. One officer and six enlisted men were in the hospital and "doing nicely." The remainder, three officers and 34 men, were dead.

The letter relates that four planes were in the air against the Japs at the time of the first raid. The other eight were on the ground being serviced between flights, and of these seven were destroyed and one was slightly damaged. One of the planes that was in the air later taxied into debris on the field—the wreckage of the first raid—and bent its propeller.

The Marine fighters, up to December 20, had made contact with the enemy seven times, had shot down five Japs in flames, four more had "been claimed by pilots but not verified and several are known to have been damaged. Of the four claimed one was a four-engined sea plane."

Land Guns Effective

Discussing the surface attack of December 11, Putnam reported "four airplanes (Marine planes) made a total of ten attacks, operating in a greatly overloaded condition and performing splendidly . . . We claim the sinking of one ship and serious damage to another." The guns of Devereux's force evidently accounted for the remainder of the ships reported destroyed in Maj. Bayler's synopsis. In the attack on December 11, one plane was lost, "a washout on the rocky beach."

After the attack on December 14, which saw two Marine planes destroyed, "one plane on the ground by enemy action and one crashed on the takeoff" the Marines had "only two operating airplanes, one of which gives constant trouble so that two planes in the air at one time is the exception rather than the rule." At one time only one serviceable plane was left to Maj. Putnam's squadron, but the mechanics and ground crews evidently made an additional plane, or even planes out of the wreckage of the remainder.

Lauding the work of the ground crews at Wake, Maj. Putnam wrote "since that time (the first raid) parts and assemblies have been traded back and forth so that no airplane can be identified. Engines have been traded from plane to plane, have been junked, stripped, rebuilt and all but created."

Continuing his praise for the men under him, Maj. Putnam wrote "all hands have behaved splendidly and held up in a manner of which the Marine Corps may well tell. I have no report to make regarding any officer or man being outstanding in bravery or fortitude; they have all acquitted themselves with equal distinction. On the other hand, I particularly wish to comment on the indefatigable labor, and ingenuity, skill and technical knowledge of Lieut. Kinney and Technical Sergt. Hamilton. It is solely due to their efforts that the squadron is still operating."

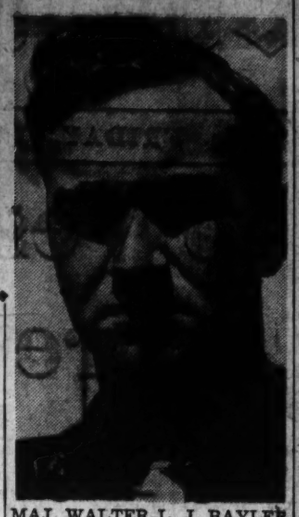
Living Conditions Fira

Discussing the living conditions on the airdrome as they were on December 20, Maj. Putnam said: "Personnel are living in dugouts made by the contractor's men and equipment. Not comfortable, but adequate against all but direct bomb hits. Feeding is from the contractor's galley, a truck making the rounds with hot food twice daily. Sanitation is only fair, but so far have had only a mild flurry of diarrhea. Fresh water is adequate for drinking, but salt water is used for all other purposes."

The tone of the entire report indicates no particular anxiety on the part of the air group at Wake. They were there under orders with a job to do. They were doing the job and would continue to do it until circumstances beyond their control forced them to discontinue their efforts. They had kept those circumstances under control for almost two weeks and they would continue to do so.

At no time during the siege were more than four Marine planes in operation, Putnam reported, but the verified total that these planes took of the Japanese was one ship, one submarine and five Jap planes.

There is nothing to report from other areas.



MAJ. WALTER L. J. BAYLER

Wake Sergeant May Receive Lieutenancy

One of the two marines selected for special mention in President Roosevelt's citation of Wake Island's defenders has been promoted since the island fell to an overwhelming force of Japanese December 14. Another, an enlisted man, is before a selection board for promotion to first lieutenant.

First Lieut. John Franklin Kinney, who was promoted to that rank from second lieutenant January 2, was jointly named with Technical Sergt. William James Hamilton for "ingenuity, skill and technical knowledge" in patching, repairing and "creating" airplanes during the fight on Wake. "It is solely due to their efforts," said the commander, "that the squadron is still operating."

Lieut. Kinney was born at Endicott, Wash., November 1, 1914, and began flight training at Pensacola in August, 1938. A year later he was commissioned a second lieutenant in the Marine Corps and, after attending basic school at Philadelphia, was assigned to Marine Bombing Squadron 2, Fleet Marine Force, at San Diego. He served as assistant squadron material officer and assistant squadron flight officer at San Diego and aboard the carriers Saratoga and Lexington.

Sergt. Hamilton, whose name is now before a board of promotion to first lieutenant, was born June 3, 1912, at Altoona, Pa., and studied mechanics at high school there. After two enlistments in the Army Air Corps, he enlisted in the Marine Corps March 4, 1935, and a year later began training at Pensacola, being designated naval aviation pilot June 15, 1937.

Maj. Walter L. J. Bayler, who new the aviation commander's report from Wake, was born in 1908 at Lebanon, Pa., and was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1927. After a year of Marine Corps basic school and primary aviation training, he served a year in Nicaragua as a line company officer. He returned to the United States in 1929, winning his wings in 1930 and attending postgraduate school at Annapolis after servies with an aircraft squadron at Quantico, Va. He was promoted to first lieutenant in 1934 and was sent to the Harvard Post Graduate School for training in communication engineering.

2 Fear Britain Will Be U. S. Outpost

Eden and Attlee Lay Setback in Malaya To Aid Sent to Reds

By the Associated Press

London, Jan. 8.—Fear that the British Isles might become an American outpost was openly expressed today by two members of Commons in commenting on results of the Washington conferences.

Laborite Richard Rapier Stokes said: "I hate to think of the military center of control shifting to Washington. It gives me a nasty feeling—I have had it for many months—indeed I might say for years—that we may find ourselves reduced to what I term occupying the position of America's Helgoland off the coast of Europe."

Edgar Louis Granville, Liberal, said:

"We may have to choose between whether this island shall be a Western outpost of totalitarian Europe or the Eastern outpost of an American-controlled civilization."

U. S. Navy Criticized

The United States' preparedness for the war in the Pacific also came in for criticism.

After remarking that American vessels were "surprised" by the Japanese attack when "they ought to have been on the other side of the Pacific in Singapore," Sir George Jeffreys said:

"With regard to the proposal that the commander of the American Fleet should be the commander of our fleet in the Far East, the American Fleet has not begun this war well and American personnel has no experience of modern war whatever. It took no part in any fighting in the last war.

"I doubt whether British seamen will like serving under a foreign command."

Southby Also Comments

The first comment along this line had come from Commander Sir Archibald Southby, Conservative, who said that Russian and African successes do not offset the loss of Guam and other islands to Japan.

"It might have been better," Southby said, "if the United States had augmented the defense of those vitally important places rather than expend time and material in creation of the bases which we have leased to them in the West Indies and Newfoundland."

Stokes Rebuked Last Spring in Commons

Stokes, frequently a critic of the government's actions, was rebuked in Commons last spring for asking a secret debate on the British-United States destroyer-naval base exchange.

Commander Southby also wanted such a secret debate.

Granville had urged the creation of an Allied war command, a British-American united naval command, and a British-American supply council.

Gen. Jeffreys, an old army man, had questioned the government's policy last spring in withholding Lord Gort's dispatches on the Flanders campaign.

Eden and Attlee justified the thinness of Malayan defenses because of the asserted need for concentrating strong British forces in Africa and the Near East, and the speeding of equipment to Russia.

The dispatch of British troops to Greece last spring, Eden declared, was not a "sentimental" decision. That move, coupled with the uprising in Yugoslavia against Germany, delayed the German attack on Russia for six weeks, he added amid cheers.

Discussing his recent Moscow conference with Soviet leaders, Eden took an opportunity to assure nonbelligerent Turkey that both Britain and Russia wanted to see that country "strong and prosperous."

To suggestions that the dominions should be represented in the imperial War Council, Eden said Canada and New Zealand had expressed themselves as satisfied with present arrangements.

"A different view has been taken by Australia," he admitted.

While Attlee and Eden were facing a barrage of criticism in Commons, Lord Moyne, colonial secretary and government spokesman, was receiving the same treatment in the House of Lords.

Labor Party Leader Lord Addison declared that Air Chief Marshal Sir Robert Brooke-Popham, recently replaced commander in the Far East, was a "nincompoop."

Lord Moyne acknowledged that British and American naval reverses had tipped the sea-power balance in Japan's favor temporarily, but declared "prompt measures are being taken to counter her initial advantage."

He said there was no foundation in a report that Japan already was getting oil from the destroyed wells in North Borneo.

Malayan defenders, he said, had been instructed to carry out the same "scorched earth" policy regarding oil, rubber, copra, and metal stocks which might fall into Japanese hands.

Assurances Cheered

Cheers greeted Attlee's statement that the United States' entry into the war clinched its ultimate outcome "without a shadow of a doubt."

Attlee and Eden justified the thinness of Malayan defenses because of the asserted need for concentrating strong British forces in Africa and the Near East, and the speeding of equipment to Russia.

The dispatch of British troops to Greece last spring, Eden declared, was not a "sentimental" decision. That move, coupled with the uprising in Yugoslavia against Germany, delayed the German attack on Russia for six weeks, he added amid cheers.

Rommel's Forces Retreating Through Sandstorm in the Mud

By the Associated Press

Cairo, Jan. 8.—Gen. Erwin Rommel's African corps was making a getaway tonight from the Agedabia area of Libya, favored by an unusual combination of mud that hampered flank attacks and a swirling sandstorm that half blinded his pursuers.

Further complicating the running battle British imperials fought with Rommel's rear guard were mines which Rommel's sappers laid in road and other inviting terrain.

Nevertheless, according to today's communique from British general headquarters, the Coldstream Guards and the Scots Guards, battle-honored regiments of the British, established contact yesterday afternoon with the enemy's rear guard about 7 miles southwest of Agedabia.

Farther south a flanking operation was attempted simultaneously by the King's Dragoon Guards and a South African armored force, but while this carried the offensive 20 to 40 miles deeper into territory previously held by the Axis, it still left Rommel's flank intact.

General headquarters disclosed the Rommel Agedabia getaway thus:

"Taking advantage of a heavy sandstorm which continues severely to restrict visibility, the enemy is withdrawing from Agedabia, covered by strong rearguards."

But the storm, whipping sand through the narrow apertures of British tanks and armored cars—thus literally hurling an abrasive into the works of mechanized warfare—was only part of the weather difficulties facing the British efforts to force Rommel to stand and give battle.

There also was intermittent rain, which cut through the dust-laden skies along the Gulf of Sirte, turned the soft shoulders of the coastal roads into quagmires and softened the sandy earth afield.

The combination of mud and low visibility, a British commentator conceded, offered Rommel an "unusually good opportunity of getting away," not merely from the Agedabia area, but well on his way along the Gulf of Sirte toward Tripoli.

This informant said that only one road offered the footing for rapid travel westward and that tanks and trucks promptly bogged down when they left it.

"If the ground were firm it would be difficult for Rommel to get away because our tanks are faster than his and could have gone cross-country to head him off."

2000 More Retreating Japs Lost as Chinese Press Drive

By Spencer Moosa
Associated Press Staff Writer

Chungking (Friday), Jan. 9.—China's Central News Agency reported today that the Chinese had killed or wounded 2000 more Japanese Thursday in their methodical campaign of annihilation against the 30,000 invaders trapped between the Laotao and Milo Rivers in northern Hunan province.

Chinese spokesman previously had reported the Japanese suffered more than 35,000 casualties since the smashing of their assault on Changsha last Sunday.

As the Japanese, who originally numbered 100,000 to 150,000 by Chinese estimates, sought to fall back to their Yochow base 100 miles to the north, strong Chinese land forces aided by planes trapped 30,000 of them in the area between the two rain-swollen rivers.

Chinese army spokesman said that several thousand additional Japanese who sallied out from Yochow on a relief expedition had been intercepted and engaged by the Chinese.

"Scattered groups of enemy remnants that succeeded in crossing the Laotao River on Tuesday afternoon, braving a heavy rainstorm, are being subjected to violent Chinese attack," a Chinese communique said.

The Chinese reported capture of huge quatitie of materiel.

The communique reported that 3,500 Japanese had been killed or wounded in the past two weeks of operations on the eastern Chekiang Front, south of Shanghai. Frequent Japanese attacks from Ningpo, Yuyao and Hsanfyu were acknowledged but were said to have been turned back by the Chinese in their mountain positions.

Chinese planes, which have made few offensive moves in the war, attacked Japanese troops and supplies and caused extensive military damage in their first operation over the Hunan Front, authoritative sources said. One plane was reported missing.

O'Connor Angrily Denies Viereck Link at Hill Trial

jury, O'Connor demanded that he be given a copy of everything Hill had said. Special Prosecutor William Power Maloney said it was his duty to require O'Connor to promise that the testimony would not be shown to Viereck, who will soon be tried under the Foreign Agents Registration Act, or to Viereck's lawyer, who has been in court taking notes furiously since the Hill trial started.

O'Connor's voice mounted to a roar as he asserted that neither he or Hill had anything to do with Viereck.

"I know the viciousness intended by that suggestion was made and I resent it," shouted O'Connor. "I don't know Viereck. I don't know his lawyer. I haven't anything to do with them . . ."

"In that case, you can certainly give the assurance," interrupted Justice F. Dickinson Letts, presiding.

"It was not asked in good faith," O'Connor continued. "Of course, I am an officer of the court and I would not permit an unauthorized person to see the record."

18 Mailbags Brought In

"Well, you'll have to give the assurance," Justice Letts ruled.

Cross-examining Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, Board of Education president and secretary of the special grand jury, O'Connor paused yesterday to demand that the mailbags be brought into the court room. The trial stopped while officials dragged in 18 bags which were found of the 20 hauled away from the headquarters of Prescott Dennett, a few hours after Dennett was summoned by the grand jury.

Dipping into one of the bags, O'Connor pulled out an unaddressed envelope, which contained an extract from the Congressional Record entitled, "England Expects Every American to Do His Duty." This was put in the record by Senator D. Worth Clark (Democrat), of Idaho, reprinted—to the tune of 85,000 copies—on Hill's order and mailed, postage free, by Dennett.

A few minutes later Special Prosecutors Maloney and Edward J. Hickey, jr., dug into the bags for several more of the propaganda items, which they placed in evidence and read to the jury.

As the day wore on, the mailbags, piled high in front of the press table, appeared to become displeasing to O'Connor. Finally he kicked one, mumbled something disapproving about "mailbags," hefted one bag high in the air and slammed it down hard on top of the pile.

John S. Correll, telephone company engineer and foreman of the special grand jury, testified that the jurors set out to uncover the financing and the operations of the German propaganda machine in this country.

The trail led to Capitol Hill, Correll said, when the jurors received evidence that Viereck wrote speeches and other material for Representatives and Senator on this and other propaganda placed in the Congressional Record then obtained reprints and had 'em mailed under Congressional frank.

Correll said the evidence also showed that Viereck controlled and financed Flanders Hall, Inc., pro-Nazi publishers, for whom Dennett was a press agent.

Ledger Sheets to Be Offered

Refreshing his memory from huge ledger sheets prepared for the Department of Justice propaganda unit, Correll said there was evidence that Hill ordered and paid for reprints on anti-interventionist material which was mailed under the franks of Senators Gerald Nye (Republican), of North Dakota; La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin; Brooks (Republican), of Illinois, and Clark (Democrat), of Idaho.

Prosecutor Maloney said the ledger sheets themselves, showing purchase of more than half a million propaganda items by Hill, would be placed in evidence today. The purchases include the franks of more than a score of Senators and Representatives, whose franks were found in Dennett's place. Nearly all said they had no idea how he got them.

Correll confirmed Mrs. Doyle's testimony that Viereck himself revealed his acquaintance with Hill but would not tell their business because he thought it was incriminating. Viereck is expected to repeat this on the stand today.

As this evidence piled up, O'Connor fought every statement, running the total of his objections into the hundreds. Almost as many times Justice Letts overruled him and allowed the trial to proceed.

Testifying as the day ended was Lawrence LaCharity, official stenographer. He read the record of Hill's denials which the grand jurors found were false.

After Justice Letts went to his chambers, the prosecutors gave O'Connor the Hill testimony he had demanded. Then he asked for the transcript of all Dennett said in the eight days he testified. Maloney refused and O'Connor shouted that this was an outrage.

"You say this testimony belongs to the Government," the lawyer declaimed to the score of lawyers, newspapermen, witnesses and two charwomen who were in the courtroom. "And who is the Government. We pay your salary . . ."

Prosecutor Hickey interposed dryly: "We paid your salary for a long time up on the Hill, Mr. O'Connor."

The defense lawyer, once a Democratic Congressman from New York and later vice chairman of an anti-interventionist committee gotten up by Fish, was defeated in the 1938 primaries. President Roosevelt had urged his defeat.

Nazi With Radio And Camera Was Cook for Army

New York, Jan. 8 (AP).—A dive bomber and a light tank might have been slightly more surprising discoveries, but a shortwave radio and a camera found in the quarters of a German cook in the Officers Club at Governors Island, headquarters of the First U. S. Army, were enough to keep the man in the custody of the FBI tonight.

Samuel Foxworth, FBI agent, said that a man identified as Edward Oscar Karl Koenig, 39, a native of Essen, Germany, was seized yesterday and was held temporarily as an enemy agent, subject to internment.

The man, Foxworth said, entered the United States illegally at Houston, Tex., in 1923, and in some manner obtained employment at the important Army post where he has been working for several months.

Koenig, the FBI agent said, did not comply with the recent Federal order for all enemy aliens to turn in their radios and cameras.

Congress to Speed Funds for Air War

Between 12 and 13 Billions Are Expected To Be Appropriated for U. S. Planes

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

An "all-aviation" war appropriation bill, giving wings to the President's program for 65,000 fighting planes this year and redoubled production next, last night was awaited at the Capitol as the first of the new war supplemental appropriations.

Between 12 and 13 billion dollars was expected to be asked out of current fiscal year funds for the Nation's maximum effort to cloud enemy horizons with American bombers, fighters and pursuit planes.

Estimates for the immediate supplemental appropriations were not included in the President's budget, which listed chiefly outlays for the fiscal year 1943. Taking precedence over these, at least three big current-year appropriations are planned, it was indicated.

Due for Swift Action

In addition to the "all-air" bill expected in the next few days, the following big supplemental estimates were expected to follow shortly, and be cleared on short notice by the House Appropriations Committee:

An omnibus war bill, probably totaling between 18 and 20 billion dollars, covering nonair needs of all military and naval branches, and including funds to meet the President's 1942 and 1943 goals for tank and antiaircraft gun production.

An "all-Navy" bill, of unestimated proportions, probably including funds to speed the 150,000-ton increases in the Navy and the proposed 845-million-dollar expansion in naval construction facilities.

Plant Conversion Included

The vast plane-building program, first war production goal set by the President in his opening address to the new session of Congress on Tuesday, contemplates wide-scale conversion of plants as well as actual plane costs.

All of the funds cannot be spent in one year but will be ready for obligation as rapidly as plants can be tooled. Objective, as stated Tuesday by the President, is 60,000 planes overall in 1942, with 48,000 of them combat ships; and 125,000 planes next year, 100,000 of them bombers, dive bombers and pursuit ships.

The House Appropriations Committee meanwhile, under Chairman Clarence Cannon, organized to speed the 1943 fiscal year budget laid down by the President Wednesday. Two subcommittees were pratically ready to report the first of the departmental bills—Independent Offices and Treasury-Postoffice. Hearings on Agriculture Department budget open today.

Hearings Start Monday

Hearings on the regular Navy Department bill, set down in the budget for $5,932,746,768, but subject to sharp upward revision, will open Monday before the House Navy Appropriations Subcommittee headed by Representative Scrugham (Democrat), of Nevada. Admiral Ernest J. King, commander in chief of the United States fleet, may testify.

Hearings on the regular War Department appropriation bill were not expected to start until April, before the subcommittee headed by Representative Snyder (Democrat), of Pennsylvania. The initial War Department item included in the budget called for $6,868,091,747, but this may be doubled or tripled. Only on his plane, tank and antiaircraft gun and shipbuilding goals has the President departed from the strict military secrecy that will prevail on all details.

"I would vote for a sales tax only if I were convinced there were no other ways of raising the money." Others pointed out the conflict with State taxes in this field, the already wide Federal use of excises and the limited revenue unless necessities were taxed.

Other Possibilities

Other tax hints thrown out in the President's message included: Income taxes collected at the source, two billion dollars in payroll taxes to carry an expanded social security program and implement Treasury borrowings, lowered estate and gift tax exemptions, taxation of State and local bond issues and revision of excess profits taxes.

In line with his general outline, House tax experts expected the Treasury to resubmit in some form its recent proposal for a 15 per cent withholding tax on income in excess of personal exemptions, for possible collection monthly during 1942.

A fight appeared in prospect both on this plan and on any effort to revive the Treasury's twice-rejected invested capital method of excess profits taxation.

Some members said that if a withholding tax were invoked, they would urge that the Treasury issue bonds to the taxpayers for part of it.

Several Have Own Proposals

In line with Chairman Doughton's assertions that the committee will write its own bill, several members will present individual proposals. Representative Boehne will ruge revival of the committee's 1941 plan for compulsory joint returns. Representative Knutson said he would ask raising of at least part of the revenue by the national lottery method and Federal collection of all taxes, with each State's share remitted to it by the Federal Government.

The two billion dollars proposed by the President in added social security taxes, it was suggested, might be raised principally by advancing the January 1, 1943, automatic increase in payroll taxes for old age and survivor insurance. The tax is now 1 per cent each on employer and employe, but scheduled to go to 2 per cent each on the next year. On the basis of [illegible] yields this would raise about $1,000,000,000. Another 650 million dollars might be added by reviving the Treasury plan to swell unemployment-compensation revenues by adding a 1 per cent tax on employes to the 3 per cent tax now entirely borne by the employer.

only a cruiser and a destroyer being sunk in the first action. Wake's toll of enemy war vessels thus adds up to seven—a cruiser, four destroyers, a gunboat and submarine.

Maj. Bayler brought back a report from Maj. Paul A. Putnam, commander of Wake's air fighters, which told of aerial operations up to December 20. This told of how the little squadron, its strength reduced from 12 to 4 planes in the first bombing raid, managed to keep planes in the air by literally building them out of the wreckage of others.

Since the first raid, Putnam reported, "parts and assemblies have been traded back and forth so that no airplane can be identified. Engines have been traded from plane to plane, have been junked, stripped, rebuilt and all but created."

Maj. Putnam gives credit in this connection to First Lieut. John F. Kinney and Technical Sergt. William J. Hamilton.

Praising the men of his command, Putnam said:

"All hands have behaved splendidly and held up in a manner of which the Marine Corps may well tell. I have no report to make regarding any officer or man being outstanding in bravery or fortitude; they have all acquitted themselves with equal distinction.

"On the other hand, I particularly wish to comment on the indefatigable labor and ingenuity, skill and technical knowledge of Lieut. Kinney and Technical Sergt. Hamilton. It is solely due to their effort that the squadron is still operating."

The text of the communique:

Navy Communique No. 25

Far East: The commanding officer of a U. S. submarine of the Asiatic Fleet has reported the sinking of an enemy transport. In addition this vessel succeeded in sinking three enemy cargo vessels, each estimated to be of 10,000 tons displacement.

Central Pacific: The defense of Wake Island by United States Marines has been cited by the President of the United States as follows:

The White House
Washington
January 5, 1942
Citation by
of

The Wake detachment of the First Defense Battalion, U. S. Marine Corps, under command of Maj. James P. S. Devereux, U. S. Marines

Marine Fighting Squadron 211 of Marine Aircraft Group 21, under command of Maj. Paul A. Putnam, U. S. Marines

"The courageous conduct of the officers and men of these units, who defended Wake Island against an overwhelming superiority of enemy air, sea and land attacks from December 8 to 22, 1941, has been noted with admiration by their fellow countrymen and the civilized world, and will not be forgotten so long as gallantry and heroism are respected and honored. These units are commended for their devotion to duty and splendid conduct at their battle stations under most adverse conditions. With limited defensive means against attacks in great force, they manned their shore installations and flew their aircraft so well that five enemy warships were either sunk or severely damaged, many hostile planes shot down, and an unknown number of land troops destroyed."

Wake: An increase of two Japanese warships—a destroyer and a gunboat—over the originally reported cruiser, submarine and three destroyers that the Japs lost in the attack on Wake Island, was indicated in two reports to Marine Corps headquarters, received from the Pacific area.

These reports were sent from Wake Island by a patrol plane. One, written on December 20, is from Maj. Paul A. Putnam, commanding aviation on Wake. The other is a day-by-day account of Marine aviation's participation in the Battle of Wake Island up to December 20 by Maj. W. Bayler.

The day-by-day record of the battle, though not an official report, is Maj. Bayler's account of what Marine aviation and Maj. Devereux's men did.

Maj. Bayler's report has but little reference to the Marines on the isle besides the aviation group, but one brief note—"Japs closed into 4700 yards before 5 and 3-inch guns opened up at point-blank range"—indicates a cool courage on the part of Devereux's men that ranks with the classic "whites of their eyes" line of Bunker Hill, in the opinion of ranking officers at Marine Corps headquarters.

Added to the two Japanese destroyers which were lost in the final phase of the battle of December 22, the new information received brings Japanese losses in taking the Island of Wake up to a total of seven warships—one cruiser, four destroyers, one submarine and one gunboat.

Maj. Bayler was on temporary duty in Wake in connection with the establishment of a base of operations for the Marine Corps Aviation unit. This unit composed of 12 planes, with pilots, 49 ground personnel, arrived shortly before the outbreak of hostilities. Following is a copy of the penciled notes the major made from the records kept by him and sent to the Commander in Chief, United States Pacific Fleet. He was present at Wake until December 20.

First Raid Casualties Heavy

Synopsis of events (Wake local time) December 8-20:

December 8, 7 a. m.—Received word bombing Oahu. General quarters station. 11:58 a. m.—Twenty-four Jap bombers on a northern course hit airdrome in close column of division "Vs" from 3000 feet. One-hundred pound fragmentation bombs and simultaneous strafing. Casualties, 25 dead; 7 wounded, 7 airplanes burned, destroyed.

December 9, 11:45 a. m.—Twenty-seven Japs. Bombed hospital, Camp No. 2. Killed several patients. 3 dead. Got one Jap plane.

December 10, 10:45 a. m.—Twenty-seven Jap bombers. No casualties.

December 11, 5 a. m.—Landing attempt by 12 Jap ships, including light cruisers, destroyers, gunboats, 2 troop or supply ships. Jap casualties: One light cruiser, 2 destroyers, 1 gunboat, 2 bombers.

Note: That Japs closed into 4700 yards before 5 and 3-inch guns opened up at point-blank range.

December 12—27 Jap planes bombed Peale and Wake from 22,000 feet. No casualties.

December 13—All quiet.

Raid by 4-Engine Planes

December 15, 11 a. m.—Dawn raid by three four-engined seaplanes. 27 Jap bombers. Shot down two Japs.

December 16, 5:45 p. m.—41 Jap bombers hit Camp Two and airdrome. Jap four-motor plane raid. One Jap shot down.

December 17—32 Jap bombers at 1317 hit Camp 1, Peale Island, Diesel oil supply, mess hall and pumps of evaporators, Camp 1.

December 18, 11:40 a. m.—One Jap high rec. plane (two-engine) (photo?).

December 19, 10:30 a. m.—Jap bombers hit airport and camp.

December 20—All quiet, first day of bad weather.

Total casualties: 28 dead, 6 wounded as of December 20 from VMF-211.

Notes: (1) Jap bombers of Dornier type, two-engine, twin tail, 160 knots. (2) Attack formations always in form of line of division V's in close formation. Excellent air discipline. (3) Nine sure Jap bombers shot down; three more possibly. One four-engine P boat, one CL, two DD, one gunboat.

Putnam's Report in Detail

Maj. Putnam's report of operations to his commanding officer in Pearl Harbor goes into more detail on the efforts of the tiny aviation complement to keep the planes that were left after the first attack in the air against each new attack.

Of the original aviation force of 12 officers and 49 enlisted men, 19 enlisted men and 8 officers were still on duty by December 20. Of these, four enlisted men and two officers were wounded but still on duty. One officer and six enlisted men were in the hospital and "doing nicely." The remainder, three officers and 34 men, were dead.

The letter relates that four planes were in the air against the Japs at the time of the first raid. The other eight were on the ground being serviced between flights, and of these seven were destroyed and one was slightly damaged. One of the planes that was in the air later taxied into debris on the field—the wreckage of the first raid—and bent its propeller.

The Marine fighters, up to December 20, had made contact with the enemy seven times, had shot down five Japs in flames, four more had "been claimed by pilots but not verified and several are known to have been damaged. Of the four claimed one was a four-engined sea plane."

Land Guns Effective

Discussing the surface attack of December 11, Putnam reported "four airplanes (Marine planes) made a total of ten attacks, operating in a greatly overloaded condition and performing splendidly . . . We claim the sinking of one ship and serious damage to another." The guns of Devereux's force evidently accounted for the remainder of the ships reported destroyed in Maj. Bayler's synopsis. In the attack on December 11, one plane was lost, "a washout on the rocky beach."

After the attack on December 14, which saw two Marine planes destroyed, "one plane on the ground by enemy action and one crashed on the takeoff" the Marines had "only two operating airplanes, one of which gives constant trouble so that two planes in the air at one time is the exception rather than the rule." At one time only one serviceable plane was left to Maj. Putnam's squadron, but the mechanics and ground crews evidently made an additional plane, or even planes out of the wreckage of the remainder.

Lauding the work of the ground crews at Wake, Maj. Putnam wrote "since that time (the first raid) parts and assemblies have been traded back and forth so that no airplane can be identified. Engines have been traded from plane to plane, have been junked, stripped, rebuilt, and all but created."

Continuing his praise for the men under him, Maj. Putnam wrote "all hands have behaved splendidly and held up in a manner of which the Marine Corps may well tell. I have no report to make regarding any officer or man being outstanding in bravery or fortitude; they have all acquitted themselves with equal distinction. On the other hand, I particularly wish to comment on the indefatigable labor, and ingenuity, skill and technical knowledge of Lieut. Kinney and Technical Sergt. Hamilton. It is solely due to their efforts that the squadron is still operating."

Living Conditions Fira

Discussing the living conditions on the airdrome as they were on December 20, Maj. Putnam said: "Personnel are living in dugouts made by the contractor's men and equipment. Not comfortable, but adequate against all but direct bomb hits. Feeding is from the contractor's galley, a truck making the rounds with hot food twice daily. Sanitation is only fair, but so far have had only a mild flurry of diarrhea. Fresh water is adequate for drinking, but salt water is used for all other purposes."

The tone of the entire report indicates no particular anxiety on the part of the air group at Wake. They were there under orders with a job to do. They were doing the job and would continue to do it until circumstances beyond their control forced them to discontinue their efforts. They had kept those circumstances under control for almost two weeks and they would continue to do so.

At no time during the siege were more than four Marine planes in operation, Putnam reported, but the verified total that these planes took of the Japanese was one ship, one submarine and five Jap planes.

There is nothing to report from other areas.

Wake Sergeant May Receive Lieutenancy

One of the two marines selected for special mention in President Roosevelt's citation of Wake Island's defenders has been promoted since the island fell to an overwhelming force of Japanese December 14. Another, an enlisted man, is before a selection board for promotion to first lieutenant.

First Lieut. John Franklin Kinney, who was promoted to that rank from second lieutenant January 2, was jointly named with Technical Sergt. William James Hamilton for "ingenuity, skill and technical knowledge" in patching, repairing and "creating" airplanes during the fight on Wake. "It is solely due to their efforts," said the commander, "that the squadron is still operating."

Lieut. Kinney was born at Endicott, Wash., November 1, 1914, and began flight training at Pensacola in August, 1938. A year later he was commissioned a second lieutenant in the Marine Corps and, after attending basic school at Philadelphia, was assigned to Marine Bombing Squadron 2, Fleet Marine Force, at San Diego. He served as assistant squadron material officer and assistant squadron flight officer at San Diego and aboard the carriers Saratoga and Lexington.

Sergt. Hamilton, whose name is now before a board of promotion to first lieutenant, was born June 5, 1912, at Altoona, Pa., and studied mechanics at high school there. After two enlistments in the Army Air Corps, he enlisted in the Marine Corps March 4, 1938, and a year later began training at Pensacola, being designated naval aviation pilot June 15, 1937.

Maj. Walter L. J. Bayler, who flew the aviation commander's report from Wake, was born in 1909 at Lebanon, Pa., and was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1937. After a year of Marine Corps basic school and primary aviation training, he served a year in Nicaragua as a line company officer. He returned to the United States in 1939, winning his wings in 1930 and attending postgraduate school at Annapolis after service with an aircraft squadron at Quantico, Va. He was promoted to first lieutenant in 1934 and was sent to the Harvard Post Graduate School for training in communication engineering.

2 Fear Britain Will Be U. S. Outpost

By the Associated Press

London, Jan. 8.—Fear that the British Isles might become an American outpost was openly expressed today by two members of Commons in commenting on results of the Washington conferences.

Laborite Richard Rapier Stokes said: "I hate to think of the military center of control shifting to Washington. It gives me a nasty feeling—I have had it for many months—indeed I might say for years—that we may find ourselves reduced to what I term occupying the position of America's Helgoland off the coast of Europe."

Edgar Louis Granville, Liberal, said:

"We may have to choose between whether this island shall be a Western outpost of totalitarian Europe or the Eastern outpost of an American-controlled civilization."

U. S. Navy Criticized

The United States' preparedness for the war in the Pacific also came in for criticism.

After remarking that American vessels were "surprised" by the Japanese attack when "they ought to have been on the other side of the Pacific in Singapore," Sir George Jeffreys said:

"With regard to the proposal that the commander of the American Fleet should be the commander of our fleet in the Far East, the American Fleet has not begun this war well and American personnel has no experience of modern war whatever. It took no part in any fighting in the last war.

"I doubt whether British seamen will like serving under a foreign command."

Southby Also Comments

The first comment along this line had come from Commander Sir Archibald Southby, Conservative, who said that Russian and African successes do not offset the loss of Guam and other islands to Japan.

"It might have been better," Southby said, "if the United States had augmented the defense of those vitally important places rather than expend time and material in creation of the bases which we have leased to them in the West Indies and Newfoundland."

Stokes Rebuked Last Spring in Commons

Stokes, frequently a critic of the government's actions, was rebuked in Commons last spring for asking a secret debate on the British-United States destroyer-naval base exchange.

Commander Southby also wanted such a secret debate.

Granville had urged the creation of an Allied war command, a British-American united naval command, and a British-American supply council.

Gen. Jeffreys, an old army man, had questioned the government's policy last spring in withholding Lord Gort's dispatches on the Flanders campaign.

Eden and Attlee Lay Setback in Malaya To Aid Sent to Reds

By the Associated Press

London, Jan. 8.—Commons, critical and uneasy over Allied setbacks by the Japanese, was told today by Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden that the most formidable Axis partner, Germany, was suffering reverses "far more remarkable" than those the Russians inflicted on Napoleon's army in 1812.

Maj. Clement R. Attlee, lord privy seal substituting for Prime Minister Churchill, also pointed to British victories in Africa to soothe a House concerned over Japanese strides toward Singapore.

As for the yielding defense lines in Malaya, Eden said the government assumed full responsibility. But he rejected suggestions that the government had been derelict there.

"If we were wrong," he declared, "it was a deliberate decision, and not one based on neglect."

Assurances Cheered

Cheers greeted Attlee's statement that the United States' entry into the war clinched its ultimate outcome "without a shadow of a doubt."

Attlee and Eden justified the thinness of Malayan defenses because of the asserted need for concentrating strong British forces in Africa and the Near East, and the speeding of equipment to Russia.

The dispatch of British troops to Greece last spring, Eden declared, was not a "sentimental" decision. That move, coupled with the uprising in Yugoslavia against Germany, delayed the German attack on Russia for six weeks, he added amid cheers.

Discussing his recent Moscow conference with Soviet leaders, Eden took an opportunity to assure nonbelligerent Turkey that both Britain and Russia wanted to see that country "strong and prosperous."

To suggestions that the dominions should be represented in the imperial War Council, Eden said Canada and New Zealand had expressed themselves as satisfied with present arrangements.

"A different view has been taken by Australia," he admitted.

While Attlee and Eden were facing a barrage of criticism in Commons, Lord Moyne, colonial secretary and government spokesman, was receiving the same treatment in the House of Lords.

Labor Party Leader Lord Addison declared that Air Chief Marshal Sir Robert Brooke-Popham, recently replaced commander in the Far East, was a "nincompoop."

Lord Moyne acknowledged that British and American naval reverses had tipped the sea-power balance in Japan's favor temporarily, but declared "prompt measures are being taken to counter her initial advantage."

He said there was no foundation in a report that Japan already was getting oil from the destroyed wells in North Borneo.

Malayan defenders, he said, had been instructed to carry out the same "scorched earth" policy regarding oil, rubber, copra, and metal stocks which might fall into Japanese hands.

Rommel's Forces Retreating Through Sandstorm in the Mud

By the Associated Press

Cairo, Jan. 8.—Gen. Erwin Rommel's African corps was making a getaway tonight from the Agedabia area of Libya, favored by an unusual combination of mud that hampered flank attacks and a swirling sandstorm that half blinded his pursuers.

Further complicating the running battle British imperials fought with Rommel's rear guard were mines which Rommel's sappers laid in road and other inviting terrain.

Nevertheless, according to today's communique from British general headquarters, the Coldstream Guards and the Scots Guards, battle-honored regiments of the British, established contact yesterday afternoon with the enemy's rear guard about 7 miles southwest of Agedabia.

Farther south a flanking operation was attempted simultaneously by the King's Dragoon Guards and a South African armored force, but while this carried the offensive 20 to 40 miles deeper into territory previously held by the Axis, it still left Rommel's flank intact.

General headquarters disclosed the Rommel Agedabia getaway thus:

"Taking advantage of a heavy sandstorm which continues severely to restrict visibility, the enemy is withdrawing from Agedabia, covered by strong rearguards."

But the storm, whipping sand through the narrow apertures of British tanks and armored cars—thus literally hurling an abrasive into the works of mechanized warfare—was only part of the weather difficulties facing the British efforts to force Rommel to stand and give battle.

There also was intermittent rain, which cut through the dust-laden skies along the Gulf of Sirte, turned the soft shoulders of the coastal roads into quagmires and softened the sandy earth afield.

The combination of mud and low visibility, a British commentator conceded, offered Rommel an "unusually good opportunity of getting away," not merely from the Agedabia area, but well on his way along the Gulf of Sirte toward Tripoli.

This informant said that only one road offered the footing for rapid travel westward and that tanks and trucks promptly bogged down when they left it.

"If the ground were firm it would be difficult for Rommel to get away because our tanks are faster than his and could have gone cross-country to head him off."

2000 More Retreating Japs Lost as Chinese Press Drive

By Spencer Moosa
Associated Press Staff Writer

Chungking (Friday), Jan. 9.—China's Central News Agency reported today that the Chinese had killed or wounded 2000 more Japanese Thursday in their methodical campaign of annihilation against the 30,000 invaders trapped between the Laotao and Milo Rivers in northern Hunan province.

Chinese spokesman previously had reported the Japanese suffered more than 35,000 casualties since the smashing of their assault on Changsha last Sunday.

As the Japanese, who originally numbered 100,000 to 150,000 by Chinese estimates, sought to fall back to their Yochow base 100 miles to the north, strong Chinese land forces aided by planes trapped 30,000 of them in the area between the two rain-swollen rivers.

Chinese army spokesman said that several thousand additional Japanese who sallied out from Yochow on a relief expedition had been intercepted and engaged by the Chinese.

"Scattered groups of enemy remnants that succeeded in crossing the Laotao River on Tuesday afternoon, braving a heavy rainstorm, are being subjected to violent Chinese attack," a Chinese communique said.

The Chinese reported capture of huge quatitie of materiel.

The communique reported that 3,500 Japanese had been killed or wounded in the past two weeks of operations on the eastern Chekiang Front, south of Shanghai. Frequent Japanese attacks from Ningpo, Yuyao and Hsanfyu were acknowledged but were said to have been turned back by the Chinese in their mountain positions.

Chinese planes, which have made few offensive moves in the war, attacked Japanese troops and supplies and caused extensive military damage in their first operation over the Hunan Front, authoritative sources said. One plane was reported missing.

jury, O'Connor demanded that he be given a copy of everything Hill had said. Special Prosecutor William Power Maloney said it was his duty to require O'Connor to promise that the testimony would not be shown to Viereck, who will soon be tried under the Foreign Agents Registration Act, or to Viereck's lawyer, who has been in court taking notes furiously since the Hill trial started.

O'Connor's voice mounted to a roar as he asserted that neither he or Hill had anything to do with Viereck.

"I know the viciousness intended by that suggestion was made and I resent it," shouted O'Connor. "I don't know Viereck. I don't know his lawyer. I haven't anything to do with them . . ."

"In that case, you can certainly give the assurance," interrupted Justice F. Dickinson Letts, presiding.

"It was not asked in good faith," O'Connor continued. "Of course, I am an officer of the court and I would not permit an unauthorized person to see the record."

18 Mailbags Brought In

"Well, you'll have to give the assurance," Justice Letts ruled.

Cross-examining Mrs. Henry Gratian Doyle, Board of Education president and secretary of the special grand jury, O'Connor paused yesterday to demand that the mailbags be brought into the court room. The trial stopped while officials dragged in 18 bags which were found of the 20 hauled away from the headquarters of Prescott Dennett, a few hours after Dennett was summoned by the grand jury.

Dipping into one of the bags, O'Connor pulled out an unaddressed envelope, which contained an extract from the Congressional Record entitled, "England Expects Every American to Do His Duty." This was put in the record by Senator D. Worth Clark (Democrat), of Idaho, reprinted—to the tune of 85,000 copies—on Hill's order and mailed, postage free, by Dennett.

A few minutes later, Special Prosecutors Maloney and Edward J. Hickey, jr., dug into the bags for several more of the propaganda items, which they placed in evidence and read to the jury.

As the day wore on, the mailbags, piled high in front of the press table, appeared to become displeasing to O'Connor. Finally he kicked one, mumbled something disapproving about "mailbags," hefted one bag high in the air and slammed it down hard on top of the pile.

John S. Gorrell, telephone company engineer and foreman of the special grand jury, testified that the jurors set out to uncover the financing and the operations of the German propaganda machine in this country.

The trail led to Capitol Hill, Gorrell said, when the jurors received evidence that Viereck wrote speeches and other material for Representatives and Senator got this and other propaganda placed in the Congressional Record then obtained reprints and had them mailed under Congressional frank.

Gorrell said the evidence also showed that Viereck controlled and financed Flanders Hall, Inc., pro-Nazi publishers, for whom Dennet was a press agent.

Ledger Sheets to Be Offered

Refreshing his memory from huge ledger sheets prepared for the Department of Justice propaganda squad, Gorrell said there was evidence that Hill ordered and paid for reprints on anti-interventionist material which was mailed under the franks of Senators Gerald Nye (Republican), of North Dakota; La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin; Brooks (Republican), of Illinois, and Clark (Democrat), of Idaho.

Prosecutor Maloney said the ledger sheets themselves, showing purchase of more than half a million propaganda items by Hill, would be placed in evidence today. The purchases include the franks of more than a score of Senators and Representatives, whose franks were found in Dennett's place. Nearly all said they had no idea how he got them.

Gorrell confirmed Mrs. Doyle's testimony that Viereck himself revealed his acquaintance with Hill but would not tell their business because he thought it was incriminating. Viereck is expected to repeat this on the stand today.

As this evidence piled up, O'Connor fought every statement, running the total of his objections into the hundreds. Almost as many times Justice Letts overruled him and allowed the trial to proceed.

Testifying as the day ended was Lawrence LaCharity, official stenographer. He read the record of Hill's denials which the grand jurors found were false.

After Justice Letts went to his chambers, the prosecutors gave O'Connor the Hill testimony he had demanded. Then he asked for the transcript of all Dennett said in the eight days he testified. Maloney refused and O'Connor shouted that this was an outrage.

"You say this testimony belongs to the Government," the lawyer declaimed to the score of lawyers, newspapermen, witnesses and two charwomen who were in the courtroom. "And who is the Government. We pay your salary . . ."

Prosecutor Hickey interposed dryly: "We paid your salary for a long time up on the Hill, Mr. O'Connor."

The defense lawyer, once a Democratic Congressman from New York and later vice chairman of an anti-interventionist committee gotten up by Fish, was defeated in the 1938 primaries. President Roosevelt had urged his defeat.

Nazi With Radio And Camera Was Cook for Army

New York, Jan. 8 (AP).—A dive bomber and a light tank might have been slightly more surprising discoveries, but a shortwave radio and a camera found in the quarters of a German cook in the Officers Club at Governors Island, headquarters of the First U. S. Army, were enough to keep the man in the custody of the FBI tonight.

Samuel Foxworth, FBI agent, said that a man identified as Edward Oscar Karl Koenig, 39, a native of Essen, Germany, was seized yesterday and was held temporarily as an enemy agent, subject to internment.

The man, Foxworth said, entered the United States illegally at Houston, Tex., in 1923, and in some manner obtained employment at the important Army post where he has been working for several months.

Koenig, the FBI agent said, did not comply with the recent Federal order for all enemy aliens to turn in their radios and cameras.

Eastman Warns Of Truck Shortage

Potent Stuff

Distilleries Will Make Explosives

Emphasizes Need For Transportation To Aid War Effort

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

Joseph B. Eastman, newly appointed director of defense transportation, yesterday warned of a "rather serious danger" of depletion of the Nation's transportation resources and admitted the possibility of future rationing of freight-carrying facilities.

Speaking at his first press conference since his appointment, Eastman also revealed that the manufacture of all trucks for civilian purposes will probably be discontinued after next March.

Eastman said that the greatest danger now foreseen is a threat that the carriers, particularly automotive, may not be able to get the materials for adequate expansion to meet the heavy war production load or even for the mantenance and repair of present equipment.

Grave Depletion Forecast

"In time, and not so long a time either," he said, "this may lead to grave depletion of our transport resources . . . If transportation should bog down, it will be reflected immediately in our war effort."

Asked about eventually having to ration freight traffic by some sort of a preference system, Eastman said he hoped the time would not come when this would be necessary and that it has not been called for up to date.

He inferred, however, he would take all steps necessary to keep transportation flowing to war production.

At the OPM, officials confirmed the possibility that no trucks for civilian use would be made by the auto industry after March. They explained that beginning in that month the load of orders for Army and Navy trucks would be so heavy that there would be no additional manufacturing capacity available to make other trucks.

Higher Quotas Set

In part of the intervening time, however, the OPM announced, production of heavy and medium motor trucks may be lifted to a rate about 15 per cent higher than that prevailing last year. Passenger carrier production, it was added, may be boosted to 138 per cent of levels in February, 1941.

The ceilings set were 53,435 heavy trucks in February, as against 46,248 in February last year, and 1,048 passenger carriers as against about 450 in February a year ago.

Meantime, from another Government source, came a warning of impeding transportation strictions. Interior Secretary Ickes told a press conference that coal consumers without adequate stocks might find themselves in a "precarious position" when the full force of the war program breaks upon the Nation.

Although he said he did not foresee an immediate prospect of a coal shortage, Ickes warned of transportation difficulties "in view of the tremendous war program now gathering momentum."

Ickes denied prospects of immediate gasoline rationing but suggested, however, that great savings in motor fuel and tires were possible through the setting of a national speed limit of 40 miles per hour. He announced that such a limit was being established at once in all the national parks under Interior Department jurisdiction.

Ickes explained that the rubber shortage would in itself obviate the need for gasoline rationing. His aides have estimated that the tire rationing will result in a 35 per cent reduction of civilian gasoline consumption in 1942.

Welles Leaves For Rio Meeting

diplomatic relations with the Axis, and all have announced various forms of cooperation with the United States.

Hull said yesterday he considered the prospects for the Rio conference very pleasing and encouraging because of the spirit of solidarity and the spirit of cooperative effort to protect the peace and safety of this hemisphere.

One of the chief purposes of the conference, he said, is to provide a full interchange of information on the dangers threatening the Americas, with a view to bringing about greater cohesion in the countermeasures to be adopted. He pointed out that the conference has a definite agenda of defense measures coming up for decision, including steps to suppress Axis fifth column activities throughout the hemisphere.

The conference is certain to receive a resolution calling for unanimous severance of diplomatic relations with the Axis. The Dominican Republic has announced it will call for unanimous war declarations.

There was no comment in official quarters here yesterday on the prospects of success for such resolutions, but there was a general expectation that important advances in hemispheric unity will be achieved at Rio, particularly in the sphere of wartime economic cooperation.

Hull yesterday declined comment on a recent statement by Argentine Foreign Minister Enrique Ruiz Guinazu that Argentina could not agree to any military alliances or "measure of prebelligerency."

United States delegates to the Rio conference include Undersecretary of Commerce Wayne C. Taylor, Warren Lee Pierson, president of the Export-Import Bank; Harry D. White, assistant to the Secretary of the Treasury, and representatives of the State, Agriculture and Justice Departments and the Maritime Commission.

As the delegation left for Rio yesterday the declaration of Havana, adopted at the last conference of foreign ministers, went into force with formal ratification by Honduras, fourteenth of the Latin-American republics to approve the document.

The declaration, formulated in July, 1940, provides for a joint mandate by the American republics over any European possession in this hemisphere threatened with a shift in sovereignty from one non-American state to another.

Vatican Expresses Interest in Meeting

Vatican City, Jan. 8 (Andi Agency to AP).—Vatican City officials, expressing "great interest" in the forthcoming Pan-American conference at Rio de Janeiro, said today it was the Holy See's wish that "a just and lasting peace will return to the world and that the war does not spread farther."

"It can well be imagined what the Holy See's wishes are in connection with a conference one of whose main tasks is an examination of the new order on which the Pope gave his ideas and directives in a Christmas message to the world," it was stated.

WHAT YOU SHOULD KNOW ABOUT FACE PIMPLES

These disfiguring spots affecting the outer or surface layer of the skin often result from a temporary, minor disturbance, or from incorrect cleansing.

You can relieve the itchy, burning soreness and thereby help your skin by using an ointment whose medication stays in active contact with the pimply spots. Apply it every night and leave it on all night. It does a world of good.

For 45 years people have used Resinol Ointment to fill this need. It soothes the irritated oil ducts where many surface pimples start, and so aids healing. Carefully cleansing the skin with Resinol Soap helps to quicken the pleasing results. Its gently active lather is refreshing and it rinses easily.

Buy a jar of Resinol Ointment and cake of Resinol Soap from any druggist. For free sample, write Resinol, Dept. 10, Baltimore, Md.

Sevastopol Siege Broken, Germans Falling Back

these troops were to some degree equipped with captured Nazi arms.

("The Russians," these informants said, "still have untouched reserves of man power which are now being tapped as fast as they can be armed. The Red army (of the center) is now largely powered by troops trained in the six months since the start of the war, and this training is going on at a rate that more than makes up for battle losses.]

During yesterday's fighting to the north of Sevastopol, the military spokesman continued, Soviet forces which landed on Eupatoria early this week finally succeeded in joining up with others pushing northward from Sevastopol. The Russians now hold a continuous line from Eupatoria to Kemal Agerek around the coastline, which at points is more than 20 kilometers deep.

Germans Resist Fiercely

The Germans are putting up a fierce resistance, particularly in the north, where fresh arrivals of reinforcements have been thrown in in waves in an attempt to halt the Russian drive—so far without success, according to the spokesman.

On the eastern end of the peninsula, where the Germans have been driven out of the Kerch arm, Soviet infantry was reported to have continued to drive in an easterly direction along the northern coast road after taking the town of Islam Terek. Some isolated nests of resistance remaining in the heights on the center of Kerch were cleaned out after brief battles during the early morning yesterday, the spokesman added, stating that four separate counterattacks launched by the Germans had been beaten back with tremendous losses to new positions each time.

In a special report fromm the Kharkov front a Pravda correspondent stated that Russian forces had entered the town from the northeast shortly after noon yesterday. Their advance, it appears, was so rapid in its final stages that on breaking through the last line of defense into the town itself they were able to seize a staff headquarters, capturing one general and ten high-staff officers, who were removing papers and maps in preparation for flight. The correspondent did not mention the nationality of the officers.

Attack on Finnish Front

North of Kharkov, at Kursk, it appears that heavy fighting is in progress midway between Tim and Kursh, where the Germans appear to be carrying out one of their few really authentic strategic withdrawals, fighting extremely bitter rearguard actions all the way. The spokesman admitted that Russian losses in this area had been extremely heavy during the last three days.

On the Finnish front simultaneous attacks have been launched at four points against the Finnish lines—apparently with some success. The Helsinki communique admitted that fierce fighting was in progress northeast of Lake Onega and that the Russians were throwing in increasing numbers of troops in this area in an apparent all-out drive to break the Finnish lines.

Finnish aerial reconnaissance, according to Helsinki reports, also showed large-scale preparations for a heavy offensive against the outer islands of Hogland, while on the Svir front Russian mechanized drives had broken the Finnish lines at several fronts.

It was after a concerted onslaught with tremendous effectiveness from several points at once that the Finns accepted peace from the Russians in 1940. This morning's "blitz," in view of the numbers and material involved, led many observers to believe that there may be another "power politic" peace offensive under way and that the Finns may have to give in.

British Retreat Again in Malaya

and bridges in Perak Province to the north.]

Infiltration in force behind the Perak-Bernam-Slim line would pose a direct threat to Kuala Lumpur and to the rear of the city's defenders. Japanese troopers, worming through the concealing jungle foliage along the coast, or troops freshly landed along the Selangor shore, or both, may compose the infiltration force.

"Otherwise," said the communique, "the situation (on the Western Malayan Front) remains unchanged."

The Japanese undoubtedly regard Kula Lumpur as a prime objective, second only to Singapore itself. There have been heavy Japanese air bombardments of the Port Swettenham area, about 30 miles southwest of Kuala Lumpur.

Port Swettenham is the port for Kuala Lumpur and the tangle of waterways thereabouts make it a tempting spot for encroachment by water.

(Well-informed London sources gravely agreed that the ultimate fate of Singapore may be determined about Kuala Lumpur, a key railway center on the coastal side of a Malaya's mountainous backbone.)

Nazi Influence Still in Industry, Arnold Says

By the Associated Press

Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold told a Congressional committee yesterday that German influence still was affecting production of critical war material in some instances in this country, but said that it had been nearly wiped out since the United States entered the war.

"A certain amount of it is still going on sub-rosa," he said, "but as far as the great American companies are concerned, it has stopped."

Arnold told a House Military Affairs subcommittee that production of nearly every essential war material was held down before the war by cartel agreements between domestic and foreign corporations.

He emphasized, however, that he was making no charge of lack of patriotism or accusation of an attempt "to disarm America" on the part of this Nation's industry, and said the agreements were motivated by an attempt to boost and control prices through monopolies by creating shortages.

He said that Germany utilized and violated the antiproductive cartel arrangements to get ready for war.

"We must guard against recurrences of these agreements after the war," he cautioned.

Arnold, who handles the Government's antitrust cases, said that business had cooperated in the war effort "as a whole," but added that there were bound to be some attempts at profiteering.

"We had an industry dominated by cartels before the war," Arnold declared. "Indictments must go on to make that sort of thing hazardous."

Reluctant, he said, to single out any particular company, Arnold cited the cartel arrangement by the Aluminum Co. of America to control production of that metal, vital to the manufacture of planes.

Through that arrangement, he said, the American firm and the industry in Britain, Germany, Canada, France and Switzerland divided the world into markets and decided how much aluminum would be produced on a percentage basis.

He stressed again that the Aluminum Co. was not alone in participating in cartels, and that he was not charging it with unpatriotic motives.

Arnold expressed emphatically his belief that the "answer to these monopolies is full production."

Asked if rubber cartels had affected this country's supply, he said:

"I would be very glad to go into that in executive session." He will resume his testimony in executive session Monday.

'Canceled' War Stamps Put on Roosevelt Note

Louisa, Va., Jan. 8.—The Louisa Volunteer Fire Company, composed of 30 members has written a letter to President Roosevelt expressing the willingness of the company to aid in the defense of America, on the back of the letter each of the members placed a canceled 25-cent defense stamp, with their names and addresses written over the stamps, as a token of their help.

A WAR MESSAGE FROM THE TREASURY DEPARTMENT

IT'S YOUR MOVE NOW

The More Bonds You Buy . . . The More Planes Will Fly

Where to Buy Your Bonds and Stamps— At the G Street Branch, United States Post Office, Woodward & Lothrop, First Floor, under the Balcony—or at your Bank, Post Office, Building and Loan Association or other Defense Bond Agencies.

This Axis War upon us is a matter of life or death for America, your free America. Now, as never before in all our glorious history, our Army, Navy and Marine Corps urgently need planes, tanks, ships and guns.

Literally billions of dollars are needed immediately to produce these and other weapons of defense . . . of offense . . . and of Victory. They must be produced now. The money must be secured now. Let's do it the voluntary way, the American Way, the Defense Bond way.

If we are to drive the enemy from our shores, smash him out of our seas and blast him from the air, every dollar you can spare, every dime that is not absolutely required for the necessities of food, clothing and shelter should be, yes, must be, loaned to your Government.

WE MUST ACT NOW. Start getting your share of United States Defense Bonds and Stamps today. Get them regularly, day after day, week after week. If you have already bought a Bond, now is the time to get more.

Remember, every Bond you buy is a blow at the military maniacs attacking us—that every dollar you invest will come back to you with interest on that brighter, happier day when Victory is ours, and there is peace again throughout the world.

FACTS ABOUT DEFENSE BONDS—(SERIES E)

How Much Do They Cost?	Upon Maturity You Get Back
$18.75	$25.00
$37.50	$50.00
$75.00	$100.00
$375.00	$500.00
$750.00	$1,000.00

When is maturity? Ten years from the time you buy the Bond. If you need the money before then, you can cash the bonds at any time after 60 days from their issue date. A table of cash-in values is printed on each Bond. Naturally, the longer you hold the Bond, up to 10 years, the more money you'll get back. But you'll never get less than you put in.

What's the interest rate? When held to maturity, the Bonds yield 2.9% per year on your investment, compounded semi-annually—you get $4 for every $3.

What about Defense Stamps? Buying Defense Stamps is a convenient way of saving money with which to buy a real Defense Bond. Stamps are sold for as little as 10c.

When should I buy a Bond? Start now; buy regularly. If your company has a Defense Savings Pay-Roll Allotment Plan, take advantage of it NOW. INVEST IN SAFETY—WITH PERFECT SAFETY.

Remember—You can start buying Defense Bonds by buying Defense Stamps for as little as . . . 10¢

10 cents in Defense Stamps buys 5 cartridges.

$1.50 in Defense Stamps buys a first-aid kit.

$2.00 in Defense Stamps buys a good warm blanket.

at same time run New York City and the OCD, the House voted on a roll call, 187 to 168, to turn the money over for administration by the Secretary of War.

A few minutes later, however, the record vote was 178 to 179 against an amendment proposed by Representative Faddis (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, a member of the committee. The amendment would authorize the President to appoint, with consent of the Senate, an Assistant Secretary of War for civilian defense at a $10,000 yearly salary.

Finally, the entire bill, as amended, was accepted on a voice vote. The Senate bill neither puts a specific limit on the amount of money OCD would be able to spend, nor strips LaGuardia of his job by putting it in the War Department. Differences between the two Houses must be straightened out in conference, and observers last night predicted that conferees would substantially report the Senate bill and that the report would be accepted by the House.

At one juncture in the proceedings, the House momentarily accepted, by division or teller votes, the Faddis amendment as well as the principle of War Department control of OCD—despite contrary wishes of the Administration and a statement by Secretary of War Stimson that he did not want the job.

In New York, LaGuardia last night expressed confidence that everything would come out all right.

"I'm certain that the (House and Senate) conference committee will iron out all difficulties in the bills," he declared. "Their decision will be satisfactory."

Faddis called the House vote an expression of "pure ignorance," because, he added, "a lot of people came in to vote who had not been present when the question was being debated."

"Nobody's aiming at LaGuardia," he added. "As far as I am concerned I'd just as soon see him in charge of civilian defense, under the War Department, as anyone else."

Representative Andrews (Republican), of New York, said he was certain LaGuardia will realize "he cannot administer this bill and continue to be Mayor of New York, and I am certain, if he does not realize it, the President ought to make him realize it."

Army administration, countered Representative Dickstein (Democrat), of New York, would encumber the program with "red tape, more red tape and more red tape."

U. S. to Put Teeth in New Rating Plan

Under the revised efficiency rating system, officials in jobs paying up to and including $9000 must be given an efficiency rating. Assistant secretaries in most departments, and chiefs of divisions and bureaus will now be given efficiency ratings. Also, rated will be employes paid from emergency relief funds, who were previously exempted.

New employes are given efficiency ratings twice during their probational period, once during the period, and once at the end of the period. Regular employes are rated once a year for the period ending March 31.

Under the old system employes were rated on productiveness and qualifications on the job. There are 31 different efficiency factors under the revised plan such as cooperativeness, initiative, ability to delegate authority, accuracy of operations, physical fitness for work, and attention to pertinent details.

An employe dissatisfied with his rating can appeal to the board of appeals and review in his agency. These boards were authorized in the Remspeck Civil Service Extension Act and they are now being set up in each agency here.

Gen. Philip Fleming yesterday placed his Federal Works Agency on a wartime basis. He ordered a 44-hour week for all employes under his jurisdiction and placed war work of the agency on a seven-day week. This will mean a seven-day week for key officials engaged in war work such as defense housing.

Under Fleming's order employes not only at Federal Works proper but at Public Buildings Administration, Unted States Housing Administration, Works Project Administration, Public Works Administration and Public Roads Administraton will go on a 44-hour work week. Nearly 90,000 Federal workers here are now on work weeks longer than the standard 39-hour Government week.

Commerce Department plans to put its employes on a 44-hour week and longer working hours are expected to be ordered soon at other Federal agencies here. Clark Foreman has resigned as chief of Federal Works' Defense Housing Division.

Farm Security employes have composed a new St. Louis Blues. It's sung to the tune of Swanee River and its lyrics are:

Way down upon the Mississippi
Far, far away,
There's where they're going to Transfer poor me,
Down with the FSA.

Chorus.

All the world am sad and dreary;
Why do I have to roam?
Way down upon the Mississippi,
Far from the old folks at home.

I used to be a big-shot sister
From Washington.
Now I'm a little two-bit blister
In the Missouri sun.

Civil Service Exams: Truck drivers, $1200; farm laborer, $1080 to $1200, Beltisville and Glenn Dale, Md.; mechanical trades apprentice, $4 a day, Washington Navy Yard; deputy United States marshall, $1800; printer's assistant, 66 cents an hour; proofreader, $1.32 cents an hour, GPO, and steamfitter, $1680.

articles and vested in the Department of Agriculture.

"I strongly hope that no division of control will be made. The whole price structure is linked together."

The President thus openly split with his Secretary of Agriculture who last week appeared before the Banking and Currency Committee, then debating the final form in which the bill was to be reported to the Senate, to urge, at least by inference, dual control of agricultural commodities.

The bill before the Senate would give authority for control of all prices to a single administrator, presumably the present Price Administrator, Leon Henderson. Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, has proposed an amendment creating a five-member price board.

Barkley last night said he still believed the Bankhead amendment will be beaten, but Senator Bankhead (Democrat), of Alabama, its author, declared he was unable to perceive "any change" in sentiment after the President's message was read. Bankhead has claimed support of at least 50 Senators.

Senator Brown (Democrat), of Michigan, floor manager of the bill, yesterday accepted amendments exempting advertising and motion picture theater admissions from price regulations.

During the debate, Senators Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma; O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, and O'Daniel (Democrat), of Texas, announced for the Bankhead amendment. In off-the-floor statements to reporters, Senators Connally (Democrat), of Texas, frequently a strong Administration supporter; Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, and Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, said they would also vote for the amendment.

4000 American, British Reported Interned in Manila

Berlin, Jan. 8 (Official Broadcast Recorded by (AP).—The Berlin radio today broadcast the following dispatch from Shanghai:

"About 4000 British and Americans were interned in the Manila region up to Thursday, according to Japanese reports here (Shanghai) from the Philippine capital.

"The reports add that the internment of British and Americans by Japanese police has been in progress since Tuesday.

"The British and Americans are being interned separately in various quarters in Manila, in their own homes or hotels, whereas Japanese residents of Manila had been confined in prisons by the Americans before the fall of Manila.

"The Japanese internment of the British and Americans is merely a precautionary measure taken by Japanese authorities to prevent the British and Americans from engaging in activities detrimental to Japanese interests."

Mexico Expropriates Land Owned by Hearst

Mexico City, Jan. 8 (AP).—Mexico has expropriated 133,952 acres described as belonging to William Randolph Hearst and presented it to 11 towns in the border State of Chihuahua.

Press reports said the land was part of the publisher's vast Bavicora ranch. The amount paid Hearst for the land was not stated.

Two Soldiers Killed, 11 Hurt Near Meade

Truck Veers From Convoy, Hurtles Into Marsh Water

Two soldiers were killed and 11 hurt when an Army truck veered from a convoy line and crashed through a guard rail near Fort George G. Meade, Md., yesterday.

Sergt. Chester Suda, 23, of Olean, N. Y., was drowned when the truck, hurtling down an embankment, buried its nose in marsh water and mud, and Private Michael J. Connoly, of New York City, the second victim, died from "other" injuries, according to Fort Meade authorities.

The destination and point of origin of the convoy were cloaked in military secrecy. The convoy was on Fort Meade Road just south of the Patapsco River bridge when the truck veered from the convoy line. It ripped down 15 highway guard posts and plunged down a 12-foot embankment, snubbing its nose in the marshes.

Soldiers from other trucks sloshed through the icy marsh to rescue those who had been thrown from the body of the truck into the water. Other soldiers fought to open the cab door, but before they could extricate Suda, he was dead.

Ambulances from Fort Meade and nearby hospitals went to the scene as first-aid crews worked over the injured. Ten men were taken to the Fort Meade Hospital where two were treated and discharged. The others were admitted. None was said to be seriously injured. They are:

Private Jack J. Lennon, of Albany, N. Y.; Private (first class) Guy D. Long, of Niagara Falls, N. Y.; Private (first class) Felix E. Balrerzak, of Olean, N. Y.; Private (first class) Alexander Hogue, of Randolph, N. Y., and Private Edward S. Spencer, of Syracuse, N. Y.

Two men were admitted to St. Agnes Hospital in Baltimore and later transferred to the Fort Meade Hospital after treatment. They were Staff Sergt. Clarence D. Baldwin, of Olean, N. Y., and Private Walter Godtek, of Albany, N. Y.

Eugene Grace Wins Bessemer Gold Medal

Eugene G. Grace, president of Bethlehem Steel Co., has been awarded the Bessemer Gold Medal for 1942 by the British Iron and Steel Institute in recognition of his achievements in "fostering collaboration between the steel industries of two leading nations in a great world crisis," it was announced yesterday by the British Press Service at New York.

Founded in 1874, in honor of Sir Henry Bessemer, the Bessemer Gold Medal has become the most highly prized international award for achievement in the steel industry. In its 45 years the medal has been awarded previously to only three other Americans—Andrew Carnegie, Charles M. Schwab and Albert Sauveur, who was the first American metallurgist.

Grace was notified of the award in Washington by Jan Elliot, member of the Council of the British Iron and Steel Institute, acting upon cabled advices from John Craig, president of the institute in London.

Characterizing Grace is the "acknowledged leader of the steel industry in America," Elliot said the award was an "appropriate symbol of the pooling of the technical skill as well as the resources of the United States and Great Britain in an anti-Axis world."

In acknowledging the honor, Grace said:

"In accepting this award it would be selfish on my part not to recognize that the services attributed to me by the institute's generous citation reflect as well the team work and cooperative efforts of my associates in Bethlehem Steel and the American steel industry as a whole."

Chicago Jurist Will Start D. C. Duties Monday

Another visiting Federal judge will lend a hand in attacking the local District Court docket congestion on Monday, this time in the civil nonjury branch of the court, it was announced yesterday.

The visiting jurist will be Judge William J. Campbell, of Chicago—the Northern District of Illinois. He is booked for a stay of about three weeks, and is scheduled to hear mainly divorce and patent actions.

During December, Judge J. Leroy Adair, of the Southern District of Illinois, served on the local bench to help clear a top-heavy criminal docket.

D.C. Budget Action Not Expected Soon

The District budget of $54,548,562 for the coming fiscal year probably wil lnot be considered by the District Appropriations Subcommittee for two or three months, Representative Mahon (Democrat), of Texas, the subcommittee chairman, said last night.

When hearings before the subcommittee begin they will be conducted in executive sessions, with officials of the local government departments testifying.

No haste in starting the hearings is expected, since the new fiscal year does not begin until July 1.

U. S. Prosecutors Are Assigned to District Courts

Assignments of Government prosecutors to the three District Court criminal divisions here during the next three months were announced yesterday by United States Attorney Edward M. Curran, through his chief clerk, John J. O'Leary.

The assistant attorneys will serve as follows: George E. McNeill and Allen J. Krouse in Criminal Court No. 1, before Justice T. Alan Goldsborough; Charles B. Murray, William Hitz and Stephen C. Miller, in Criminal Court No. 2, before Justice James W. Morris, and John L. Laskey and John C. Conliff, jr., in Criminal Court No. 3 before Justice F. Dickinson Letts.

Hope of World Rests in U. S. Ballot Boxes And Elections Must Go On, Kelland Declares

By the Associated Press

Salt Lake City, Jan. 8.—The hope of the world is in the ballot boxes of America, Clarence Buddington Kelland, noted author and new publicity director of the Republican National Committee, told the Nation's cattlemen today.

Speaking at the forty-fifth annual convention of the American National Livestock Association, Kelland chose for his subject "Our Second Duty," which he outlined as mandatory upon every citizen in time of war and said was "to engage . . . vigorously in politics."

"Our first duty," he declared, is to make war, . . . to give whatever our country shall find t necessary to ask of us. Our first duty requires of us that we shall amend a beautiful sentence that has come down through the ages, to make it read:

" 'Greater love hath no man than this—that he shall lay down the life of his son for his country.' "

"Politics Is Good"

He emphasized that by "politics" he did not mean "venial . . . cheap, job-seeking partisan politics" but rather "the machinery through which the common man may see that he is properly governed."

"Politics is good in time of peace; in time of war, politics is indispensable," he asserted.

He distinguished at length between national unity—he said there was question that such unity existed—and political unity.

"When political unity comes in at the door," he said, "human liberties go out of the window. It is political unity which has plunged this world into war."

He quoted from President Wilson the words "we do not need less criticism in time of war, but more. It is to be hoped that criticism will be constructive, but better unfair attack than autocratic repression."

Opposition Held Needed

He said "the only check upon any Administration . . . is a strong, decent, patriotic, able opposition political party," and urged his listeners to spike rumors that elections will be suspended in 1942.

"There is not a man, woman or child in America so foolish as to believe that elections will be suspended, delayed or abolished for the duration of this war. Any man who expresses such a fear is so ridiculous as not to merit a hearing. . . . Even the most violent opponent of this Administration does not believe it has contemplated . . . the suppression of elections. To do so would throw this country into a state of rebellion.

"We are at war . . . to preserve and defend our form of government," he concluded.

His address featured the second day convention program.

Messages were read from United States Senators Pat McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, and J. C. O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, who were prevented from attending.

Officer Kills Self

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 8 (AP).—Lieut. (J. G.) Jeffrey Parsons was found dead in his quarters aboard a Coast Guard vessel yesterday. There was a bullet wound in his left chest and a regulation revolver by his side on his bunk. Dr. C. J. D. MacDonald, city coroner, said it was suicide and there would be no inquest.

TROIKA GOES INTERNATIONAL. India, China, South America and Russia are the homelands of the colorful entertaining crew in the new Troika revue opening next Monday. In the line-up are Mata and Hari, brilliant Oriental dancers; Jadine Wong, the tiny Chinese dancer who received a big play in Life Magazine; Juanita Juarez (she doesn't arrive until Wednesday after Marjorie Gainsworth closes), the South American singing magnet at New York's Copocabana all of last season . . . Looking at this impressive list, orchid-like Helen Hamilton, owner of the Troika, said "Every week I always say I'm going to cut down on the next show. And look at me now!"

Those breakneck swingsters, the Four Men of Rhythm, will return to El Patio next Monday. It's a genuine case of "returning by popular request." The brightly successful Stylists will leave to play at Rogers' Corner in Manhattan after they close in El Patio on Saturday night.

FACES IN THE BEST PLACES. Cosmos Room. Fanny Ward, that remarkable young lady born about the time Grant took Richmond, was holding court at the ringside. Jimmy Cromwell brought all the members of his party over to meet Fanny who looked a chic chick in black silk jersey encrusted with gold sequins . . . The "400" Cocktail Lounge. George Marshall, owner of the Redskins, who stops in to talk to owner Jules James a couple of times a week . . . Metronome Room. Among the many lads in uniform dancing to Layton Bailey's music were Jeff Stoughton, his former trombonist, and blonde Boris who was showing you to tables in Metronnome this last year . . . Aainbow Romm. Jim Dewey, the noted labor man, quietly listening to Milton Davis' afternoon novachord concert . . . Pall Mall Room. Tony Martin, movie star, relaxing so inconspicuously that no one recognized him . . . Lounge Riviera. Four leading Midwest coal mining execs, O. C. Larsen, Jerry M. Clark, E. H. Davis and E. Ann Stuart, a glowing brunette, is the beauteous new singing importation in the Mayflower Lounge. She opened last night, recently appeared at New York's St. Moritz.

SARONG MINDED BARNEE. Dorothy Lamour met Barnee of the Shoreham recently at the New York Stork Club. Barnee, quite enchanted, admits that he said, "Miss Lamour, might I have the honor of presenting you with a sarong for your next picture?". Lamour just smiled. As Barnee puts it, "She didn't say yes, but she didn't say no."

EXCITING MOMENTS. Casino Royal. When that brunette dancer snapped the single strap to her very low-cut gown. She broke the track record getting off the floor . . . Crossroads. When trumpeter Irving Markey, of Ralph Hawkins' Crossroadsters hits those away-high-up notes. We always have a feeling that the top of his head is going to blow off . . . Lotus. That tensely dramatic moment when Elsie, the Cow, confesses her love for Ferdinand. Elsie's very coquettish with that wreath of sunflowers around her neck and a blue bow on her tail . . . The confusion of those Neptune Room patrons who have birthdays. Grant Thompson puts the spotlight on them and insists on their taking bows. And how they plush! You'd think a birthday was a crime . . . The doings of Norma Krieger, redheaded girl magician at Paul Young's. She has a shopping bag that lays eggs. But she won't sell either the bag or the eggs.

A young esquire from the British purchasing commission is going to sing the leading role in the Viking's production of "Pinafore" next week. His first name is Philip. Now do your guessing.

THE GIRLS SPEAK UP. Singer Mary Byrne at Mayfair: My father, Henry Edward Byrnes, was active in helping founding the League of Nations. I hope his dream will come true after this war is over . . . Singer Carmela Lazari, of the Hi Hat: My best friend is my little white kitten. She never meows off key . . . Violinist Jane Marlow, of Restaurant "823:" The "823" patrons are so appreviative that it's a pleasure to practice new music 4 hours a day.

EXOTIC FOOD AND EXOTIC MUSIC make an adventure of any evening at the Copocabana. Phil Vidal's Rumba Band specializes in unique Porto Rican danzons and the menu is chock-a-clock with those unusual items that appeal to epicures.

Kavakos' Grill is the fun headquarters of the northeast, especially on weekends. Dance music by Louie's band, two big floor shows and here's hoping you can find a place to sit down.

IN OLD VIRGINNY. Nightingale. Dance rhythms and clever specialties by Jack Maggio's Band are fashioned to suit every taste. Leader Maggio and Blave Sickies sing the sugar-pie numbers and Tommy Bingley dishes up the jive and steaming.

Nazis Now Demand Clothing or Your Life

London (Friday), Jan. 9 (AP).—The British Exchange Telegraph Agency reported today that a decree published in Prague provided the death penalty for anyone refusing to cooperate with the collection in Bohemia and Moravia of warm clothing for the German army.

Today May Be 'Andy Hardy's' Wedding Day

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

MICKEY AND AVA APPLY FOR MARRIAGE LICENSE—Mickey Rooney and Ava Gardner applied Monday for a license to marry, it was disclosed yesterday at Santa Barbara, Calif. Under the State's three-day law, the license can be granted today. Rooney, star of the Andy Hardy films, gave his age as 21. Miss Gardner, of Wilson, N. C., listed her age as 19

Civilian Pilots Urged to Join Armed Forces

By the Associated Press

Thousands of young Americans who learned to fly in the civilian pilot training program were called upon yesterday to join up with the Army or Navy air forces.

Saying he acted at the request of the Army and Navy aviation services, Brig. Gen. Donald H. Connolly, administration of Civil Aeronautics, wrote to every graduate of C. P. T. courses:

"Which service you enter is a matter of your choice. This request is merely that you act upon your pledge, given at the beginning of the C. P. T. course, to apply for air training in the armed forces, if and when needed. Both the Army and Navy air forces have given notice that more applicants are needed now."

Charles Stanton, deputy administrator of Civil Aeronautics, who will become acting administrator January 15, when Gen. Connolly returns to active duty in the Army, said he expected all C. P. T. graduates "to get into the armed forces as combat pilots or instructors, or in whatever capacity they may use them."

The C. P. T. program, started in the fall of 1939 after a limited experimental trial the previous spring, has graduated approximately 60,000 pilots with 35 to 200 hours' flying time. The number will be increased to 70,000 by next July 1.

Stanton said approximately 20,000 of these now are in the Army and Navy or awaiting call.

Another 8000 are in civilian aviation, many of them flying instructors; 8000 are in other industries, and 24,000 still are in college.

Recently C. P. T. graduates have comprised about 30 per cent of those entering Army Corps classes, and the number of "washouts" has been decidedly small, only about 7 out of 100 failing to complete the primary course. The percentage is much higher for pilots without previous C. P. T. training.

Eichelberger Sent To Field, Wilby Heads West Point

Maj. Gen. Robert L. Eichelberger, superintendent of the Military Academy at West Point, has been assigned to command a division in the field, it was disclosed here yesterday.

He will be succeeded at West Point by Maj. Gen. Francis B. Wilby, now commanding the First Corps Area with headquarters at Boston. Gen. Wilby will turn his command at Boston over to Maj. Gen. Thomas A. Terry, who will retain his present duties as coastal frontier defense commander and commander of the First Coast Artillery District.

What division Gen. Eichelberger will command, whether it is a division already in being or to be activated, or where it is located, were not revealed. The Twenty-ninth Division, composed of former National Guardsmen and selectees from the District, Virginia, Maryland and Pennsylvania, is at present without a commanding general.

'Amos' Is Divorced

Los Angeles, Jan. 8 (AP).—Mrs. Leta A. Gosden, wife of Freeman S. Gosden, Amos of the Amos 'n' Andy radio team, obtained a final divorce decree today on grounds of cruelty.

Sidelights on the War

40 Nazis Reported Executed For Refusing to Fight in East

Geneva, Jan. 8 (INS).—Forty German soldiers, accused of mutiny in protest against being sent to the Russian front, have been executed in occupied France, it was reported here today.

Italy Fears Invasion

London, Jan. 8 (AP).—The anti-Nazi London newspaper Die Zeitung said tonight that Mussolini was recalling troops from Balkan zones of occupation because impending Axis annihilation in Libya will leave Italy "face to face with the danger of direct attack."

Gendarme Killed

Vichy, Unoccupied France, Jan. 8 (AP).—The Paris police announced today that a French policeman was killed by terrorists last night while protecting a German garage.

The policeman was found dying with three bullets in his body by two other officers who came when they heard his whistle. He died shortly afterward.

Jap Oil Story Denied

London, Jan. 8 (AP).—An official spokesman said today that a report had been received that oil wells, refineries and pipeline in British Borneo had been destroyed according to plan before the Japanese occupation.

"There can be no foundation for the report that the Japanese are obtaining any oil," he said. "This must be impossible until they have sunk new wells."

Japanese reported January 3 that British oil well destruction efforts failed and that some of the wells were already in production for Japan.)

Eden Denies Fleet Offer

London, Jan 8 (AP).—Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden today told a questioner in the House of Commons that the British government had not offered to purchase the French fleet for gold.

Nor was he "aware that the United States Government have done so, either," he added.

Nazi Revolt Doubted

London, Jan. 8 (AP).—A foreign office commentator advised today that reports of a possible imminent internal upheaval in Germany be treated with extreme reserve.

He said that so far as he was able to learn, these reports "all come from one source." He did not name it.

Raiders Harass Malta

Valetta, Malta, Jan. 8 (AP).—Malta has had ten air raid warnings in the past 24 hours, half of them at night. Two persons were reported killed, a number injured and some property damage done by raiders.

'Good Old Days' Loom for Men's Styles

Men's clothing styles soon may be reminiscent of World War days, with narrower trouser legs, no cuffs or pleats and with single breasted coats, if OPM's suggestions are adopted.

Representatives of the boys' and men's clothing industry, meeting informally at OPM yesterday, considered these proposals for simplification of men's attire in the interest of wool conservation.

Tired Kidneys Often Bring Sleepless Nights

Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. When they get tired and don't work right in the daytime, many people have to get up nights. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder. Don't neglect this condition and lose valuable, restful sleep.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may also cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Unconsummated Love Is Theme of Consummate Hit

'H. M. Pulham, Esq.,' at Loew's Capitol, Is Splendidly Acted by a Notable Cast; Larry Adler Walks Away With Stage Revue

OUT OF ONE OF THE YEAR'S BETTER NOVELS, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, by thoughtful preparation, a judicious selection of cast and appropriate magnitude of production, has evolved what is distinctly one of the year's better pictures.

"H. M. Pulham, Esq.", the present tenant of the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater, at base is the story of heredity versus environment, but on the surface is an examination of unfulfilled love focused in the lives of a young Boston aristocrat and a beautiful New York office girl of no family background, who love, separate, marry—each in his own sphere—and meet again years later, wondering what might have happened, if . . . But all that might have didn't happen, and doesn't in the picture, leaving the audience to judge as it sees fit as between the "They lived happily ever after" sort of thing and the more realistic spectacle of conventional and honorable people living life as it is vastly more apt to eventuate in actuality.

Except that it achieves its end through the medium of a written sketch of his life by the central character for a class reunion yearbook, instead of a restrospective spoken recital, "H. M. Pulham, Esq." has something of "Lydia" in its form, structure and encompassment of the years. In its overlapping of events and telescoping of time, it presents a faint outline of the pattern of "Citizen Kane." It is greatly the superior of the former and approaches the effectiveness of the latter in preserving the interest, the humor, the sharp conflicts and suspense of a narrative that is sound without being too sentimental and dramatic without resort to objectionable daring.

The staid and circumspect gentleman of the title is introduced as a smugly successful businessman in his forties, tight in the grip of a fixed routine of domestic and official monotony. Clocks could be set by the habitual incidents of his day. Then comes a telephone call from an old flame, whose voice recalls the whole panorama of his past. It is the inspiration of the personal history he jots down for the banquet brochure at the behest of the old classmate still living in the shadow of their alma mater. This review of a lifetime spans the years from puzzled youth to regimented middle life; recaptures the first meeting of Harry Pulham and Marvin Myles; traces the contrast between the Pulham family relationships and the associations of mercantile Manhattan; outlines the "courtship" of the two young people thrown together in the skyscraper New York office and the inevitable claims upon the ambitious youth exerted by tradition, breeding and blood. He marries the "girl back home," she weds a character never seen in the film and together they reach a doubtful conclusion that it all has been for the best. One wonders.

A Shrewdly Chosen Cast Excels

Whatever doubts of the soundness of the casting may have been felt prior to the picture's release are completely dispelled in its viewing on the screen. Robert Young, in the title role, plays with easy conviction through all of the various periods of the story. It is by all odds the most substantial characterization he ever has brought to the cameras. Hedy Lamarr, in the role of Marvin Myles, also is a bit of a revelation. No less lovely than she always has been, she reposes no reliance in "glamour," but portrays her role with naturalness, feeling, gentleness and charm, contriving, at the same time, to give the part spirit, vigor and strength. Ruth Hussey is no less efficient and fine as Kay Motford, the background girl in his life Pulham eventually marries, although the first reaction in many quarters was that the casting of the two leading feminine roles should have been reversed. Among the supporting players, especially telling performances are contributed by Charles Coburn, as the elder Pulham; Fay Holden, as the mother; Van Heflin, again a vibrant figure of social revolt; Lief Erikson, as the inveterate collegian, and Bonita Granville, the junior Mary Pulham, with ideas as modern as tomorrow's sunrise, all enormous assets to the rounded perfection of a distinguished film play.

Three stellar acts form the backbone of the "Fun, Inc." stage revue at the Capitol this week. Foremost among these, of course, is Larry Adler, incomparable virtuoso of the mouth-organ, who yesterday had to beg off from further encores so the rest of the bill could proceed. From "Chattanooga Choo-Choo" and "Blues in the Night," through a Gershwin medley to the "Blue Danube," the youthful Adler progressed in his demonstration that a harmonica can be made the approximate equivalent of a full orchestra. Eunice Healey, tapstress extraordinary, last seen locally with Al Jolson in "Hold Onto Your Hats," and the Calgary Brothers, in their slow-motion, acrobatic comedy, scored hits second to Adler's only by a shade. Burrus Williams and Toby Tyler, moved to the stage at two grand pianos, aided in the glorification of the Rhythm Rockets in their most pretentious number. The Fox Movietone News and Sam Jack Kaufman's "Show Beat" overture, with Lynn Allison and Lew Davies excelling themselves in the vocals, complete a bill of more than usual substance.

Good Will Wasn't!

Hollywood, Jan. 8.

From all reports, our good will tours to South America were anything but—principally because those we sent south of the border didn't speak their language or understand their point of view. We have a woman here who could do a whale of a job, but I don't suppose anybody's ever thought of her. Her name is Frances Marion. For years she's been our leading scenario writer. She speaks Spanish, French and Portuguese. Went overseas with Mary Roberts Rhinehart during the last war. She still retains a commission in the Army. She not only speaks their language, but while down there could write a couple of motion pictures and produce them in South America.

JOHNNY WEISMULLER

Eddie Albert, on a day's leave from a little Mexican circus, dropped by to see me. He's learning to be a trapeze performer, al o playing a clown. Gets $8 a day. Travels and sleeps in trucks. Last week one of the trucks went though a bridge, and they spent hours getting the breath back into the body of a little girl who was almost drowned. Eddie said, "It's good for all actors to work with down-to-earth people and get their viewpoint. In Hollywood everyone seems to have a cock-eyed idea of his own worth." Their menagerie consists of an old lion, which cost $5, a bear and two wildcats.

You've heard that old expression "More fun than a barrel of monkeys?" Well, it isn't true. When 25 simians were released for the Tarzan picture, they started tearing each other up. Even Johnny Weissmuller ran for protection.

The most tempermental actors in Hollywood were 20 seagulls used for "Moontide." You see, we have a State law protecting them, so a game warden was appointed their guardian. They had to be fed every 3 hours, and the company couldn't work them for more than 4 minutes at a time under the lights. After work, they had to be returned to the place where they were caught, and released. When Director Archie Mayo said, "What if one gets bombed?" the game warden replied, "That would be just too bad for you." So a special bomb shelter had to be built for the gulls.

The Government has registered Roy Rogers' flock of carrier pigeons and may draft them any minute.

Ben Blue says that book "Fifty Years of Conflict" makes the ideal golden wedding anniversary gift.

When Merle Oberon goes east, she'll visit Mrs. Douglas Fairbanks, jr., at her farm in Virginia.

On Scorched Earth!

New York, Jan. 8.

Franklin D. Roosevelt, the most devoutly religious President in all our history, spent a full hour last week with a Russian diplomat to whom he delivered a sermon on religion. "He's a charming sort of fellow," the President later told Mrs. Roosevelt and Winston Churchill, "but he's rather strange. I couldn't convince him that there is a God" . . . That evening the President confessed that he still hasn't found time to open his Christmas gifts—not even the one presented to him by his wife. When Mrs. Roosevelt protested, the President pointed to Churchill, and said: "Blame him, for interfering in my home life."

AL JOLSON

All the newspapers have reported that Wendell Willkie was offered LaGuardia's job as head of Civilian Defense and refused to accept it. There also has been speculation about other governmental jobs allegedly offered to and rejected by Willkie. That isn't true. This is the truth—clearly and unequivocally: The President never has offered any job, whatsoever to Wendell Willkie . . . Al Jolson will leave Florida to begin a new series of radio programs . . . Ruth McKenney, who wrote the "My Sister Eileen" stories from which the Broadway hit was dramatized, is taking a post with the Department of Information of the Office of Emergency Management.

For the first time in history, a Federal bureau will work outside the Nation's borders, in an official effort to assist other countries. This will be the new assignment of the Bureau of Standards, which will open branch offices in South America . . . The Bureau's experts will teach our Good Neighbors how to convert coffee beans, sugar cane, etc., into other products—how to convert all their surplus output into different, useful items.

Paramount's movie studio at Astoria is being taken over by the United States Army Signal Corps. All Army and Civilian Defense films will be made there . . . Martha Raye and Jack Haley will appear in the new Eddie Davis musical, "Follow Your Leader" . . . The performance of Eddie Cantor's "Banjo Eyes" on Sunday, January 11, is being sponsored by Grossinger's. War-relief and charity wards will be the beneficiaries . . . A new committee is being organized in Hollywood, co-ordinating all Motion Picture talent for our war program. It will control all requests for stars' appearances in government films and broadcasts. Clark Gable and Rosalind Russell will head it.

Harry Kurnitz, the screen writer, recently returned to Hollywood after a long honeymoon. At the new home to which he brought his bride, Kurnitz suddenly was set upon by a vicious bulldog belonging to a neighbor. The next day the bulldog again bit Kurnitz—who thereupon reported this to his neighbor, and suggested that he dispose of the dog immediately . . . "Now just suppose that you had a dog," the neighbor asked, "and you were fond of him. Then suppose he bit you. Would you have him shot?" . . . "Well . . . no," said Kurnitz, "but I'd put my jugular vein in my wife's name."

Phil Baker, who has returned to radio stardom, was a yeoman in the Navy during the last war. When he came to New York on furlough, he met Lew Brown and said: "The war will be over soon and I'll go back to vaudeville. But I need a new act. And I have only $2. Will you help me write a new act?" . . . Brown advised him to use the $2 for a room at the Somerset Hotel. All night long, and into the next day, Brown dictated countless jokes, which Baker carefully jotted down on long sheets of paper. Then they heard the shouts—the false armistice of November 7 and saw confetti being showered from every window. The enthusiastic Brown joined in the confetti-tossing. He made confetti out of all the long sheets on which Baker's new act had been written.

Columbia

Swashbuckling returned to F Street yesterday, with the Columbia bringing back the new Douglas Fairbanks, jr., film "The Corsican Brothers."

Author, producer and star of "The Corsican Brothers" are thoroughly at home in the swashbuckling racket. Alexander Dumas, he of "The Three Musketeers" and "The Count of Monte Cristo," wrote the yarn. Edward Small, whose film productions have included both "The Count" and "The Son of Monte Cristo" as well as "The Prisoner of Zenda" is the producer. And coming by his way rightfully in cloak and sword dramas by his unforgettable father, the younger Fairbanks does honor to the family name in a dual role that would have delighted the early Doug.

Fairbanks plays twins—one a gentle, cityfied dandy, the other a tough, self-reliant mountain bandit.

Some Heard Siren Tests, Some Didn't

A game of "who heard the whistle" is developing here.

Listeners yesterday for the prearranged blasts from the first 2 of the 41 air-raid alarm sirens the District will get were divided, it appeared, about 50-50, between those who heard the sounds and those who didn't. Such was shown by an informed survey on the streets.

The most interested listener, Lieut. Col. Beverly C. Snow, Assistant Engineer Commissioner, said he didn't hear either of the sirens—the five-horsepower one atop the Municipal Center or the one of two-horsepower on the Thomson School at Twelfth and L Streets Northwest. Lieut. Col. Snow was in the District Building, not a mile from either siren.

Supposed to Carry 1½ Miles

The larger siren was built to carry its sound a mile and a half; the smaller was expected to carry a mile.

The technicians, headed by Lieut. Col. Snow, chose what was the city's noisiest time to experiment with the sirens yesterday—the time between 4:30 and 5:30 p. m., thus having the sirens compete with as bad a roar as the city could produce at any hour.

Lieut. Col. Snow had no immediate reaction to announce. Data, he said, was being assembled and he did believe that at least something useful had been learned from the performance of the two sirens yesterday.

No one siren of the 41 on order is intended to arouse the entire city. Rather the entire 41 will be so distributed as to make a pattern of sound from which it is hoped no section of the city can escape.

Technicians Assemble Data

In the complete installation, 18 five-horsepower and 23 two-horsepower horns will blow. Included among the data the technicians will want is information on how the sirens sounded to those who heard them—whether the sound resembled those made by fire and ambulance equipment or whether it was something different, which is hoped for. An air raid warning sound that cannot be confused with other sounds is desired.

The alarms yesterday, arranged simply as tests for the technician, were set off at 4:34 p. m., and again at 5:02 p. m. The public had been instructed to pay no attention, other than by listening and fixing the manner of the sound in its mind.

District's 'Safest' Building Makes Elaborate Raid Plans

Covered metal buckets labeled "bomb sand" appeared in the corridors of the District Court Building yesterday, as elaborate air raid precautions were announced for the courthouse — termed, incidentally, one of the safest places in the city during an air attack.

An extensive program which includes first-aid courses, evacuation systems, warning signals and emergency equipment installation has been worked out by United States Marshal John B. Colpoys, in charge of the building, and Deputy Marshal Norman L. Botsford, named air-raid warden by Colpoys.

The safety of the squat, concrete structure during a bombing was pointed out by engineers from the office of David Lynn, Capitol architect, according to Colpoys. The reasons are 2½-foot wall thicknesses and a copper-covered concrete roof, the latter minimizing the danger from incendiary bombs.

First-aid courses, limited to marshals and courthouse employes, are scheduled to begin tomorrow at 9:30 a. m. under the direction of Mrs. Edna M. Reinohl, statistical clerk at the court and experienced Red Cross instructor.

Deputy United States marshals have been given the task of evacuating the general public to the ground floor, should bombers come over while court is in session, and extra men are scheduled to go on duty in case of emergency. The clerks in each court, in turn, are to be responsible for shepherding the justices to a place of safety.

First-aid equipment has been ordered, Botsford said, and two-directional horns are to be installed on each floor as warning sirens, controlled from Botsford's office. Word of a raid is to be flashed to him by direct phone from the Interior Department's Securities Division, which has a direct line to every Federal Building.

Blackout Problems Due For Airing

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

In a move to clear up several technical problems holding back the District's blackout education, Commissioner John Russell Young yesterday named an over-all committee to work out answers to such questions as:

1. What should be the voltage of lights in dim-out areas?
2. Should sirens on regular police and fire cars and ambulances be regulated to prevent confusion with air raid signals?
3. Should official cars, fire engines and police cars be permitted to drive with lights during test blackouts?
4. What is the most practical way to handle blackout of traffic signals?

Lieut. Col. Beverly C. Snow, Assistant Engineer Commissioner, will serve as chairman of the committee. Other members are: Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways; Chief of Police Edward J. Kelly; Stephen T. Porter, chief of the Fire Department, and Herbert A. Friede, director, chairman of communications for the District Defense Council.

First meeting of the committee will be held this afternoon in Col. Snow's office at the District Building.

Commissioner Young said the committee will take up problems affecting two or more agencies and will not relieve any civilian defense chairman of responsibility now his.

The committee doubtless will work to coordinate park lights into the blackout schedule and decide whether dimouts are advisable.

Other appointments announced yesterday by Commissioner Young made Brig. Gen. Charles W. Kutz first deputy coordinator of defense in the metropolitan area and Commissioner Guy Mason second deputy coordinator.

In the event of an "emergency," Commissioner Young said, the title of Col. Lemuel Bolles, director of the District Defense Council, will become commander of the Citizens Defense Corps, with authority "over everybody."

A committee on citations and awards was named as follows: Maj. Gen. P. C. Harris, chairman; R. L. Jarnagin, secretary; Frederick E. Altemus, Joshua Evans, jr., William W. Everett, Col. Julius I. Peyser and Mrs. Grace Hayes Riley.

While thinking of all these appointments Coordinator Young recalled that the city's policemen and firemen have been serving without days off since December 7. In response to his suggestions Chiefs Kelly and Porter said schedules will be arranged to permit their men one day off each two weeks.

Bomb Demonstration In Congress Heights

Demonstration of the principle on which various types of bombs operate will be given members of the Congress Heights Citizens Associations on the grounds of the Congress Heights School tonight. The demonstration, to be conducted by representatives of the Navy Yard, will follow a meeting at 8 p. m.

Class in Care Of Children To Open Soon

Volunteers interested in enrolling for a course in child care aid, with a view to assisting at nursery centers to be established in Washington for preschool children, can register and be interviewed at the Civilian Defense Volunteer Office, 501 Pennsylvania Avenue.

Registration will begin this afternoon at 2 o'clock and continue through Monday.

The class will be sponsored by the Council of Social Agencies under the chairmanship of Mrs. Henry P. Chandler. Moderator will be Christine Glass, former executive director of the National Association for Nursery Education.

Candidates for the 80-hour course will be accepted on the basis of their personality qualifications and on the amount of time they have available to do actual volunteer work following receipt of their certificate.

Four hours a day, four days a week is the minimum time that an aide will be asked to give.

The course will include ten lectures, plus 15 hours of observation, and 50 hours of actual practical experience in a nursery school under professional supervision.

Mrs. Chandler said the training will bring the District "one step closer to meeting its present acute needs for the care of preschool children."

Plans for a Red Cross first-aid class to begin next week were made at a meeting of the Bradbury Heights Citizens Association last night at the Bradbury Heights Methodist Church. The class will be held at the church.

E. S. Alverson, chairman of the association's defense committee, and C. Charles Cabot, deputy warden, made reports on defense matters at the meeting. Henry Austin, president, presided.

U. S. Will Build Movable Houses

Copyright by New York Times

The Federal Works Agency started a program yesterday to build 42,000 demountable houses for defense workers at a cost of $153,000,000.

The houses will be of standard designs and will be built in record time on a two-shift, seven-day-a-week basis. Mass production and mass purchasing of materials are expected to facilitate speed and economy in the new program, which was approved by President Roosevelt yesterday.

Funds for the new houses will come out of the $300,000,000 emergency fund which Congress authorized the President to use for emergency housing needs several weeks ago. The projects have been authorized by Charles F. Palmer, Federal housing coordinator, who has assigned the work to the Federal Works Agency.

Tolan Defense Quiz Welcome, Young Claims

Admitting some defects in the District civilian defense set-up, Commissioner J. Russell Young last night said he welcomed the opportunity given District officials to appear before the House Committee Investigating National Defense Migration next week and testify on "conditions affecting civilian morale" in Washington.

Representative Tolan (Democrat), of California, the committee chairman, announced yesterday that District defense officials and local department government heads will be invited to attend the hearings which begin Tuesday at 10 a. m.

Dr. George C. Ruhland, the District health officer; Conrad Van Hyning, director of public welfare; Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools; Col. Lemuel Bolles, director of the District Defense Council; and Commissioner Young have been invited to attend the first day's hearings. Other local officials probably will attend later sessions which are scheduled to continue through Thursday.

The committee proposes "to get a complete picture of what the Government is doing to take care of Washington residents—and what it should provide—in housing, health facilities, recreational opportunities, and in all conditions affecting the ability of these people to serve the Nation at maximum efficiency," Representative Tolan said.

Although Congress has passed the wide-powered District "blackout" bill, the committee chairman said his group will examine actual and projected civilian defense measures in Washington.

"It is our purpose to see that the special responsibilities of officials concerned in this problem shall be clearly revealed at these hearings, with a view to the execution of the necessary measures with the minimum delay," he said.

Dean Landis Rumored for High OCD Post

Early appointment of Dean James M. Landis of the Harvard Law School to the post of executive coordinator for the Office of Civilian Defense was predicted in official circles yesterday as some members of the House Military Affairs Committee continued to clamor for the removal of Mayor F. H. LaGuardia, OCD director.

Dean Landis would not succeed LaGuardia but would serve with both Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt and Mayor LaGuardia remaining at their posts, according to official sources.

This move would be in line with policies announced by Mrs. Roosevelt, assistant OCD director, at a press conference this week—and would dovetail with a reorganization now under way at OCD to bring about a closer relationship between welfare and protective services divisions of the national office.

Duties of these two divisions are being realigned to meet a wartime situation and to fill community war needs. Paul Kellogg, sociological expert, who has been guiding the reorganization may remain in OCD as director of community planning division, according to the predictions.

Dean Landis is now regional director of defense in the New England area and has done an outstanding job in getting the First Defense Corps area organized ahead of the rest of the country.

Dean Landis is well acquainted with Government procedure, having resigned from the chairmanship of the Securities and Exchange Commission four years ago to accept the Harvard position. Previously he was Federal Trade Commissioner.

Should he come to the new job, officials said yesterday, it would be on a full-time basis, with Harvard University releasing him "for the duration."

Although the House Military Affairs voted yesterday to put duties of the Office of Civilian Defense under the War Department, it was still believed it could be salvaged as an independent agency.

Infant Industry

Blackout Specialists Open Shops

An infant blackout industry which might easily become "big business" in the event of enemy air raids is developing in Washington, inquiry by The Post disclosed yesterday.

Promoters of these sprouting enterprises are painters, roofers, building contractors, drapers, shade and curtain makers.

Two former service men who were first lieutenants of Infantry during the last war have organized as Metropolitan Contractors, Inc., at 3420 Georgia Avenue to build air raid shelters in private homes at an average cost of $300.

Some roofers have started advertising for jobs painting aluminum roofs dark brown or black. Until recently when priorities took over, many persons were painting their roofs with aluminum paint which proved an excellent protective covering. Painters are featuring a black paint to be used on window glass to provide complete blackouts. Shade and curtain makers have been busy installing light-tight coverings on windows and building entrances.

Thus far few commercial blackout enterprises have received any official recognition.

Shelters are a subject which officials are reluctant to discuss. Instead, they have been proposing that dwellings be provided with "refuge rooms" on a lower floor to which the families may repair in the event of a raid.

The ideal refuge room would be centrally located away from outside walls, above the ground floor, but on a floor below the roof. Central hallways in buildings on the second and third floors are as safe as any shelter dug into the earth, officials believe.

All England Helps Defense, Speaker Says

The wholehearted cooperation on the part of all English people in their civilian defense effort was stressed last night by Miss Joan Wakefield, of the British staff in Washington, speaking before a meeting of the American University Park Citizens Association.

M. R. Wilkes presided at the meeting held in Hurst Hall, of American University, Massachusetts and Nebraska Avenues Northwest. Robert A. Maurer, jr., chairman of the membership committee, reported 48 new members had been accepted.

Civilian Defense Committee Chairman A. A. Murphey announced that a mass meeting for the community will be held Monday at 8 p. m. in Woodrow Wilson High School with Roger Williams, of the Eighth Precinct, speaking on air-raid precautions for civilians.

DOCTORS WARN CONSTIPATED FOLKS ABOUT LAZY LIVER

IT IS SAID constipation causes many human discomforts—headaches, lack of energy and mental dullness being but a few. BUT DON'T WORRY—

For years a noted Ohio Doctor, Dr. F. M. Edwards, successfully treated scores of patients for constipation with his famous Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—now sold by druggists everywhere.

Olive Tablets, being purely vegetable, are wonderful! They not only gently yet thoroughly cleanse the bowels but ALSO stir up liver bile secretion to help digest fatty foods. Test their goodness TONIGHT without fail! 15¢, 30¢, 60¢.

How Will The Ramspeck Act Affect Your Job?

The Ramspeck Act, affecting nearly every Federal employe, went into effect on January 1, 1942. Within the next few months more than 180,000 Government workers will be given Civil Service status. Will your job be included? If so, what will you have to do? The answers to these questions and others pertaining to the Ramspeck Act will be answered by Jerry Kluttz in his "Federal Diary," in Sunday's Post.

Support The President

The shortcomings of the price-control bill which comes up for vote in the Senate today are many, and we have repeatedly drawn attention to them. Mainly they have to do with the failure to establish low enough ceilings for farm prices. But the worst sin of all would be committed if the Senate were to bow to farmer pressure and accept the Bankhead amendment. That amendment would shift control over farm prices from Price Administrator Henderson to the Secretary of Agriculture. The purpose of the maneuver is obvious. It is hoped that Mr. Wickard would be less strict in his administration than Mr. Henderson. Any such plan to give the Secretary of Agriculture independent powers of control over farm price ceilings would destroy the unity of plan and purpose which is the only administrative guarantee of any degree of price-control effectiveness. The President has opposed the Bankhead amendment. And we hope that the Senate will spurn this egregious attempt by the farm bloc to separate its interests from the interests of the country at large.

Free French

The President in his report on the state of the Union spoke about the impossibility of "successful compromise between good and evil." That was straight thinking. It follows logically that we should not compromise with the compromisers with evil. Now the major compromisers of the world are the men of Vichy—the men who, in Mr. Churchill's words at Ottawa, have been content from day to day to live on Hitler's "blows and favors." Yet the official policy of our Government has hitherto been to handle Vichy France with kid gloves. The latest example of our tenderness shows that we are being forced to use a very long spoon, indeed, in supping with Vichy. That was the rebuke we administered to the Free French for their capture of St. Pierre and Miquelon, and our exaggerated way—the reference to them as "so-called" Free French—of doing it.

The prospect held out by the President that sooner or later our boys will be fighting overseas may be one explanation of our devious diplomacy toward the French. A theater of war plainly marked out for Americans is North Africa. National and continental security is dependent upon the prevention of Hitler's occupation of Dakar and other West African ports. But an expeditionary force to Africa from these shores would first have to encounter the Vichy French. If they were to remain acquiescent, our task would be made that much simpler. Moreover, the agreement over Martinique has released part of our fleet for duty in fighting Hitler in the Atlantic and the Japanese in the Pacific. That agreement, it seems clear, provided for the maintenance of the status quo at St. Pierre and Miquelon as well as Martinique, since they are all under the same administration. Both considerations made the capture of St. Pierre and Miquelon far from simple in its repercussions upon either Allied strategy or American policy.

Yet the overriding fact in our relations with France is that the Free French are our allies in this great struggle against evil. That must be the starting point in our diplomacy toward France. The Free French have sacrificed positions and homes and even their citizenship for the fair name of freedom. As Mr. Churchill put it, "their names will be held and are being held in increasing respect by nine Frenchmen out of every ten throughout the once happy, smiling land of France." For what they have sacrificed, for what they have done, they are entitled to better treatment at our hands. No advantage can come from a policy toward France which calls for keeping the Free French at arm's length. Nor is it in harmony with the President's insistence that good and evil are not reconcilable.

At least the phrase "so-called" which the State Department applied to the Free French should be expunged. It could be expunged when they join the United Nations. That is now possible. For all those peoples who subscribe to the principles of the Declaration by United Nations but who lack formal governments have been asked to join the original 26. Free France by right should be a founder member because the Free Frenchmen were among the first to refuse to compromise with evil. They are in truth "the champions of tolerance and decency and freedom and faith" who, in the President's words, will win the victory in the end. Our policy toward France has become wrapped in an inconsistency with the President's words that we must remedy.

Auto Board

A superboard of control of the automobile industry along the lines proposed by the C. I. O. would have been the opening gun in that "managerial revolution" which has recently been forecast for America. There would have been a joint board of management, labor and Government. The object was to make a pool or a common concern out of the entire industry. Thus the lines of demarcation between company and company would have faded, with little possibility of restoration. Now it is on precisely these lines that Fascist industry has been organized. Was this necessary to that conversion of the automobile industry to warwork which is all that now matters to this Nation? It would not seem so. Conversion hitherto has been held back by a number of factors, and it is difficult to sustain the charge that industrial laxity is even one of those factors. A long time ago, as we have repeatedly insisted, a comprehensive plan should have been shaped up for conversion of the full facilities of the auto industry. But such a plan should logically have been prepared in the OPM. Moreover, OPM seemed to prefer the building of new plants to the use of existing facilities, though some of these new plants will not be in full production for a whole year. OPM, in short, has failed both to direct and to live up to the motto emblazoned in its offices: "Time is short." Finally, the industry has hitherto been handicapped by the difficulty of getting enough war contracts to keep both new and old facilities engaged.

This latter difficulty has been removed by giving the industry letters of intent pending the release of funds and the signature of definitive contracts. But it took the December 7 blow to effect this speedup. At one swoop five billion dollars' worth of contracts have been added to the four billions which have hitherto been fed to the auto industry. That is a beginning. But of more importance are two other requirements: first, a vast retooling; secondly, industrial cooperation in fulfilling the orders swiftly and efficiently. That the job of retooling is immense goes without saying. According to the Tolan Committee, "aside from truck production, it is questionable whether as much as 5 per cent of the existing automotive facilities of the industry have been used" on present contracts. As to organization of the industry, a joint Government-industry-union subcommittee has now been set up "to assist in the development" of the best methods to use labor, tools and facilities for the conversion of the industry to war production. That is a less drastic innovation than a superboard of control, and the C. I. O. United Auto Workers criticizes it as "completely inadequate." The union pessimism is doubtless explicable in part by its chagrin over the lost opportunity of forcing the corporative system upon the auto industry. Granted the constant spur of OPM, the cooperation of labor and management and company and company, there is no reason for such pessimism. The job can be done if everybody in the industry is animated with the will-to-do. Anyway, there is now nothing else for the automobile industry to do.

Ankara Change

The appointment of Lawrence A. Steinhardt as Ambassador to Turkey is indicative of the important strategic position that that country occupies in a war in which thus far she has managed to remain uninvolved. As Ambassador to Russia, Mr. Steinhardt proved to be one of the ablest of our envoys. In the three years of his stay at Moscow that post was one of the most difficult as well as crucial in our diplomatic service. Mr. Steinhardt proved himself equal to his great task. He failed to see the coming of the first Finnish-Russian war, but in general he was not befogged by Soviet policy. His dispatches were of great help to the Department of State. They saved the department from being caught short by the two great shifts in Russian policy—the signature of the Hitler-Stalin pact in 1939 and the German attack on Russia six months ago.

Since America's entry into the war, which has resulted in the establishment of a de facto alliance between this country and Russia, the diplomatic aspects of our relations with the Soviet Union have been overshadowed by the military. It has thus been possible to shift Mr. Steinhardt elsewhere. At the moment, there is hardly a post of greater importance than Ankara. Surrounded by the Germans, on the one hand, and the Allies, on the other, Turkey is under pressure from both. The direction in which she may move may have an important bearing on the still undecided struggle for the Mediterranean. The presence at Ankara of an envoy of Mr. Steinhardt's background, experience and ability means that American interests will be well taken care of. In the meantime the Government will have at its disposal here in Washington the outgoing Ambassador to Turkey, Mr. John V. A. MacMurray, who combines an intimate knowledge of the Near East with long experience in the Far East.

District Budget

Some of Washington's problems growing out of the war would be met through the 1943 budget submitted to Congress, but many long-standing deficiencies in the city's municipal service continue to be ignored. The Commissioners and the Budget Bureau have taken the war emergency into account, yet there seems to be no general appreciation of the fact that the city is undergoing probably the most rapid growth of its history.

In the case of the highway fund the budget submitted gives a very inaccurate picture of what expenditures for the coming fiscal year are likely to be. Congress increased the gasoline tax after the Highway Department's estimates had been submitted to the Commissioners. Undoubtedly requests for inclusion of other projects in the budget, notably the proposed South Capitol Street Bridge, will be forthcoming.

The allowance of funds for additional water facilities and for 95 new policemen will enable the city to meet imperative wartime demands. In both cases the question to be asked is whether these estimates prepared for the most part before the United States entered the war are now adequate. The increased allowance for maintenance of the Home for the Aged and Infirm is not directly related to the war. But this item and the preparation of plans for a new "home" are certainly necessary to the preservation of civilian morale in the Capital City. Even war should not unduly delay the elimination of institutions that are a disgrace to American civilization.

With the elimination of 20 proposed buildings and ten site purchases, the schools would appear to be hard hit by the local budget. No doubt this action will pinch the school system in the future. At present, however, interest is centered in completion of several desperately needed buildings now under way. Funds for this work and the erection of a new junior high school for Negroes were included in the budget. At the moment the Board of Education is worrying chiefly about obtaining materials for these schools designed to take care of warworkers' children.

The most disappointing fact about the local budget is that it contemplates little headway in solving many of the problems that are bringing Washington into the limelight as a wart on the nose of democracy. Public health nurses are urgently needed. The Health Department modestly asked for 20 additional nurses, 2 supervisors and 6 clerks. Funds included in the budget would provide 6 nurses and 1 clerk. Ten physicians to help combat syphilis were asked, and four were allowed. If this recommendation stands, venereal disease clinics will again operate on a part-time basis, even though syphilis, the foe of soldiers, runs riot in the Nation's Capital. The additional inspectors allowed would likewise be entirely inadequate to keep Washington's slums in habitable condition in this acute emergency. Dr. Ruhland's request for mental hygiene and cancer control programs, recommended by the United States Public Health Service four years ago, was once more entirely eliminated.

This is no time for neglect as usual in meeting the requirements of the Nation's Capital. In the United States, Washington is defense area No. 1. It must be fit to function as the country's nerve center in this great struggle, just as soldiers must be fit for combat at the front. Congress has good reason to take a more comprehensive view of the Capital's needs than it has ever done before.

Unsung Heroes

We have been fighting only a month, and already a small barrel of decorations has been handed out to men of the armed services for distinguished gallantry. It has now been suggested that new orders of merit should be created for those who render outstanding service in industry, in science, and in various other occupations on the home front. That would be just as proper as the bemedaling of the doers of brave deeds in the services. Both kinds of contribution are equally heroic. Indeed, we would go further and say that in the kind of total war upon which we are now embarked the heroic must be invoked in everybody, and doubtless will be. Yet millions must fight or work without the kind of recognition exemplified in decorations. They will have to be content with the satisfaction that should possess the soul of every patriot when he has given his bit to his country's defense in time of need. Perhaps that is an argument for dispensing with decorations rather than for increasing them.

FIREFLIES

One firefly's little lantern makes,
Across the dusk, a point of light—
Then suddenly a myriad wakes
Against the vastness of the night!

So much world—and the wings so few
To bear, in this dark interim,
The glow that towns and pastures knew
In other times . . . when lights were dim!

In other lands, where men may trust
No longer anything so bright,
The fireflies lift from trodden dust
This continuity of light.

Hate In War

I particularly liked your editorial in The Post of December 19 on "We Stoop to Conquer." It is one of the few sane utterances I have seen since we entered the war. If we are going to stoop to mud slinging we are defeating a major purpose. We are trying to demonstrate to the world that the democratic and Christian way of living is the best. We must be very firm in war but that does not mean stooping to conquer.

Propaganda is as powerful as arms in this war and the cleaner we can keep it the more powerful we will be. We should try, even though it is difficult to eliminate as much hate as possible—hate clouds vision. I balk at the motto printed all over The Post, "Remember Pearl Harbor." This revengeful motto appeared even in the same issue as your good editorial which essentially contradicted the motto. It is true that there is some good in even the worst of our enemies and they, too, are trying hard to find the best way of life. It is unfortunate that we must resist them so forcibly but the events of the last few months leave us no alternative, as we believe they are wrong. However, it is to be hoped that there are enough sane people on both sides, to prevent this war from decimating the world completely. EDWARD M. LITTLE.

In The Light Of World War I

Those who see nothing but disaster in the reports from the Pacific forget that in the World War the darkest days were just before the end. Although the Armistice was in November, in May it appeared that the Germans were winning the war.

The tragedy is that we have forgotten the glory of historic days and ignored the history of tremendous achievements. Let us not forget the cry of Premier Clemenceau, "Hold fast, for America comes!" And America did come!

In addition to other thousands, there came in May, 1918, 245,951 men; in June, 268,760; in July, 307,182. The Americans came as the Germans were winning striking successes. In three months they had conquered over 6000 square kilometers of land, which was more than the French and British in all their great battles in the Somme, at Arras and in Flanders had been able to win. By July 1, prior to the November Armistice, the Germans had captured nearly 200,000 prisoners. They had cut one British army to pieces; they had captured immense quantities of munitions, and had overrun great stretches of territory. They had brought the Allied cause to the brink of disaster.

On May 27, the Germans launched their offensive on a 30-mile front between Rheims and Soissons; the Allies were taken completely by surprise. With comparative ease, the Germans won their way.

It was apparent that the Germans were winning the war; they won smashing victory after victory until they arrived almost within sight of Paris. At Chateau-Thierry, two American divisions, the Second and the Third, were rushed by trains and motor trucks to the very point where the Germans were nearest Paris.

The valor of the Americans was so notable that the name of Belleau Wood was changed to "La Bois de la Brigade de Ma.ne."

While perhaps it is not proper to claim that the Americans in the Chateau-Thierry sector saved Paris, it can be said that the forward advance of the Germans in the last year of the war was definitely checked.

On June 9 the Germans struck another blow and had they succeeded they again would have had a broad front within striking distance of Paris.

Then came St. Mihiel. This salient had been held by the Germans since October of 1914. It had been strongly fortified. Six hundred thousand American troops, with some French, commenced the attack. It started on the morning of September 12, and in spite of mud and rain, St. Mihiel was taken. Sixteen thousand Germans were made prisoner. Twenty-seven hours after the attack began the salient was only a memory and more than 150 square miles of territory had been recovered. In the words of Gen. Pershing, "the Allies found they had a formidable army to aid them, and the enemy learned finally that he had one to reckon with."

Next followed the Argonne, a natural fortress. The Germans had prepared three and, in places, four lines of defense. They had the Hindenburg line, the powerful Kriemhilde Stellung; beyond that the Freya Stellung. The German lines consisted of trenches, concrete pill boxes, forts and dugouts. Years of occupation had taught them all phases of the terrain.

Six of the nine American divisions had never been in a real battle before. Most of the guns were French, machine guns were of the French Chauchat type, 140 tanks were French, and most of the 500 airplanes were French, but the men were Americans. At 2:30 on the morning of September 26, the preliminary bombardment began, and by night the Americans had advanced more than half a dozen miles. Thence, it was forward through six weeks of bloody effort, meeting with terrific German resistance at Montfaucon. The Germans continued to bring up an increasing number of divisions and guns and the degree of their resistance increased.

From September 28 until October 4 the Americans maintained the offensive. As the Germans continued to retreat they looted and destroyed the abandoned towns. Noyon was blown up by explosives and in the city of Lens not one of 10,000 houses was left standing. Machinery in the great coal mines was blown up and the mines flooded. The City of Cambrai was looted and destroyed by time devices.

In 90 days, the German offensive had been broken and the invaders had been driven back. From July 15 to October 1, the Allies had captured over 250,000 men and between 3500 and 4000 guns.

On November 11 came the Armistice, and the tremendous pride in the glory and achievements of the work of our men was one of the great chapters in our history. But although our men won the war, it remained for others to lose the peace.

It is well to recall the suggestion of Winston Churchill. "If we had kept together after the last war, if we had taken common measure for our safety, the renewal of the curse need never have fallen upon us."

Indeed it was Woodrow Wilson who warned, "All the nations that Germany meant to crush and reduce to the status of tools in her own hands have been redeemed by this war and given the guarantee of the strongest nations of the world that nobody shall invade their liberty again. If you do not want to give them that guarantee, then you make it certain that without your guarantee the attempt will be made again, and if another war starts like this one, are you going to keep out of it? If you keep out of this arrangement, that sort of war will come soon."

Now mankind faces its second chance. As Abraham Lincoln said, "We shall nobly save or meanly lose the last best hope of earth."

Moral Test

Wishing to always be of service, I am writing to say to all who see this and are interested in the morale which we all must have in this crisis, that not to have silk stockings, ride in a shiny car, on soft rubber tires, with a fat bank account will not render one miserable or leave a scar on one's character.

But the thing we must watch is how we take these things if to us they are privations.

It is possible that they are just what we need, to bring out the best, the bravest, and the strongest part of our characters, at a time when strength of purpose and determination is sorely needed.

Speaking modestly, I have lived a long time, seen the wars of every period since the aftermath of the Crimea, and have watched closely these nations and individuals who have weathered the storms of time and circumstance. They were not those who whined, shrank, and doubted.

But, they were the ones who with faith in the right, with a determination to succeed, bared the breasts, and went forward.

Do we have to go on wagon wheels? Is that the way we are destined to land? Let us be cheerful, thankful, anxious to do our bit for the cause of truth and right, to the best of our abilities, with no complaint. Anything in our beloved land is better than a concentration camp in the land of an enemy.

Many times standing before groups of people, trying to bring to them encouragement, and confidence, and determination to overcome, this illustration from a very old book, now little used, or little mentioned, "Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress," has come to me:

Caristian was traveling toward the Celestial City. In the way he went, after he had passed through the darkness of the forest infested by wild beasts, he saw at a distance in front of him two great lions. Looking back he thought to return the way he had come. That was out of the question, for he remembered the wild beasts he knew would devour him. Grasping his sword more firmly in his hand, and with confidence in the final victory, he went forward.

The lions stood their ground, giving not an inch. Nearer and ever nearer he came. Lashing their tails and roaring with rage, they stood, unmovable. But, as he came so near them he could feel the strength of their very being, he saw they were chained. With joy and gladness in his soul and thankfulness to God in his heart he went forward.

I only offer this as a humble suggestion, that we waver not, in the just cause of the right, and with faith in God go forward and as sure as we do we will find our lions chained.

Reclaim Scrap

The Government is complaining about the great shortage in scrap iron and steel and it is stated that some of the furnaces in Pittsburgh may have to shut down due to this so-called shortage.

There are hundreds of thousands of tons of steel rail in cities and communities scattered from Coast to Coast which have abandoned streetcars for buses, and the rails have never been taken up due to heavy labor costs.

Why not put the WPA workers on this job pronto and reclaim this scrap?

They might start right in New York City.

The Post Impressionist

Child Of The 90's

By the front door on the top terrace stood a single magnolia tree with varnished leaves and white wax flowers—a mysterious and beautiful tree with an overpowering scent. In the spring the grass on the terrace was bright green and full of wild garlic that had a strong smell, and we were told not to touch. On one side of the house was an old garden with a flowering peach tree in the corner. The blossoms came out before the leaves like a cloud of pink butterflies. There was an almond tree and ne ar the wall a high hedge of yellow forsythia that made me think of scrambled eggs.

I remember standing at the French windows in the dining room looking into this garden during a rainstorm. Spring was coming and I was by myself. When the rain stopped, suddenly a robin began to sing. It was a wonderful song. I have never forgotten the feeling that stirred me, so strong and strange that I breathed hard or else would have cried. It had something to do with the exultant song of the birds, the fresh, intoxicating smell of earth just turned, and Nature and myself.

This garden went long ago, and with it the forbidding bleak stone house. St. Matthew's, the Catholic cathedral, has filled in all the space. People are always going up the wide, low steps to the church and coming out again crossing themselves. Rome and incense creep out into the street. The same magnolia that stood on our terrace has grown to be an enormous tree and is standing next door in front of the priest's large brick-and-sandstone house.

In the Williams House I remember my father delivered a speech on Chinese immigration and passed some bill in Congress. I learned to rollerskate and every day made large holes in the knees of my red cashmere stockings. I beat my older brother in a spelling match and won $5 by repeating "Sheridan's Ride" without mistake. Otherwise we spent our time with governesses and learned nothing. It was a colorless period with few friends.

One afternoon I was allowed to drive to the Capitol when the carriage called for my father. I remember the immense corridors, so high and cold, and holding tightly to my father's hand. He took me into the old Congressional Library, which was then established in the Capitol. There were rows of cell-like rooms with grated doors. Inside were books knee-deep on the floor and cascading from the shelves. They were all bound alike in red and there was a close stuffy smell of leather and old paper.

On this same visit we went into the Supreme Court, which was empty. This of course was long before the new Supreme Court Building. My father pointed to the little gallery above the justices' bench and said very solemnly, "My dear, when I was a young man I stood in that very gallery and heard Daniel Webster and Henry Clay speak from this floor where you and I are standing." I was awed and have never forgotten what he said.

When my father was a young man the Supreme Court had been the Senate Chamber. This was before the two wings had been added to the Capitol. In the House of Representatives, which is now Statuary Hall, my father had three much older brothers all serving as members of Congress at the same time from three different States. He was still in college and used to visit his brothers during the holidays. This was in the days of President Fillmore, whose "levees," as the White House receptions were then called, he was allowed to attend with his brothers. My father was an ambitious young man and wanted to follow in the footsteps of his brothers. They thought well of this much younger brother, whom they called "Young Rapid," and watched his progress with pride.

In the Williams House there were many receptions and dinners and much making of calls every afternoon. My mother was always coming and going and changing her frock. She used a vague, sweet scent—a pale perfume that drifted after her as she passed through the halls. Her skirts made a quick, rustling sound. That winter she wore often a dinner gown of ashes of lavender peau de soie, with rows and rows of fine fringe made of tiny topez beads. It made a rippling sound when she moved that was fascinating. I remember the frock because she had it on one night when I was on my way to supper in the nursery. Her door opened suddenly and she came quickly down the hall dressed to go out. I stopped to look, and she saw me and bent and kissed me goodnight. There was that sweet scent very close and all about.

My mother wore bracelets on each wrist, outside her long, pale gloves. She had tiny hands that made me think of the small paws of a mouse, and such little feet. Her brown hair was smooth as satin and parted in the middle, with stiff, regular waves on either side. When she was a young girl these waves had ended in three little curls over each ear—like Dora's in "David Copperfield." There is a portrait of her in an oval frame with the brown curls and in a low, red bodice slipping off her sloping, white shoulders.

Nearly every evening there would be a stirring and moving in the house and my father calling. Then the quick rustling of silk and the front door would close, and going down the street would be the brisk "clop-clop" of the horses' feet on the asphalt pavement keeping perfect time. The house was without a sound afterward and the lights turned low.

War Production

By Ernest Lindley

No Room For Those Who Say 'Can't'

THE PRESIDENT'S war program was truly staggering. It staggered our allies—the British and Chinese admitted it. It staggered our enemies, judging by the apoplectic reaction from Germany. It staggered some of the neutral or friendly nonbelligerent nations—which may prove helpful at the coming Inter-American Conference of Foreign Ministers at Rio de Janeiro. And it staggered some American industrialists—including a number connected with the administration of the war program in Washington.

LINDLEY

Are the goals set by the President attainable? The answer of the best-informed statisticians and analysts in the Government is "Yes—but only by the maximum expenditure of effort in the most efficient ways." The President chose his figures—for this calendar year, 60,000 planes, 45,000 tanks, 20,000 anti-aircraft guns, and eight million tons of shipping, and other items in proportion—only after careful calculations of the American potential. He could have chosen somewhat smaller figures and been reasonably confident of beating them. Instead he chose the estimated maximum attainable: he challenged the American people to do what they have never done before and what no other nation on earth could hope to do—unless the Nazis should succeed in getting full control of the resources of all Europe and Africa.

For this calendar year the program calls for spending 45 billion dollars on actual munitions. The rest is for soldiers' and sailors' pay and other operating costs of the armed services. This means a more or less steadily rising line of production, which by December must reach a rate of 60 billion dollars a year. This rate of expenditure, on munitions alone, will be pushed even higher in 1943—by how much no one now can say.

CALCULATIONS by Government experts show that the United States has everything needed to fulfill this program: materials, men and machines.

By the end of 1942 this program will require almost every pound of every metal which can be produced or which has been stored or can be salvaged in this country, excepting a small amount of iron and steel. And most of this remaining iron and steel will be needed for essential civilian purposes contributing to the war. It will mean that the manufacture of almost every type of consumers' durable goods must stop—not only automobiles but nearly anything you can think of that contains metal. Even so, Nation-wide salvage campaigns will be needed, and even in certain lines of war production simplification and conservation may have to be applied.

BY THE END of 1942, if this program is achieved, between 15 and 20 million workers will be employed in direct war production, or about three times as many as are now so employed. Counting indirect war production, the total may approach 30 million. We have the man power to handle that, especially since so many workers must be transferred from civilian production.

However, a longer workweek is unavoidable. The program as a whole now appears to be about 50 per cent above the pre-Pearl Harbor plan for 1942. The rise varies with individual items. Much of the increase must come from extra shifts and longer hours of work. There is not time to build enough new machine tools to do the job on a 40 to 50 hour week.

At present, according to Government sources, the average working week in the defense industries is only about 42 hours. The machine-tool industry is averaging about 52. By the end of this year the average workweek should be between 55 and 60 hours, according to Government estimates. The British have found 57 hours efficient and are now setting as a standard 60 for men and 55 for women.

It is now estimated, however, that an overall shortage of labor will not arise unless more than five million men are called into the armed services. Decisions on the size of our armed services remain open. Much depends on the course of the war. Certainly the American armed forces will be enlarged. But there is immense man power in Russia and China, if weapons can be put in its hands in time, and there is another large reserve in India.

The highest of the three hurdles—materials, men and machines—now appears to be machines. The goal cannot be achieved unless existing machines are converted and pooled for war purposes. As to the extent that this is possible, experts disagree. But it would seem to be elementary that the men—in industry and OPM—who have said all along that conversion was impracticable must be shelved. Those who said it could be done and who are confident they can do it must be given their chance. Men who say "can't" are unsuited for this most stupendous of war-production programs.

The Gallup Poll

Drafting Single Women for Wartime Training Is Favored by Large Majority in U. S. Survey

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Jan. 8.—Drafting of single women between the ages of 21 and 35 to train them for wartime jobs is favored by an overwhelming majority of American voters polled in a Nation-wide survey by the American Institute of Public Opinion.

More than a year ago Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt raised the question of drafting young women for defense training and said that "the time is coming when we are going to have to face this question." Today the drafting of young women is not only favored by the country at large, but also by a substantial majority of women in the 21-35 age group itself. In Britain, under the new conscription law, all women 18 to 51 are required to register for service.

A Radical Step

Such conscription in the United States would of course represent a radical step away from past tradition. However, the adoption of the draft law for men in 1940, when the United States was still at peace, likewise represented a radical departure from tradition, and it will be recalled that the Institute was the first to show that the common people of the country were prepared to accept that step before any major political leader had advocated it.

The poll on drafting women was conducted on the following issue:

"Would you be in favor of starting now to draft single women between the ages of 21 and 35 to train them for wartime jobs?"

Yes	68%
No	26
Undecided	6

More than a year ago, in December, 1940, an Institute survey on a similar issue found the Nation about evenly divided on the question of drafting all women, whether married or single, between the ages of 21 and 35.

Women Like Idea

In today's survey the women interviewed were more enthusiastic about the female draft idea than the men, as the following table indicates:

Favor Drafting Women	63%	73%
Opposed	31	20
Undecided	6	7

Women in the age bracket 21-35 were found substantially in favor of the proposal, their vote averaging 7 points higher than that for the country as a whole.

	Vote of Women Aged 21-35
Favor Drafting Women	75%
Opposed	19

Although Britain was the first of the warring democracies to adopt conscription of women, it is interesting to note that the American public is more in favor of the idea than the British public was.

The British public's reaction was measured in early December—before the British conscription act was adopted—by the British Institute of Public Opinion, with the following results:

Poll in Britain

"Would you approve or disapprove of the government compelling women to join the women's auxiliary forces?"

Approve	55%
Disapprove	35

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

THIS WILL BE an account of a notable contribution to the cause of unity by Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt.

Tuesday night Mrs. Roosevelt and two friends, one of them being her protege, that veteran and inveterate professional youth, Joe Lash, late of the Communist front, approached the Mansfield Theater with tickets for a play called "In Time to Come," which is a story of President Wilson's war administration. Observing two pickets from Local 802 of the American Federation of Musicians blockading the place, Mrs. Roosevelt refused to enter and got her money back.

Otto Preminger, the producer of the play, reports that Mrs. Roosevelt said: "I can't cross a picket-line—fair or unfair," and Local 802 states that the New York Times account of the incident in which she was so quoted is "substantially correct."

"In Time to Come" is an all-union show, employing 66 persons, including a pancake turner which is a man who plays a phonograph record. Any child can play a phonograph record, but under unionism this is a high-salaried trade. Preminger says the pancake in question is played less than 2 minutes. The union claims it is played longer, but will not say how long. Incidentally, the record was made by union musicians in a union factory.

THE UNION demanded that Preminger hire four musicians to do nothing, at $337.50 a week. He said his box-office couldn't bear that overload, but said he would accept one first musician at $112.50 a week to do nothing and when that offer was refused he proposed to post $337.50 a week in escrow and submit the dispute to any public agency having jurisdiction. This was rejected also and the pickets showed up ten minutes before Mrs. Roosevelt appeared with her idea of a model for American youth and one other.

Aside from the unmistakably Hitlerian attitude toward the art of the drama, which is revealed in this conduct, Mrs. Roosevelt here gave support to a plain, undisguised racket. There is no dispute here between an employer and any worker. Preminger employs no musicians whatever and has no use for any and the union is simply trying to shake down a businessman at the rate of $337.50 a week as the price of forbearance. No employes are on strike and the same union itself crossed a picket line some months ago when a teamsters' outfit tried to make a musician pay a teamster to convey to a theater a piccolo about the size of a pencil which he carried in his pocket.

THE INTERNATIONAL PRESIDENT of the union is Jimmy Petrillo, of Chicago, who is also president of the Chicago local and draws combined salaries, expenses, perquisites and allowances of about $50,000 a year.

The president of Local 802 is Jacob Rosenberg, who was himself charged some time ago with patronizing with his family a summer resort at which a non-union orchestra was employed, but beat the rap. Petrillo says, "there was nothing to it;" the scandal was silenced.

Rosenberg is an East Sider with an old Tammany background, and unlimited power to persecute individuals and a vast power of patronage derived from the treasury composed of dues, fees, assessments and other contributions, including undisguised income taxes, on a membership whose economic condition is desperate.

ROSENBERG also turns out a union publication at the expense of the members in which he heaps praise on himself and last fall, when he ran for the New York City Council, he used this journal to ballyhoo his ambition and had the gall to announce that he would "look forward eagerly to the support of our members," most of whom undoubtedly took rapturous joy in slitting his throat at the public polls. Two pages of that issue were devoted to his candidacy and Rosenberg tried to hitch his wagon to Fiorello LaGuardia's, describing himself as a candidate on "the LaGuardia American-Labor Party ticket." He was slaughtered on election day, but he had gained a little personal advertising and herewith gets some more.

Incidentally, Lash, whose nerve equals and resembles Rosenberg's, put in for a commission as lieutenant, junior grade, in the Naval Intelligence some time back, but an informant reports that not even Mrs. Roosevelt's influence could put that one over.

And, finally, the constitution of this union, whose picket line Mrs. Roosevelt respects, "fair or unfair," as her contribution to unity, contains an absolute provision that Petrillo may suspend any part or all of it at will and substitute his own as the government of the economic lives of thousands of American workers.

Battle For Control

By Mark Sullivan

Directing The Automobile Industry

READERS of newspaper dispatches can gather that there is in Washington a tense battle for control of the automobile industry, as industry moves its facilities into a pool for making warplanes and other armament. But daily dispatches dealing with immediate developments can hardly give the reader an understanding of the whole scope and real significance of the struggle.

SULLIVAN

The battle is between, on one side, businessmen and industrialists and, on the other side, an alliance of—as Gen. Hugh Johnson puts it—"labor leaders and the type of young economist that has helped to shape most of the theories and practices of the . . . New Deal." The alliance between the labor leaders, especially those of C. I. O. and the so-called young New Dealers in the Administration, is very close, so close that it is not unusual to speak of the Administration as a "labor Government."

The immediate issue is whether the automobile industry, as merged into a pool, shall be directed by the owners and managers of the plants, working as a group—or be managed by a body set up by the Administration and composed as follows: An equal number of heads of the industry, an equal number of labor leaders and representatives appointed by the Administration.

ON THIS momentary issue, the labor leaders and New Dealers have a tactical advantage. It happens that, about a year ago, one of the labor leaders proposed and publicly promoted a plan for pooling the automobile industry. The plan was embraced and pushed by New Dealers in the Administration. But the plan, at that time, was ignored or decried by heads of the automobile industry and by businessmen generally, including some in the defense organization. Inasmuch as it now turns out that pooling is to be done, there is some force in the argument that the pool should be managed by those who first proposed and pushed it, not by those who in the beginning were unsympathetic to it.

But it would be utterly misleading and fallacious to think of this battle as an incident standing alone. This battle is a momentary climax in a struggle going back before we were in the war, before we began our organization for defense, before war of defense was thought of—back as far as the time when the New Deal was getting into momentum and C. I. O. was organized. During all this time, the New Deal has had a project for changing the whole status of privately owned industry.

It is not a plan for complete or immediate government ownership and operation (except perhaps as to public utilities such as TVA). It is, rather, a plan for gradually reducing the powers of ownership and management. Just how far the powers of owners and managers were to be reduced has never been stated in any form that could be called an authoritative expression of the New Deal as a whole. Expressions from individual New Dealers have indicated that the process was to be carried to the vanishing point. In the plan, the powers taken away from owners and managers are transferred partly to labor leaders, partly to agencies within the Administration.

THIS PROCESS has been under way some six or seven years at least. It was in June 1937 that Mr. Walter Lippmann, writing of President Roosevelt as symbolic of the New Deal pholosophy as a whole, wrote: "I feel . . . that he really does have a plan and that he is determined to execute it . . . It is a plan, as I see it, to gather together an irresistible power over the economic life of this country and to consolidate that power in the hands of his own following . . ."

With the setting up of our great organization of industry and Government for defense, nearly two years ago, it was apparent that the New Deal plan about industry could be facilitated. Great power had to be given the Administration for defense and war. Obviously it was possible to use these powers in such a way as to further the New Deal plan.

The so-called "young New Dealers," and their labor leader associates, were alert to opportunity. And, of course, the businessmen were alert to what they regarded as menace, including the businessmen brought to Washington to aid in defense organization. As reported by Messrs. Alsop and Kintner, on January 29 of last year: "The defense organization has been increasingly afflicted by a schism between the businessmen on the one hand and labor leaders and New Dealers on the other." About President Roosevelt, Messrs. Alsop and Kintner reported, ". . . the President has always tried to compromise between them."

ONE COMPROMISE consisted of giving exactly equal power to an industrialist, Mr. William Knudsen, and a C. I. O. leader, Mr. Sidney Hillman. But about that solution, Mr. Arthur Krock wrote in the New York Times, March 2, 1941: "The political link between the C. I. O. and the Administration is strong. If an issue arose between Mr. Knudsen and Mr. Hillman, very few persons here believe that the industrialist would be sustained."

Mr. Krock, writing a year ago, said that the condition here described "is a fundamental reason for the delays, confusion and waste which have hampered the progress of the defense program." The condition continues to this day. The delay continues to this day.

To recite all this is futile unless we see the lesson in it. We are engaged in a war for our very existence. Winning the war depends on maximum efficiency of the Nation's industrial structure. This efficiency is delayed and impaired by a struggle between two groups over a fundamental domestic issue. This issue must be faced and solved before we can, as we hear over the radio, "keep 'em flying."

Special Jap Corps Exploits, Corrupts Conquered Areas

(As a war correspondent for the Associated Press during the first two years of the Chinese-Japanese War, Lloyd Lehrbas had a close-up of the Japanese exploitation technique. He reports on it here.)

By Lloyd Lehrbas

Associated Press Staff Writer

The Japanese army has an elite corps called the "Special Service Section," which, on the basis of its record in past Japanese conquests, can be expected to play a major role in exploitation of the Philippines.

What the S. S. S. is doing in Manila is yet to be disclosed, but the known record of its widespread operations in occupied China shows the possibilities.

The "Special Service Section" is the army's hand-picked and powerful unit for accumulating vast funds for operations for which no accounting is ever made, and for permitting high ranking officers to feather their own nests in the process—all at the expense of the conquered peoples.

The Japanese army itself maintains the polite fiction of the Samurai code of spotless incorruptibility, relegating to the S. S. S. a monopoly on plundering occupied territories.

Japanese officers, frequently in uniform, direct its operations down to the smallest detail, and Japanese "ronin" (gangsters) and Korean camp followers do the dirty work.

Profits Pile Up

Profits in occupied China—which are still piling up—amount to millions of dollars annually from special licenses, taxes, fees, monopoly, exactions, protection payments, cuts on narcotic sales and ransoms from kidnapings.

After many years, and against great odds, the Chinese government had finally made considerable progress in eradicating opium smoking. Within a few days after Japanese troops occupied areas around Shanghai a gigantic Japanese-dominated opium monopoly sprang up, with the "Special Service Section" providing the opium and other narcotics, furnishing protection, and handling all finances.

A special United States Treasury agent in Shanghai forwarded to Washington a comprehensive report on the detailed operations, naming the Japanese S. S. S. officers.

Opium smoke curled in the wake of the advancing Japanese army. Mme. Chiang Kai-shek, wife of the generalissimo, charged that the Japanese had set out on a deliberate campaign to drug the Chinese into a nation of slaves.

An American missionary, in a detailed survey of the Japanese-sponsored narcotics business in Nanking, counted more than 600 opium dives which were licensed and protected by the S. S. S. and estimated that one in eight of Nanking's population had become users of narcotics.

Almost as soon as the army had sentries posted along the borders of the International Settlement at Shanghai after conquest of the Chinese area in November, 1937, the S. S. S. began selling licenses for gambling houses and brothels, and collecting a percentage of all profits.

Hot Spots Wide Open

At the "Hollywood," "Bee-Ba-Bo," "Flower Club" and two score more gambling houses seen by many Americans and other foreigners the customer could play everything from roulette to craps, with a free pipe of opium, a pretty little Cantonese girl, and a free taxi ride home.

An American official reported that a main residential street in Peiping leading to the American School was lined with Japanese S. S. S. brothels, and that the once proud capital of the Chinese empire had "at least" 2000 "entertainment establishments" with a monthly income of seven million dollars (Chinese currency).

One Japanese major had the monopoly on taxing all eggs and egg products shipped down the Yangtze River from Nanking, one of the world's greatest egg-producing centers, which normally sent shiploads of frozen and packed and canned eggs to Europe. He collected handsomely, pocketed part of the levy, passed some on to his superior officers, and contributed the remainder to the S. S. S. coffers.

Another officer had the monopoly on collecting taxes on all hogs shipped to Shanghai, while others collected on all incoming or outgoing shipments of cotton, gasoline, rice, chickens—everything down to the lowly and smelly Chinese cabbage which every Chinese ate.

Art And Reality

By O. Savich

An Operatic Deed

GLINKA'S IVAN SUSSANIN is usually considered the first great Russian opera. Its story concerns an alien invasion of Russia in 1612. The invaders are looking for a monastery where the young Czar is hiding. They don't know the road and they demand that an old peasant, Ivan Sussanin, show them the way.

Sussanin divines their purpose and leads the enemy troops off into the depths of a forest. They kill him but perish themselves.

This opera was recently revived in the Soviet Union. It was performed all over the country and achieved immense popularity. The audiences considered Sussanin the embodiment of Russia's unfailing patriotism.

Not long ago a man in peasant's garb appeared before the German commander in the small town of Rechitsa, near Gomel. The visitor gave the name of Yarikov and said he knew the hiding place of a guerrilla detachment that had given the Germans a great deal of trouble. He seemed to know the region perfectly and, moreover, betrayed a convincing avarice.

THE GERMANS had offered a reward to anyone giving information about the guerrillas. Yarikov was anxious to learn when and where he would receive the promised payment.

Two hundred Germans and two armored cars were told off for the expedition. Yarikov warned that the armored cars would not be able to get through the narrow forest paths. This warning heightened the Germans' confidence in him. Nevertheless, he was repeatedly reminded that the commander of the expedition would not allow him out of reach for a moment and, in case of treachery, would put a bullet in the back of his head.

The armored cars had to be left on the edge of the forest. Even in single file the German infantry found the forest path difficult. Yarikov kept close to the commander. He seemed to be afraid, and the soldiers scoffed at him.

Frequently he came across signs that seemed to have a secret meaning for him. The Germans were convinced they would take the guerrillas by surprise. "That guide knows his job," they told each other.

After a long march they reached a small enclosed clearing. Shots rang out. No opponents could be seen, but German soldiers fell one after another. Their own disorderly fire obviously did no damage. Fearing they would be wiped out, the Germans began to withdraw. But their retreat had been cut off.

THE COMMANDER seized Yarikov by the shoulder. "I promised to lead you to the guerrillas," the guide said. "Here they are."

"Are you laughing at us?" the commander cried. He saw that Yarikov was indeed laughing. He fired. The bullet struck Yarikov not in the back of the head, as had been threatened, but in the chest. Only a handful of Germans returned to Rechitsa. When the survivors, after forcing their way out of the forest, reached the road, they found their armored cars in flames.

The story of Yarikov was told by one of the German survivors who soon after was captured by our troops.

It used to be said, when such a tale was told: "That only happens in operas." But when the war came it turned out that such bravery was inherent in our people. What the opera related of Ivan Sussanin was not only true in our past, but in our present and future. Great art is immortal because the heroism that inspires it is immortal.

The Russian Advance

By Barnet Nover

The Eastern Front After Six Weeks

IT IS NOW approximately six weeks since the tide of battle began to turn in Russia. On November 22 the German high command jubilantly announced the capture of Rostov, gateway to the Caucasus. The following week saw the German drive on Moscow reaching its peak of intensity with the German radio claiming, on November 25, that Hitler's troops were within 18½ miles of the Russian capital. It turns out this was an exaggeration. Nonetheless, the Russians admitted, on November 27, that Moscow was in dire peril.

NOVER

Two days later—on November 29—the Russians recaptured Rostov. The German advance into Russia which had begun on June 22 and had continued at varying rates of speed for more than six months, was over; the German retreat had begun.

It was too early late in November or early in December to talk of a German rout. It is premature to talk in such terms even now. Yet the fact remains that since November 29 the Germans have been moving to the rear with the Russians giving them no rest, no chance to dig in anywhere along the far-flung front.

TWO AND A HALF years elapsed between Napoleon's disastrous retreat from Moscow and his final defeat at Waterloo, even though of the 500,000 men who made up the Grande Armee which had invaded Russia in the summer of 1812 only 35,000 reached Danzig on the return trip some months later.

The Wehrmacht has suffered no comparable losses in Russia thus far. Its actual and potential strength remains great. We are warned of this by the British ministry of economic warfare which, after a careful survey, has announced that Germany is today turning out the same volume of mechanized equipment and more aircraft and more submarines than she did last spring.

The Russians have made an enormous contribution to the common cause. Yet we cannot for a moment afford to be complacent over what has been happening on the Eastern Front.

The fight is nowhere won. This point needs no underlining in the Pacific where the Japanese continue to press forward. It is no less true in Libya where despite the considerable and gratifying gains made by the British the battle's outcome cannot yet be taken for granted. The same goes for Russia.

THE GERMANS have suffered a great, it may be a decisive, defeat in Russia. But whether it is decisive or not will depend not so much on what has happened thus far as on what happens now.

Should the Russian drive in the north, the center and the south continue until spring, the Germans may never have a chance of reforming their lines, once good weather returns, and reversing the tide that has set in against them. Certainly as long as their retreat continues they may think twice before taking the offensive on any large scale in other theaters of the war. A continued retreat may not only have a shattering effect on German morale but is certain also to reduce to the vanishing point that belief in Nazi invincibility which has been one of Hitler's most potent weapons in the field of diplomacy.

SIGNS ARE MULTIPLYING that Hitler's belligerent and nonbelligerent allies are beginning to reexamine their position in the light of events on the Eastern Front as well as in the light of America's entry into the war.

The Vichy weathervane is again swinging away from Berlin, despite the strong wind blowing from that quarter. Finland is in a state of mental turmoil, all the more acute in view of the possibility that a further German retreat on the Leningrad front may expose her to the full fury of Russian attack. Should the Russian offensive in the Crimea continue, the resistance which the Turks have thus far shown to German demands would unquestionably be intensified.

These possibilities of a break in the Axis coalition, like the possibility of a crack-up within Germany herself, are beginning to receive some attention in this country and elsewhere. It is well to keep in mind that they are only possibilities, not realities. It is far safer to be caught unawares by good tidings than by new dangers.

FOR THIS REASON we cannot for a moment afford the luxury of complacence in contemplating recent developments on the Eastern Front, encouraging as those developments have been. The struggle in which the whole world is now involved is likely to be long and is certain to be hard. The program of production of planes, tanks, guns and ships which the President has announced literally staggers the imagination and will cost more money than we have had to spend for all governmental purposes from 1789 to date. Yet events may prove that it understates rather than overstates the needs of the United Nations.

In any case, we must not mistake future production for present achievement. Were the planes, tanks, guns, ships which we hope to turn out in 1943 or even by the end of the present year now available, the outlook we and our allies face in the Pacific, which the British face to the Mediterranean and which confronts the Russians on the Eastern Front would be very bright indeed.

On the basis of current American output, however, our optimism must be rigidly qualified. We plan to redeem the past by hypothecating the future. But that future in which we shall have outstripped the Axis in the production of every type of war materiel is still, unfortunately, far off. What Russia has done during the past six weeks is magnificent. It is still too early to assume that it is conclusive.

Ice Skating was one of the more vigorous methods of keeping warm yesterday when the temperature fell to seven above zero—25 degress below freezing—for the second consecutive day.

Skaters, who've been confined to indoor rinks because of the mild winter season, went outdoors yesterday, and found the ice smooth and strong at the Kenilworth Aquatic Gardens, Rock Creek Duck Pond, and the C. & O. Canal near Cabin John, Md.

The Reflecting Pool at Lincoln Memorial, favorite skating spot here, may be opened to the public today, if the ice becomes four inches thick. Best bet before trudging down there, though, is to check with Park Police (RE. 1820).

The weatherman predicts light snow and slowly rising temperatures for today, after an early morning drop that may go as low as zero—something that hasn't occurred here in seven years.

In other words, according to the weatherman, perfect skating weather.

R. A. F. Raids Capital of Fabled Thailand, Now in Jap Hands

By the Associated Press

Rangoon, Burma, Jan. 8. Flying more than 300 miles over jungle and mountain bases in Burma, five aircraft of American volunteers operating with the British air force attacked airdromes near Bangkok today in the second raid in 24 hours on the Thailand capital and nearby airdromes.

The raid followed hard after an R. A. F. assault last night which left huge fires blazing amid military objectives in Bangkok in the war's first allied thrust against Thailand, carrying the war close to the fabled road to Mandalay.

The Americans, said a communique from combined army and R. A. F. headquarters here, certainly destroyed seven enemy planes on the ground and probably destroyed an eighth.

One of the raiders was missing after today's attack. In the opening raid all planes returned safely.

The destruction of the seven planes today—believed to have been bombers—brings to 53 the total of Japanese aircraft known to have been destroyed from Burma, and in addition 20 or 30 more have been declared probably destroyed.

(The quick assaults on Bangkok may be a prelude to even more determined assaults on Thailand, including perhaps an Allied invasion. Chungking has reported that Chinese troops are massed at the three-corners junction of China, Burma and Thailand.

(Effective action in Thailand might cut off the Japanese from overland support in their determined drive on Singapore, and it would take away from the Japanese air bases they now are finding useful in their drive down the Malaya peninsula.)

In last night's raid the British made heavy and concentrated attacks on the Bangkok dock area, which, is reported by the Rangoon radio to have suffered severe damage.

JAP PUSH IN MALAYA—Kuala Lumpur is objective of Jáp drive down road from Ipoh. British launched counter-offensive in Kuala Selangor sector. Japs have also reached Kuantan, on east coast, 190 miles north of Singapore

As the British fliers returned homeward they reported they could see the fires burning for miles.

(Axis sources said the Thailand Hospital, the French Church and the Bank of Indo-China were damaged by bombs and asserted that several civilians were killed. The Axis said that three fires resulted from the raid.)

Jap Planes Scouting Dutch East Indies

Batavia, Jan. 8 (AP).—Japanese long-range reconnaissance planes scouted the outer islands of the scattered Netherlands Indies today hunting new targets for the big bombers which have attacked the Dutch naval bases on the Island of Amboina twice this week.

The planes flew high and there were no reports of bombings since yesterday, when seven bombers dropped explosives on Amboina, between the Celebes and New Guinea.

Eight Japanese flying boats had bombed and machine gunned the base the day before.

(The Australians said Japanese planes had been seen making reconnaissance flights over the Archipelago.)

The Netherlands Indies, meanwhile, prepared for heavier air attacks by putting air raid precautions into effect.

Fears were expressed that the danger of spreading fires would be more serious than in England because of the greater proportion of wooden buildings here.

Special measures have been taken to ensure continued operation of water, gas and electric services.

Pupils Meet Indian Chief

Chief Red Bird, 73-year-old head of the Cheyenne Indian Nation, away from his native State of Oklahoma for the first time, yesterday stopped autographing children's papers at the Peabobdy School long enough to observe that Washington had too many cars and they gave him a "headache."

The chief was in town to see if he is entitled to a Government pension for his work as an Army scout back in 1887 and to meet in person a group of youngsters at the Peabody School who have long admired him.

The acquaintance began two years ago when Martin Cunningham, secretary to Representative Jed Johnson, of Oklahoma, gave his daughter, Carolyn, a picture of Chief Red Bird to take to her classroom. She and her classmates were studying Indians at the time. Later the chief heard that his picture was in the class and sent others.

The Indian chief stepped into the national spotlight when he camped on the lawn of the Watonga Postoffice in Oklahoma objecting to a mural painting there. The picture showed Cheyenne Indians with too few clothes on, he said. He won his point and the picture was corrected.

Yesterday he was inundated by bright-eyed girls and boys from Peabody who besieged him for his autograph. He was dressed in full warbonnet.

Victuals and Vitamins to Hold the Line on the Home Front

Here's Uncle Sam's transportation system loaded with foods containing miracle elements—minerals and vitamins. The foods pictured are the ones needed daily—fruits and vegetables, milk, butter, eggs and whole wheat bread. The salad plate is vitamin-filled with beneficial food elements. Group slices of California oranges on one side of plate and banana quarters in lettuce leaves on the opposite side. Prunes stuffed with cottage cheese fill the center.

'Fit as a Fiddle' Good Health Defense Slogan

By Martha Ellyn
The Post Food Editor

"FIT as a fiddle" would be a good slogan to adopt as a gesture toward health defense. Never before has the toast to health been more genuine than right now. Through the holidays most of us have had a fling at rich food and now it is time to get back to normal both for health and waist lines.

We must all be conscious of the necessity of minerals and vitamins in our diets or we will have to pay for the omission of them in bad health and lowered vitality. No one can afford not to keep "fit as a fiddle" in these strenuous days, so as to carry on consistently with the "extras" that make such a contribution to victory defense.

Martha Ellyn

Some skeptics may counter with the idea, "vitamins and minerals are not really foods." They are not foods in the literal sense, but they are vital food factors. They perform a great function in enabling our bodies to make better use of the foods we do eat. Here are their functions:

They serve as regulators of the body.

They help in building strong bones and tissues.

They supply energy.

Here's What Happens

If these two elements are not included in the diet what happens? Here are some of the things that can result: jittery nerves, poor digestion, bad teeth, malformed bones, poor vision at night.

Very few persons like all foods. Some do not eat the necessary elements because they dislike them. Others have "inherited" a taste or distaste of certain foods, because as children they imitated dad or mother in the foods they ate.

Then, too, with the refinement of foods through the years, some needed substances have been lost. Because of the removal of parts of the wheat that contain most of its minerals and vitamins to make about 90 per cent of the wheat flour now used in making bread, we are now being offered "enriched" bread. So it is with many other foods now being fortified.

When you see a food container marked "enriched" don't think it is only a food fad. The enrichment of foods is the result of rock-ribbed scientific findings. Milk is now being fortified with Vitamin D. Breakfast cereals are also being supplemented with vitamins and minerals. An enriched breakfast food can give you all the essential qualities of 100 per cent whole wheat, for it has vitamin B1 and vitamin G needed for normal growth, for maintenance of normal appetite, for normal functioning of the nervous system and iron and phosphorus needed to make red blood (iron) and strong bones and teeth (phosphorus).

Other Factors Necessary

But the enrichment of foods such as have been mentioned, is not all that is necessary in our daily diet. To have a balanced diet we must eat vegetables, fruits, meat, butter, eggs, cheese and a number of other foods. Oranges, grapefruit, lemons, apples and tangerines may not be vitamin labeled, but they are just as valuable as if they were. Fresh citrus fruits are a necessary part of the well-balanced diet for they stimulate the appetite and aid digestion, they build resistance to infections, they aid in the development of perfect teeth and good bone structure as well as guard against decay or gum troubles, they assist in the manufacture and maintenance of a healthy blood supply and act as natural, mild regulators.

Vegetables, too, are important because of their minerals and vitamins. It is necessary they be fresh, because the more quickly the vegetable reaches the table from the garden, the finer will be the flavor and the greater the nutritional value. The reason our forefathers were such sturdy individuals may have been because they grew their own fruits and vegetables and ate them fresh from the garden. Of course, we can't dash to garden, summer or winter, but we can select the fresh foods of the markets or buy those that are canned or quick-frozen at their prime.

Let's plan a dinner menu that is thrifty, nutritious and attractive. Here is one that is miles away from the rich traditional foods we have been eating through the holiday season:

Baked Glazed Ham

Green Beans with Cheese
Baked Stuffed Sweet Potatoes
Jellied Beet Ring Cole Slaw
Whole Wheat Rolls Butter
Orange Chiffon Pie
Coffee Milk

Baked Stuffed Sweet Potatoes—Select and wash 4 medium sized sweet potatoes or yams. Bake in moderate oven, 425 degrees, until tender. Cut a slice from top of potato; scoop potato pulp from shells, put through ricer or sieve. Add 1 tablespon sirup, 2 tablespoons butter, ½-teaspoon salt and whip until fluffy. Pile lightly into shells; top with butter. Brown lightly under broiler just before serving.

A Jellied Beet Ring is both an attractive and nutritious salad when filled with crisp cole slaw. Follow this recipe:

Jellied Beet Ring—Soften 1 tablespoon plain gelatine in ¼ cup hot water, stir until dissolved. Add 2 tablespoons sirup, 1 teaspoon salt, 3 tablespoons horseradish, 3 tablespoons vinegar and 2 tablespoons lemon juice. Cool. When mixture begins to thicken, stir in 1 cup diced cooked celery, 1 cup diced cooked beets. Rinse a ring mold with cold water and turn gelatine mixture into it. Chill until firm. Fill center with slaw made by cutting cabbage fine, and adding salt, sugar and vinegar.

Meat in Diet May Prevent That 'All-Gone' Feeling

Emphasis is being placed on the inclusion of meat in scientific reducing diets. The safe reducing diet is based on plenty of proteins, vitamins and minerals, with just enough fats and carbohydrates to enable the body to consume its own fat for energy purposes.

To carry on its normal functions during a reducing period, the body requires certain food essentials — proteins, vitamins, minerals, just enough carbohydrates to enable the body to "burn up" its own fat, and bulk. First in this list are proteins.

Proteins are required for tissue repair and maintenance. The amount of proteins needed daily is the same whether one is reducing or not. Many foods contain proteins, but not all of them contain proteins of the same high qualtiy. Lean meat is an ideal protein food for a reducing diet.

Meat also helps supply adequate minerals and vitamins which are important factors in the properly organized, safe reducing diet. Many reducing diets are abandoned before they have accomplished their purpose, because they are uninteresting, unappetizing and weakening.

Meat, with its universal appetite appeal, encourages the dieter to continue. This food also has high satiety value, as part of the well-balanced diet, gives the dieter a feeling of satisfaction and enjoyment, and prevents the "all-gone" feeling which so often has proved discouraging.

Casserole Ooomph

Line a casserole with cinnamon toast left over from breakfast, cover with sweetened stewed apricots and bake in a moderately hot over for 15 minutes. Serve hot or cold with cream for a pudding that is deliciously different.

Drink Banana For Health

A banana milk shake that even children can make is one that is starred for its minerals and vitamins.

Bananas contain vitamins, A, B1, C and G and nicotinic acid, and milk adds extra vitamins, calcium and phosphorus. All that is needed to make this drink is 1 fully ripe banana, whose peel is well flecked with brown, a cup of cold milk and a rotary beater.

Slice the banana into a bowl and beat with a rotary egg-beater or electric mixer until smooth and creamy. Or the banana may be pressed through a medium mesh wire strainer with a spoon. Add 1 cup cold milk and mix thoroughly. Serve cold. Makes 1 large or 2 medium size drinks.

Blackout Arrangement Should Not Be Makeshift Affair

Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

THE REALITY for war for most of us is being reflected in our plans for possible blackouts. And that we're learning, as did the English, is not as easy as it sounds.

Dark or opaque window shades are a good beginning, but they won't take care of the side cracks unless they are installed over the window frame so that they overlap the actual window pane. Sometimes an ordinary dark or opaque shade can be made completely light-proof by attaching it snugly with Scotch tape or adhesive. It is expected that a practical light-proof shade of the type now made for operating rooms, theaters and projecting rooms, will soon be on the market for homes, but so far pinch-hitting is the thing.

Burlap Draperies

One window arrangement that can be adapted for this new emergency is the draw type of over-drapery that is lined and interlined and hung out over and above the actual window frame—this should extend overthe wall at least eight inches on each side and above the window frame eight inches, should hang to the floor and should have a three-inch overlap. If you have thinner draperies you can have them lined with sateen, flannel or ever felt—if they don't overlap the window sufficiently they will have to be taped down around the edges or even pinned or tacked. Heavy draperies overlapping all around over closed Venetian blinds should give you thorough darkness without having to go in for thumb tacks.

Various other ideas are possible—such as frames with heavy card board or plyboard in them, made to fit snugly over the window, and there is another solution in fastening small hooks around the edge of the window frame close to the wall, then having a heavy black covering with eyelets or loops to hook over tautly. Still another plan is to paint the window panes black in the room to be used for blackout.

Watch Ventilation

The ideal blackout arrangement, say experienced ones, would be a roller blind affair made to attach tightly at the bottom—with ventilation slits at angles that won't let light out . . . for most blackout schemes have the weakness of practically suffocating all concerned.

Besides plans for the windows it is necessary to remove the light bulbs from all sockets in rooms not prepared for the blackout and from all porch and terrace fixtures—so they won't be turned on by mistake. Lamps with black or opaque shades, pin-up lamps, flashlights, kerosene lamps and candles are the most practical ideas for blackout use.

Altogether it sounds easier to just go to bed. Besides, there's always the chance that the electricity may be cut off by a main switch so we will have even our blackout done automatically in the good old American way.

Recipe Contest

THEME—Thrift Dinner. Give menu, including items of low cost. Meal must be well-balanced and consideration given to contrast in flavor, color an dtexture. For instance, fish baked in milk, mashed potatoes and cauliflower, with white sauce are all bland, white foods and would not make a pleasing combination. Fish baked in tomato sauce, potato croquettes and green peas make an interesting meal.

QUALIFICATION: Recipe must not be taken from service cookbooks. All recipes must be kitchen tested, practical, carefully written, exact and level measurements and number of servings given. Only one entry may be submitted by a person. All entries must be signed in longhand. (They will be disqualified if name is typewritten.)

PRIZE—First, $10; second, $5; third, $3; ten $1 prizes.

CLOSING DATE—Noon, Saturday, January 23.

IT'S ABOUT TIME to use a lot of inexpensive greens in bowls if you cannot afford fresh flowers this time of the year. Your florist always has greens to mix with flowers . . . you buy yours without the flowers

Flavored Lentils Make Nutritious Casserole Fare

Lentils are a thrifty food. When served in casserole topped with small sausages and flavored with onion, celery and garlic, they make a nutritious, flavorsome main dish.

Toss up a fruit or vegetable salad, serve some enriched bread or biscuits and a light dessert and beverage and you have an excellent meal in little time.

Following is a recipe for preparing the lentil-sausage dish:

Pick over 1 pound dried lentils, then soak them over night in cold water to cover. Drain and cook, covered, in 2 quarts of boiling water, to which has been added 1 tablespoon salt, ½ cup minced onion, 3 tablespoons diced celery, ¼ teaspoon pepper. Cook for 1 hour or until tender. Drain. Rub baking dish with garlic clove and grease lightly. Place lentils in baking dish; arrange 18 small sausages over top and broil under low broiler heat until sausages are browned, and cooked thoroughly, about 20 minutes, turning once. Serves 6.

Enriched Yeast

Homemakers who like to make rolls and other yeast-leavened bread can now use enriched yeast as well as enriched flour. This will give aided vitamins and minerals.

Learn to Do Illustrations

THE THOUSAND-A-WEEK illustrator is an awe-inspiring figure. Still, he had to start somewhere, you know! Probably he started out like you—an amateur, feeling the urge to draw, but needing instruction to help him on his way.

Fortunately, you can get a sound foundation in illustrating right at home.

Instruction charts and diagrams can show you a simple method of drawing the human figure, basing your drawing on ordinary geometric forms.

The head of the glamorous lady on the magazine cover can be lone this way. Try it!

You start with an oval, drawing horizontal lines to place the brows, base of nose and mouth, also a vertical line for the nose. Is the head tilted? Then the oval and these guide lines tilt the same way.

Now for the details! Putting in the little hollow above the upper lip, the shadows on the chin gives reality to the mouth.

You master the body in the same way, progressing from geometric forms to details, then you learn to group people to tell a story. After, with luck and talent, you may be getting fancy prices, too!

Our 40-page booklet, "A Simple Course in Illustration and Advertising Art," gives clear instructions with 237 charts and diagrams on drawing the human form. Explains foreshortening, perspective, shading, composition; drawing dogs and horses.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, "A Simple Course in Illustration and Advertising Art," to the NEW YORK OFFICE of The Washington Post Home Institute, 19 West Nineteenth Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

LEARN THE THRIFTIER CUTS OF MEAT

Round Bone Beef Pot Roast

The pot roast is a thrifty meat with a powerful family appeal. For a fine pot roast, ask your meat-man for any of the beef chuck cuts—a blade pot roast (the most tender part of the chuck), a round bone pot roast, or (for very easy carving) a boned and rolled chuck pot roast.

Beef Pot Roast with Horse-Radish Gravy: Select a 3 or 4-lb. chuck pot roast. Season with salt and pepper. Brown well on all sides, adding 2 tbsps. lard to kettle, if necessary. When nicely browned, spread with a small bottle of horse-radish (drained first). Add 1 cup water, cover closely; cook at simmering temperature until tender, turning once or twice. Thicken liquid, add water for gravy (a delicious brown horse-radish sauce).

A 48-page purse-size handbook of thrifter cuts of meat—what to ask for, how to prepare them. A buying and cooking guide to more than 80 thrifty cuts. Just send 5 cents in coin to Dept. W, AMERICAN MEAT INSTITUTE, Chicago.

Meat helps build good red blood. That's because of the iron and copper it contains. All meats—even the thriftiest cuts—bring you these important minerals as well as B vitamins and complete, high quality proteins.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Girl, 16, Thoroughly Enjoys Her Volunteer Work As 'Dancette' With USO, But Her Father, Brother And Mother Object; How Win Their Approval?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl 16 years old, and several months ago I registered with the USO as a volunteer worker. Some weeks later I was notified to come to the District Building and be enrolled as a "dancette." This I did, and mother seemed to think it was all right. However, after I had gone to the dances for about a month, she changed her mind. She was influenced by the attitude of my father and brother, who think I shouldn't go to these dances.

They say that since I am only 16, I should confine myself to the company of boys and girls nearer my own age. They also say they don't like the idea of my not knowing anything much about the boys I meet at these dances. And since my brother has many friends in the Army who feels as he does,—that they wouldn't want their young sisters going to Army dances,—it is very hard to persuade mother that there is nothing wrong in my going to these dances.

As for associating with boys and girls my own age, I am with them most of the time, and we often get together on weekends, too, but many of them don't care to dance and I really enjoy dancing. I have met some very nice fellows at these dances, who seem to enjoy dancing with me—and my age is never mentioned. I don't think mother would mind my attending these dances if my father and brother did not object. Will you please suggest something I could say or do to show my family there is nothing wrong with the soldiers or the dances, and that it is all right for me to go? Thank you. F. W. T.

Masculine Opinion Carries Weight Here

DEAR F. W. T: I confess that I am instinctively in sympathy with your parents' conservative attitude in this matter; although I recognize the possibility that if they or I were to spend an evening with you at one of these dances, getting a "sideline sitter's" view of the merry-making, we might feel honor-bound to ruefully admit that our reluctance to indorse your participation in such events seems rather selfishly precautionary. Which is to say, it is distinctly my impression that the USO-sponsored dances are intelligently planned, thoroughly chaperoned affairs, mostly favored by soldiers who have a seasoned preference for the company of "nice girls," and that the girls who are invited to the parties are chosen with some discrimination.

Thus, I am prepared to believe that the general atmosphere and individual deportment characterizing these events would compare favorably with any young people's parties given on a grand scale,—whether under private or "social club" auspices. However, we must face the fact that these are primarily assemblages of strangers,—men who are, at most, only casually acquainted with each other, and probably essentially disinterested in each other's backgrounds and characters and mores; and girls who were likewise unknown to each before the exigencies of war brought them together on a common mission.

The individual men and girls are total strangers to each other, of course—and it is this aspect of the situation which, in my opinion, disqualifies a girl of your age for an appropriate place in the picture, when her presence is clearly dispensable. The typical girl of 16, of gentle rearing and conventional background, is rather too unworldly to be able to make valid deductions concerning human worth not plainly labeled, and therefore it is unwise of her to expose herself to influences that might seriously confuse her tentative sense of values at this most impressionable age.

The very fact that (as you say) your age is never mentioned on the dance floor, may be construed as indicating that the men in uniform assume you to be years older than you are, and far more "worldly wise." And it is possible, indeed, that you sense and play up to that assumption,—thus inviting a situation in which some of the less discerning men might not only fail (and pardonably) to show you the consciously protective consideration your tender years deserve, but actually arrive at some unflattering (even though unfounded) concepts of your character.

I am inclined to think you are more favored than afflicted, in having a father and brother who can see and stress—for the benefit of your mother and yourself—the vague impropriety, from the masculine viewpoint, of your attending large public dances (however, well chaperoned), that are frequented by men whose slant on life is but definitely more sophisticated and "tough" than you, at your age, can possibly comprehend. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Children in Wartime

This is one of a series of parents' questions answered by the Child Study Association of America in its booklet, "Children in Wartime."

Caution or Fear?

HOW CAN parents avoid frightening their children and yet get them to take the necessary precautions for safety in case of air-raids? My children walk long distances to school every day and ought to know about signals and what to do. I am afraid that giving them information will only frighten them more.

IT IS NOT what or how much you tell your children that frightens them, but how you tell it. Let your manner be sensible and matter-of-fact. Of course, you should give your children complete instructions, as these come from official sources. Then explain to them the reasons behind these instructions. Make what you have to say simple and brief. Don't go into a dozen or so remote possibilities. Don't repeat yourself, or beg your children to listen so as to be sure to understand what you are saying. They get you the first time. After you have told them, go about your business and let them go about theirs.

Your composure and ability to attend to all the familiar routines will calm them more than any number of sermons on being calm. Fear in children comes not nearly so much from knowing the facts about possible dangers and how to meet them, as from a "hush-hush" atmosphere, or from feeling that their own parents are jittery and that there is something that is being hidden from them.

Muscular Girdle Is Best Figure Aid

By Ida Jean Kain

A MIDDLE-AGED spread is not healthy at any age. When the abdominal wall becomes flabby, the muscles not only collect fat but are incapable of supporting the weight of the organs. As a consequence, the organs sag and crowd each other. This interferes with the circulation, digestion and elimination. Aside from the squeezing of the organs, the nerve centers are affected and high blood pressure may result.

This midsection spread is caused by slumping and by lack of exercise. The average person tends to go into a comfortable slump when she stands, walks or sits and what little exercise she gets is apt to miss these muscles. To add to the trouble, the attempt at correction is usually holding the stomach in rather than up. You can't hold your stomach in. It is unnatural and uncomfortable. Your rule should be to hold up. The upward pull should originate with the lower abdominal muscles and should extend right on through the chest and the top of your head.

Muscular Girdle

But before you can make a habit of the upward pull in posture, your muscular girdle must be strong. And since these muscles are most important to health, your general conditioning program should begin in the middle. The exercise need not be strenuous nor take more than a few minutes, but they should be done regularly.

To avoid strain, take your first exercises lying flat on the back on the floor, knees flexed, soles of feet resting on the floor.

From that position, bring alternate knees to chest as you press the small of the back down against the floor and pull up and in with the lower abdominal muscles. To avoid any possible strain, keep one foot on the floor as the other knee is brought to the chest. Repeat 10 times, later 20.

V for Victory

Remaining in the some position, raise feet slightly off the floor and spread flexed knees wide apart to form a V. Hold for a second and bring the knees together. Repeat six times, then rest.

Still in the same starting position, continue to pull up and in with the abdominal muscles, raise the feet off the floor and alternately flex and straighten the legs—another way of doing the bicycle exercise. Twelve counts will be plenty to start with. If your back is not strong, it will be wiser for you to do that exercise lying on the side on the floor and pedaling.

All these exercises should be performed slowly and accurately.

How to Care For Waxed Floors

Most floor surfaces today are linoleum, or hard wood, which has been shellacked or waxed, or painted boards. Linoleum, especially when it has been waxed, should not be scoured. A light daily going-over with a mop or cloth wrung out in warm, rich suds is a better treatment for linoleum than a weekly attack with a brush. Hardwood floors should be swept every week with a soft push broom or an uncoiled dust mop, and wiped once a month or oftener if necessary, with a cloth wrung out in warm soapy water, and dried with clean dry cloth.

Painted or stained floors should be given occasional light wipings with a suday cloth to remove surface dust and grime. Care should be taken not to rub hard or use too much water. A coat of wax over the stain or paint helps keep it from showing wear at the much traveled areas, and can be cleaned by wiping with a suday cloth.

Today's Social Notes

(From the Truthtown Torch)

What to do about winter vacations is a serious problem facing Truthtown's uppercrusters. Now that Hawaii is inaccessible, Southern California a possible bomb target, and Florida considered none too safe, there seems nothing for local notables to do but face the rigors of a Truthtown winter.

"Of course there is Sun Valley," said Mrs. Whitherford Schooner, ace dowager, discussing the situation yesterday, "but not all of us can ski."

Mrs. Schooner is organizing a committee to investigate the possibility of establishing an American Riviera in some safe isolated spot in the Southwest.

"We simply must have some place where we can slip away for rest and sunshine," she said. "otherwise how could we carry on in times like these?"

Mrs. Lucius Gilderlyly said she had never spent a winter in the North but she thought she could adapt herself to it. "We simply have to make an all-out sacrifice for defense," she said. Mrs. Gilderlyly added that she was having her solarium equipped with artificial sunlight.

The Ladies' Parachute Patrol will transfer its drill activities to Palm Beach again this winter, despite the exposed position of that resort, the patrol commander, Mrs. Badminton Bellwether announced yesterday, "So many of our members have sinus trouble that it is simply impossible to drill in the Truthtown climate," said Mrs. Bellwether. "Moreover, our patrol will be in a better position at Palm Beach to aid in the national defense if there should be a coast attack."

Among Those Present

Col. Leander Piffle, who has a famous collection of pearl gray derbies, chattering with Mrs. DeCursey Beldame whose cook, Potage, is said to be the only chef in America who can properly prepare Lobster Lafayette; Mrs. Dovecote Hoardem, whose house is filled with museum pieces, in a tete-a-tete with young Courtney Zither, whose former-wife-to-be, the former Valerie Tapp, nee Rhumba, is now in Reno; The Valentine DeForest Mannons 3d., who expect a visit from the stork at 7 a. m. February 1; Huntington Rhinestone, popular gourmet and man about town, who is famous for his anchovy paste, and who was once given a necktie by the Maharajah of Winnie Pooh, complimenting the dowager Miss Jennie Van Stiff on the cameo pin she recently discovered in her attic; Warwick Merryfeather, whose hobby is judging Belgian hares, arriving with Terence Tinfoil, who recently turned to candid photography to occupy his time; Mrs. Ottley Ottoman, former wife of Prince Divan, tinied toothpick tycoon Ferdinand Lounge and Playboy Charlie Couch in a twosome with Dosier Dabb, authority on Ming vases, both being joined by Mrs. Sinbad Smith-Smythe, who has a fascinating collection of carved ivory cockroaches, and who has entertained extensively for royalty.

Suburban Notes

Mrs. Clifton Scallop fears that her small daughter Sissy has been jilted by Buddy Jeepers. For the last week Buddy had been hitting and poking and throwing things at Betty Flounder. Previously he bestowed such attentions only on Sissy.

Mrs. Noah Skittlewaite who had no callers for two months following her moving into the exclusive Dahlia Heights section, has in the last week been forced to keep open house to welcome the visiting neighbors. A few days ago a consignment of new furniture was delivered at Mrs. Skittlewaite's. It included a French satinwood dining room set, a channel backed occasional chair and a solid mahogany corner what-not.

Help Wanted

Mrs. Wynkoop Bigwigger is advertising for a secretary who will be "well reared, well-educated, well-dressed, well mannered, industrious, intelligent, genteel, retiring, unobtrusive drab, servile and 100 per cent efficient."

Club Notes

Mrs. Hollingsworth Jell has resigned as president of the Upward and Onward League. Mrs. Jell, it is understood, was threatened with a nervous collapse as a result of being begged, nagged and goaded to grant special club favors to all those who voted for her in the club's bitterly contested election last spring.

Ankle-Length Evening Gown Causes Rumpus

Associated Press Feature Service

To ankle or not to ankle, that is the question.

It's causing a feud in the fashion ranks, becoming a cause celebre among the stylists, bringing roars of disdain from a scornful younger set.

The ballerina-length evening gown started it all. After years of flattering, romantic floor-sweeping formal gowns, the ankle length skirt comes as a shock to many women. It's hard to grow accustomed to showing your ankles once more in after-dark attire. On the other hand, skirt lengths cannot be allowed to remain static, or there's no news for the fashion writers.

Chief antagonists of new shorter evening gowns are the debutantes and the college set. Their protests are loud and vehement.

"Too-too utterly revolting" . . . "Strictly for drips" . . . "Simply utterly old-hat" . . . These were a few of the comments voiced by style-conscious coeds at a recent showing of the new ballerina-length evening gowns.

Serious style prophets, however, say the shorter skirt definitely is on the way back for evening. They say the youngsters are simply reactionists, who can't accept changes.

Capital Whirl

by Hope Ridings Miller

Writer Kay Boyle Likens Wartime Washington to Gay, Prewar Paris

In town for a brief visit this week, Kay Boyle, the noted author, had to tear off early yesterday to return to her home in Nyack, N. Y.

"But I hope to be back before long," she said, adding that wartime Washington seems more like prewar Paris than any city she ever has seen.

She was here purely on business, but she stayed over night with her close friend, Caresse Crosby, the poet and publisher, whom she has known for 14 years, and who, incidentally, published her first book, "Wedding Day," back in 1931.

Luncheon time, I saw both of them . . . and I must say the three of us skirted about as many subjects as can be worked into an hour's get-together . . . In the first place, Kay Boyle is one of those rare celebrities who is both interesting and interested . . . She talks well on almost any subject—writing; France, where she made her home for many years; the changing American scene; and the famous folk she has met both in this country and abroad.

She looks much more like a fashion model than the traditional writing woman. Her short, reddish-blonde hair was swept upward yesterday beneath a becoming black turban; and her trim black coat, with its Persian lamb jacket, was set off with a jaunty matching muff. But what caught my eye especially were her jewelry accents—earrings that looked like a couple of eidelweiss blossoms, a heavy silver bracelet, and an unpretentious wedding band. I felt I had seen those same accessories before . . . and I had. The author had them on when she posed for that full-page fashion picture, which appears in the current issue of a national magazine.

KAY BOYLE

Her work? Well, right now she's putting the final touches on "Armistice Diary," a day-by-day account of the months following France's capitulation, and a novel, "Primer for Combat," both of which are scheduled for spring publication.

Taught Others How to Write

Other interests? Her four daughters—Sharon Walsh, Apple-Joan, Kathe and Clover, and two stepchildren . . . the cause of Free France . . . people . . . parties (although I've had to give them up recently because I've been so busy") . . . She maintains a week-around schedule for her writing; is at her desk by 8 a. m. at latest, and doesn't consider herself too ill-used if the job at hand keeps her digging away for 15 hours on a stretch.

A few weeks ago, she finished her fling at giving a course in writing for a group of adults who gathered weekly at the Nyack High School . . . It took up too much of her time ("about 30 hours a week"), but she loved it—mainly because she managed to make one "discovery," who, she is convinced, will turn out to be quite a successful author.

If she had her way about it right now, she'd take off to the West for a couple of months. But there are her children to consider, and all are in school right now . . . She'd like to come to Washington for a lengthy stay, and may do so later . . . She loves traveling, but is not overfond of trains; so yesterday she boarded a bus for her trip back to New York . . . and if she has any formula for writing success it probably boils down to regular writing hours, and plenty of them . . . "But keeping a daily diary helps a lot, too," she said. "My forthcoming 'Armistice' book could never have been written if I hadn't carefully written down everything I saw about me in France for a period of four months."

Mrs. Crosby Leaving Soon

Before taking her leave of Washington, Miss Boyle urged Mrs. Crosby to get busy on a diary herself, and to go on and finish that autobiography she's been toying with for several months. So far, Mrs. Crosby has done little more than decide on the title, "Before I Forget" . . . "Trouble is," she added with a smile, "I'm afraid I have forgotten far too much."

Although she had planned to settle down in Washington for the winter, finish her book perhaps, and do a bit of war work if she was needed, Mrs. Crosby had barely got her furniture in place in the house she leased on Thirty-third Street, when she heard the call of the West once more . . . So come January 15, she'll turn her new domicile over to a tenant, and then be off to Arizona, going on from there to California . . . She hopes to be back in May . . . and so does Miss Boyle who, in private life, is Mrs. Laurence Vale.

Speaking of authors—there's another who comes down from New York to visit friends here frequently . . . She's Mrs. Russell Davenport—known to the literary world as Marcia Davenport—daughter of Efrem Zimbalist and the late Alma Gluck . . . and quite a personality in her own right.

MARCIA DAVENPORT

Mrs. Davenport has reserved seats for next week's performance of the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra . . . and she'll probably stay over for a few days . . . The wife of a well-known writer (Russell Davenport formerly was on the staff of Fortune Magazine) she has made quite a name for herself in the field of authorship . . . Her biography of Mozart and her novel, "Of Lena Geyer," were both best-sellers . . . and in recent years her music criticism and broadcasts have won wide acclaim.

Visiting in Maryland

Mrs. Francis Martin Savage is visiting on the Eastern Shore of Maryland before going South for the remainder of the winter.

Miss Stirling Makes Bow at St. Cecilia Ball

Representing the Capital at the traditional St. Cecilia ball in Charleston, S. C., last night, was Miss Margheritta Stirling, who was presented to Southern society at this outstanding annual fete.

Miss Stirling, who made her curtsey in Washington at Christmas Day tea at the Larz Anderson house, is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. William Calhoun Stirling. She will return Sunday with her mother from Charleston, where she has been widely feted by friends.

Among the oldest annual balls in America is this one given by the St. Cecilia Society, of Charleston. The organization itself began in 1737 as an amateur musical club which sponsored a concert each year on St. Cecilia's Day. In 1762 the club was formally organized and in the latter eighteenth century Charles Cotesworth Pinckney and Ralph Izard played in its orchestra. Eventually, the concerts grew less important and the spotlight gradually turned to dancing which followed. After 1821 the ball reigned alone.

Miss McDonagh Is Wed in N. Y.

The Church of St. John the Martyr in New York was the scene of the wedding yesterday morning of Miss Lucille McDonagh, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Bernard McDonagh, of Long Island, and William Robert Consedine, of this city, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank M. Consedine, of Olean, N. Y. The Rev. Francis J. Haas, of Catholic University, officiated at the 10:30 o'clock ceremony and celebrated the nuptial mass which followed.

Miss Jean McDonagh, a sister of the bride, was her only attendant, and J. Norman Consedine served his brother as best man.

The bride attended the Ursuline Academy and the College of New Rochelle. She is the niece of Representative Mary T. Norton and the sister of Mrs. Edmund Burke, jr., of Washington, and Mrs. G. V. Menzies Seymour, of Scarsdale, N. Y. She is the clerk of the Labor Committee of the House of Representatives.

Mr. Consedine was graduated from St. Bonaventure's College and Georgetown law school. He is at present on the litigation staff of the National Labor Relations Board.

Mr. Van Devanter Recuperating

Recuperating at the Virginia home of his sister, Mrs. R. J. McCray, is Edward Van Devanter, of Washington and Alexandria, who broke his right leg during the Christmas holidays.

The injury followed a fall as he was leaving a dance at the Belle Haven Club on December 30. He was at the Alexandria Hospital for a week, and then was moved to his sister's home, Liberty Hall Farm, Leesburg, where he expects to be for some time.

Parents to Honor Miss Bodenstein

With exactly a week left before their wedding, Miss Evelyn Bodenstein and Richard D. Bailey, who are to be married next Friday, will be the recipients of several parties in their honor before the seventh day rolls round.

Tonight Miss Bodenstein's mother, Mrs. Henry W. Snyder, and the Rev. Snyder will entertain ten friends in honor of the bride and bridegroom-elect at their home on Chevy Chase Parkway. Mr. Bailey's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Orin P. Bailey are planning a before-rehearsal dinner for them next Thursday night at their home on Butterworth Place.

Showers feting Miss Bodenstein have already been given by Mrs. G. E. Pendleton, of Alexandria, and Miss Dorothy Bailey.

Visitor From Caracas

Arriving in town yesterday was Mme. Istvan Kerple-Fronius, daughter of the Venezuelan Ambassador and Senora de Escalante, with whom she is staying at the Venezuelan Embassy. Mme. Kerple-Fronius, with her husband, came to New York about a month ago and will remain in this country about a month longer before returning to their home in Caracas, Venezuela

LaGorces on Trip; Tydingses Take Over Their Home

With the way houses have of not standing empty these days in Washington, things have almost come to a point where "when you move out, I move in"—which is just what happened to the one at 2440 Kalorama Road, the home of Dr. and Mrs. John Oliver LaGorce.

Early this week Senator and Mrs. Millard Tydings moved in for about a 3½-month stay. They have been at their country home, Oakington, Havre de Grace, Md., but have come to town according to their annual custom to stay until the late spring.

Meanwhile, starting today, the LaGorces are traveling again. This is hardly a new thing, for he is associate editor of National Geographic Magazine, but "due to the times" their destination remains undivulged this time. They plan to be gone several months, however.

Justice's Wife To Show Paintings

Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, wife of the Chief Justice, will receive at the tea to follow an exhibit of her paintings on Sunday afternoon at the Madison School in Falls Church, Va. She will be assisted by Mr. and Mrs. Edward R. Rowan.

Also assisting Mrs. Stone will be Mrs. Robert Patterson Lamont, wife of the former Secretary of Commerce. Mrs. Lamont has as her house guests her daughter, Mrs. Charles E. Saltzman, and grandson, Charles E. Saltzman, jr.

Grace Hendershot And Lieut. May Will Be Married

Mr. and Mrs. Walter S. Hendershot, of Takoma Park, Md., announce the engagement of their daughter, Grace Marilyn Hendershot, to Lieut. Richard W. May.

MISS GRACE HENDERSHOT

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Percival May, of Shaker Heights, Cleveland.

The bride-elect was graduated from Pennsylvania State College, is a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma Sorority.

Lieut. May, who is now serving in the United States Army at Fort Adams, is also a graduate of Pennsylvania State College. He is a member of Beta Theta Pi Fraternity.

No date has been set for the wedding.

Katharine Hadley, Bride-Elect, Is Honored at Tea

Miss Katharine Hadley, bride-elect, was guest of honor at a tea yesterday afternoon at which Mrs. Harrison Williams was hostess. The afternoon fete was given in Mrs. Williams Westchester apartment. Miss Hadley will be married tomorrow to Winfield Scott Pullen, jr.

Assisting Mrs. Williams was her daughter, Mrs. John L. Levine, jr., who arrived in town from the west on Thursday "for the duration." Mrs. Devine's husband is now in the Medical Corps of the Army. She is the former Miss Mary Virginia Williams.

Also assisting at the party was another daughter, Mrs. Paul Traynham, 2d; Mrs. Mahon Heald, Mrs. Clyde Hadley, mother of the bride-elect, Mrs. Lynn Woodruff and Mrs. Russell B. Harrison, mother of Mrs. Williams.

Miss Hadley was feted at a luncheon yesterday given by Mrs. Horatio C. Sexton, wife of Cmdr. Sexton, United States Navy. The party was given in Mrs. Sexton's Woodley Road home and a dozen guests attended.

Former Swiss Envoy and Wife Return to Capital

"Everyone returns to Washington"s—is an oft-repeated phrase that becomes truer every day. The latest couple playing a return engagement is the former Minister of Switzerland and Mme. Peter, who for many years were familiar figures around town.

M. Peter will serve as delegate to the International Red Cross committee, with headquarters in Washington. Having arrived here several days ago, they have taken an apartment at 2800 Q Street. Although Mme. Peter plans to divide her time between here and Boston, to be near their two sons, the former Minister will remain in the Capital.

Following a serious illness, M. Peter resigned his post here, having served his country as Minister for 19 years, and at the time he left was dean of Ministers in Washington.

Miss Mary Friddle's Engagement Announced

Mrs. J. M. Friddle, of Harrisonburg, Va., announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Mary Margaret Friddle, to James Floyd Bowman, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Bowman, of Washington and Strasburg, Va.

The prospective bridegroom, a sergeant, is stationed at the Army War College, in the Capital, and Miss Friddle is employed by American Airlines at the Washington National Airport.

No date has been set for the wedding.

Miss Helen Hager Plans Wedding

A simple wedding January 17 is being planned by Miss Helen Hager, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Manfred Hager, 4701 Connecticut Avenue, who will be married to William Franklin Pierce Reid, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. F. P. Reid, of Alexandria.

Her sister, Miss Carolyn Ann Hager, will be her only attendant, and Mr. Reid has chosen Parker Cole for his best man. The ceremony will be, as previously announced, at National Cathedral.

Engagement Announced

Mr. and Mrs. Luke J. Milovich, of this city, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Jane Beatrice Milovich, to Owen Francis Wagner. The wedding will take place January 24.

Farewell Party Is Given for Rogelio Alfaros

Entertaining informally at their pleasant home, Dr. and Mrs. Ricardo Alfaro were hosts yesterday afternoon in honor of their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Rogelio Alfaro. Guests attending the 6 until 7 o'clock fete included members of the younger set as well as many of the hosts' contemporaries.

The party was a farewell for the young Alfaros, who will sail next Wednesday for Panama, where Rogelio will be representative in Panama City of I. B. M. Rogelio—as wall as all of the young Alfaros—has grown up in Washington and has a host of friends here who will miss him and his attractive wife, the former Lupe Davila.

The fete was definitely on the informal side and although Mrs. Alfaro had not arranged ahead of time for assistants at the tea table, she asked many of her close friends when they arrived to pour tea. Among those who took their flower-decked table were Senora places during the afternoon at the de Castillo-Najera, wife of the Mexican Ambassador and aunt of the young Mrs. Alfaro; Senora de Recinos, wife of the Minister of Guatemala, who, with her two daughters, only just returned from a lengthy stay in her homeland; Mrs. Frank Weller, daughter of the Alfaros; Mrs. Victor Alfaro, daughter-in-law; Mrs. Katherine Maddux, Mrs. John J. Hamilton, Mrs. Tomas Cajigas and Mrs. Bolivar Lloyd.

Elizabeth Fish's Cousin to Wed

Miss Elizabeth Fish, daughter of Representative and Mrs. Hamilton Fish, will be in New York for the wedding of her cousin, Miss Patricia Rosalin Cutler, to Ensign Robert Ludlow Fowler 3d, U. S. N. R., on January 17. The ceremony will take place in the Episcopal Church of St. Mark's-in-the-Bouwerie. A reception will follow at 55 East Seventy-seventh Street, a residence which belonged to Miss Cutler's maternal grandfather, the late Hamilton Fish.

The bride-elect is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Cutler, of 58 East Eightieth Street, New York. She will have as her attendants, Mrs. Richard C. Aldrich and Miss Judith Bayard Cutler, her sisters, and Miss Charlotte Pamela Fowler and Mrs. Craig Wylie, sisters of the prospective bridegroom. H. S. Winthrop Fowler will be best man for his brother, who is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Fowler, of Katonah, N. Y.

Dempseys Return From N. Y. Trip

Washingtonians who have been spending the holiday season outside of the Capital are beginning to return home.

The Undersecretary of the Interior and Mrs. John J. Dempsey have just come back from a sojourn in New York which they took to help make up for their December vacation in Palm Springs, Calif., which was cut short upon the outbreak of war.

Mrs. Max O'Rell Truitt is back from a three-week holiday season in Florida. Her husband, who is still in the Southern State, will return to the Capital on Saturday.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

Mrs. Duncan Fraser, who before her marriage was Miss Dorothy Sollers, of Washington, is now visiting her mother, Mrs. Joseph Sollers, in Baltimore, and will join her husband, Cano Fraser, minister of the Cathedral Congregation in Providence, R. I., the first of the week. Mrs. Fraser, who is the niece of the late Mrs. Gibson Fahnestock, lived here with her husband when he was the assistant rector of the Church of the Epiphany.

Selma Ruppert To Be Bride

The marriage of Miss Selma Ruppert, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Ruppert, to William Parks Jacobs, jr., will take place tomorrow. Mr. Jacobs is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Parks Jacobs. Dr. John C. Palmer, pastor of the Washington Heights Presbyterian Church, will officiate at the ceremony. Both Miss Ruppert and Mr. Jacobs are native Washingtonians.

Miss Ruppert will have for her bridesmaid, Miss Ruth Jacobs, sister of the bridegroom-to-be, and her matrons of honor will be Mrs. William Ruppert and Mrs. Farrar Smith.

A reception will be held tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock in the palm and French rooms of the Hotel 2400. Following the reception, Mr. and Mrs. Jacobs will motor to Florida for a two-week honeymoon. Upon their return to Washington they will be "at home" to their friends in their new home at 3822 Davis Street.

Mrs. Rust Gives Cocktail Party

Asking a few friends to drop in informally "after 6," Mrs. Pearsons Rust entertained at a cocktail gathering yesterday afternoon in her home on Bancroft Place in honor of Mrs. Marye Thomas.

Mrs. Thomas, who is here visiting her mother, Mrs. George Marye, is staying at the Mayflower. On a "shopping trip" in the East from her ranch in Nevada, Mrs. Thomas will go to New York for a short sojourn before returning West.

Miss Hulbert Is Married

It was "June in January" a few days ago when Miss Catherine Chittenden Hulbert, of Middleburg, Va., set up the date of her wedding after her fiance, Lieut. Lewis Camplin Murdock, U. S. A. A. C., was ordered to the West Coast.

The bride-elect rushed out to Tucson, Ariz., where her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Chittenden, of Burlington, Iowa, were spending the winter, and the ceremony was performed there in the Hills Episcopal Church. The bride is the daughter of William T. Hulbert and the late Mrs. Hulbert, of Middleburg, Va., and her sister, Miss Helen Hulbert went to Arizona with her to serve as her only attendant.

The Rev. C. E. Huntington officiated at the ceremony on Monday, January 5. The bride was given in marriage by her grandmother. Her wedding gown was of white velvet worn under a tulle veil, and she carried a bouquet of white bouvardia.

Following the ceremony a reception was held in the cottage of the bride's grandparents at the El Conquistador Hotel. After the reception the couple left for the West Coast, where Lieut. Murdock will report for duty.

Engagement Announced

Mr. and Mrs. John H. Mace announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Dorothy Elenore Mace, to Nicholas Oliver Dean. The wedding will take place February 14 in St. Gabriel's Church.

Senator Talks on District Government

Underwood & Underwood

Senator Harold H. Burton (Republican), of Ohio, spoke on "A Mayor Looks at Washington," viewing the city as a former mayor of Cleveland, at the meeting of the Twentieth Century Club yesterday. He was greeted above by Mrs. Lawrence Martin (left), president of the club, and Mrs. James T. Jardine, chairman of the program committee

Careful Survey of D. C. Government Proposed

Consideration of a change in the structure of the District government should be based on a long-range study comparable, in its field, to the Whitehurst report on traffic engineering needs, Senator Harold H. Burton (Republican), of Ohio, told the Twentieth Century Club yesterday.

Warning that mere "curbstone opinions" on change in the District government are "dangerous," Senator Burton said any recommendations should be preceded by careful study, which might require a year, might be made by representatives of the national Administration, the Senate, House and the District.

Senator Burton, former mayor of Cleveland, spoke on "A Mayor Looks at Washington" at the club's monthly meeting at the Y. W. C. A.

He praised the Whitehurst study, especially for its drawing on the knowledge of both Federal and municipal authorities in the traffic engineering field.

"With your low gas tax, you have not done the engineering necessary to keep up with the expanding population," he said, "but the Whitehurst study does provide Washington with a sound engineering plan" to be carried out in coming years, he added.

Seems Like 'Heaven' In Some Respects

While admitting the difficulties attendant upon the District's "lack of centralization of authority in administration" and the limitation of understanding of District problems on the part of Congressmen who live elsewhere, Senator Burton said in some respects Washington seems like "Heaven" to a former mayor of another city.

The number of wide streets and parks, the absence of municipal debt, the absence of conflict between city and State governments, the freedom from conflicts which arise in industrial cities were among the points which Senator Burton cited in discussing Washington's escape from certain problems.

The club decided to mail letters to District officials to advocate that no cut be made in the budget for the Health Department. The letters will go to Commissioner Guy Mason, to Dr. George C. Ruhland, District health officer, and to members of the House District Committee.

Urges Support Of Three B's

Mrs. Raleigh Gilchrist, defense chairman of the club, urged the members' support of the "Three B's" as she termed phases of defense work—buying of bonds, donation of blood to the blood bank for service men, contribution of books for soldiers and sailors. Mrs. Philip Sidney Smith spoke on the book campaign, urging cooperation of members.

Mrs. Claude B. Mickelwait brought a message from the Red Cross, and Mrs. Francis Goodwin and Mrs. John B. Gordon were appointed to receive contributions for that cause.

Dr. David L. Crawford, who had lived in Honolulu many years until recently, discussed the background of the conflict in the Pacific. Mrs. Lawrence Martin, president of the club, presided and introduced the speakers.

D.A.R. Group To Hear Talk On Red Cross

Miss Mabel T. Boardman, secretary of the American Red Cross, will discuss its work at home and abroad at the meeting of Capt. Molly Pitcher Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, Monday at the chapter house.

Mrs. Pearl M. Shaffer, chairman of the national defense through patriotic education committee of the District D. A. R., will speak on defense stamps and bonds.

Delegates to the congress of the D. A. R. in April will be elected at the meeting. Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor, chairman of the chapter's program committee, arranged the meeting. Hostesses will be Mrs. Charles T. Carter, Mrs. William C. Moore, Mrs. Hugh J. Davis, Mrs. Frederick C. Smith, Mrs. Joseph S. Wall and Mrs. Fred D. Gwynn.

Mary Washington Chapter will assist in entertaining a group of soldiers from nearby camps at a dinner and dance at Fellowship House, on Massachusetts Avenue, tomorrow evening. Dinner at 6:30 will be followed by dancing.

Members of the junior group of the chapter and their friends will act as hostesses, and Dr. and Mrs. W. H. O. McGehee will be chaperones. Mrs. McGehee is the regent of the chapter.

Among those who will be hostesses are Miss Catherine Bixler, Miss Alice Clark, Miss Katherine Clark, Mrs. Robert F. Howard, Mrs. Walter Kraemer, Mrs. Berniece McGarraghy, Miss Edna B. Millward, Miss Gertrude Payne, Mrs. Leonhardt W. Schemel, Miss Alice Shaw, Miss Alice Thompson and Miss Aileene Wrightson.

The Descendants of '76 Chapter will meet at the chapter house at 2 p. m. tomorrow, omitting the usual luncheon, but having refreshments after the meeting. Alfred G. White will speak on "Old Glass." Hostesses will be Miss Florence Harris, Miss May Harris and Mrs. Theodore Langley.

Envoy's Wife Tells of Determined Spirit of Czechoslovaks

Mme. Hurban, wife of the Czechoslovakian Minister, spoke of the unspectacular but determined spirit of her countrymen in opposition to their oppressors, in a brief talk yesterday at a luncheon at the clubhouse of the League of Republican Women.

She was ranking guest in the group having luncheon with Mrs. Walter Tuckerman. Others in the group were Mme. Louis de Steiguer, Mrs. Edward E. Gann, president of the league; Countess de Marenches, Mrs. Henry Betts, Mrs. Charles Rae, Mrs. George Rublee, Mrs. Karl Boyd-Ed, Mrs. William B. Watkins, Mrs. John Dalton Sturrouck, Mrs. Frank Morrow, Mrs. French Myers, Mrs. Thad Brown, Mrs. Wayne McPherson.

Among others having luncheon at the clubhouse were Mrs. Virginia White Speel, Mrs. John Freemont, Miss Temple Bailey, Mrs. James Watson, Mrs. J. H. Branson.

Course for Girl Scouts

Miss Alice Mulkey, director of Region 3, Girl Scouts, whose headquarters are at the Girl Scout Little House on New York Avenue, will conduct the yearly training course for local Scout council members, January 19-24. It will be held in Williamsburg, Va.

U. S. Consumer Expert Talks To City Club

"The direct responsibility of government in total war includes civilian economic protection for the maintenance of as high a standard of living as is consistent with military necessities, guidance of consumers in wise use of the Nation's resources, democratic distribution of civilian supplies and a continuous war against waste."

Thus Mrs. May Thompson Evans, chief of the consumer relations section, Consumer Division, Office of Price Administration, summed up her message at the business and professional dinner of the Women's City Club last night at the clubhouse.

The price control bill, now before the Senate, will give adequate machinery for Federal control, Mrs. Evans said.

The national consumer program of the OPA is designed to obtain consumer cooperation in using efficiently and conserving existing supplies of goods, in buying carefully to avoid waste, in sharing limited supplies of goods and services, in so acting as to check inflation and to stimulate needed production where possible, she said.

The Consumer Division, she pointed out, is the Federal agency representing the needs and interests of consumers in policy-making by defense agencies. It also is designed to assist and guide the Nation's families in making day-by-day living adjustments, she said.

The division assists in establishing community consumer centers and, through services of field representatives, provides a "two-way flow of information" from the Government to the public, and vice versa.

Notre Dame Group Will Give Party To Aid Academy

Officers and executive board members of the Notre Dame de Namur Alumnae have made plans for their annual benefit party early in February. The card party and dance will be for the benefit of Notre Dame Academy.

Miss Kathryn A. Creveling, the newly elected president of the organization, has named Mrs. Henry Buchanan as the general chairman of the arrangements.

The other officers of the association include: Mrs. Andrew Morris, vice president; Miss Elizabeth Anderson, recording secretary; Miss Marie Hurley, corresponding secretary, and Miss Ann Wolfe, treasurer. The members of the executive board are Miss Marie Nohe, Miss Bernadette Dore, Miss Lydia Hartnett, Miss Mary Hanlon, Mrs. Joseph Fahey, Miss Cecilia O'Leary and Miss Eleanor Wolfe.

Jewish Relief Society to Fete New Officers

Mrs. M. L. Bernstein, new president, and other recently installed officers of the Washington Ladies' Auxiliary of the Jewish Consumptives' Relief Society will be honored with a reception and luncheon January 21 at the Jewish Community Center.

Other officers are: Mrs. Joseph Isaacs, first vice president; Mrs. Mary B. Rockfield, second vice president; Mrs. Charles Goldsmith, treasurer.

Other officers are Mrs. Joseph Friedman, recording secretary; Mrs. Joseph Bernstein, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Harry Goldman, assistant corresponding secretary; Mrs. Ned Board, financial secretary; Mrs. Louis Kalichstein, treasurer.

The organization has made plans for a bazaar February 1 for the benefit of its work for needy tuberculous patients.

Mrs. Wilson Named To Hospital Board

Mrs. John C. Wilson has been elected to the Women's Board of George Washington University Hospital, it was announced after the board meeting this week.

Mrs. Watson W. Eldridge, jr., and Mrs. Howard Kane were named visitors for January.

Appreciation of the library service given to the hospital through the generosity of the Women's Board was cited in a report from Miss Clara Herbert, librarian of the Public Library. The board gives more than $300 for its library work annually. Mrs. Alfred H. Lawson is chairman of the board's library committee.

At the meeting this week, the board's "sunshine committee," of which Mrs. Wilbur H. Collier is chairman, reported on the Christmas cheer provided for patients and nurses at the hospital, through holiday decorations and souvenirs.

Women to Hear Miss Lee Talk

Miss Muna Lee, who has come from her home in Puerto Rico for emergency work in the State Department, will be the speaker at the luncheon of the Society of Women Geographers tomorrow at the Washington Club. Home Fires Also Burning

A Kansas City engine company roared out to a fire. A few minutes later, the Associated Press reported, a phone rang at the glass works adjoining the fire station. "Hey!" came an excited voice. "Would you mind running over to the engine house and turning out the fire under our chili?"

Rail Unions, A. F. L. Buck Agency Shift

The American Federation of Labor and the Railroad Brotherhoods are opposed to decentralization of Federal offices from Washington because, they said, it would bring "unwarranted and unnecessary expenditures" and work "incalculable harm" to the efficiency of Government, it was revealed yesterday.

William Green, president of the A. F. of L., has informed President Roosevelt about their protest, which was unanimously voted by the two bodies at the national joint legislative conference held last Monday and Tuesday.

The labor organizations' resolution was revealed yesterday at a hearing of a House Public Buildings and Grounds subcommittee which has been studying decentralization for the past two months under the chairmanship of Representative Downs (Democrat), of Connecticut.

Congressional opposition to the decentralization move meanwhile gathered strength yesterday when Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, chairman of the Senate District Committee, announced that Director of the Budget Harold Smith would be asked to produce the executive decentralization order before the committee today.

Tydings' Suggestion

The committee call for Smith followed the suggestion of Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, that Budget Office officials appear and explain how thorough an investigation preceded the recent order which would send 12 old-line offices and some 10,000 employes out of Washington to make room for new defense agencies.

The resolution forwarded the President by the labor organizations proposed a reconsideration of the decentralization move pending a thorough survey of existing local office and housing facilities and the possibility of expansion in the District area.

Multi-Shift Plan Suggested

The possibility of Federal employes working in two or three shifts also was suggested.

A double shift in Federal offices here was favored by three witnesses before the Downs subcommittee yesterday. They were John Collier, Commissioner of Indian Affairs; Dan H. Wheeler, chairman of the Bituminous Coal Commission, and Howard A. Gray, Solid Fuels Coordinator.

At the same time the Senate District Committee heard opposition to the decentralization plans from representatives of half-a-dozen agencies ordered to move from Washington.

Representatives Rankin and McGehee, both Mississippi Democrats, denounced the plan.

"I can think of no more vital blow to democracy than to remove offices where Congressmen can't get in touch with them," Representative Rankin declared.

Testimony from several officials that only between 40 and 60 per cent of their employes would consent to leave Washington prompted this remark from Senator Tydings:

"I understood that one of the basic reasons for decentralization was the housing problem. If it's planned to try to get people out of Washington, we may be chasing a will-o'-the-wisp."

Only one of the witnesses, whose offices previously had been represented before the Downs subcommittee, yesterday experssed approval of the decentralization plan.

Budget Bureau officials will be called before the committee at 10:30 a. m. today in the Senate District Committee room.

Woman and 4 Children Die In 10th Sreet Fire; 6 Injured

THE POWELL BROTHERS TAKE FAME IN STRIDE—Posed a la tintype are the Powell brothers, Jackie, 10, and Ronald, 8, and their sister, Marie, 2. Jackie rescued his sister after fire was discovered yesterday by Ronald in the third-floor apartment at 621 F Street Northwest

Five persons, a woman and four children, were burned to death yesterday when an overheated oil stove exploded at their home, 607 Tenth Street Northeast.

Six others, including a fireman and policeman, were injured in the blaze which burned out the inside of the brick two-story and basement row house.

Dead in the fire were Mrs. Elizabeth Josie, her two children, William, 1, and Lillie May, 5; Roger E. Roberts, 5, and his half-brother, Jack H. Jackson, 7. All are Negroes.

Injured who were treated at Casualty Hospital were Mrs. Genevieve Brunch, 38, mother of Mrs. Josie; Mrs. Lillian Roberts, 40; her two daughters, Gloria, 11 months, and Peggy, 11; Police Private Ira B. Weatherall, 46, of the Ninth Precinct, and Fireman Clement R. Mullins, 27, of Engine Company No. 8.

The fire brought the week's fire death toll to eight and caused Fire Chief Stephen Porter to issue a warning against the overtaxing of heating equipment during the current below-freezing weather. Traffic along F Street was blocked during the afternoon rush period by a fire in an apartment at 621 F Street Northwest.

3 Children in Back Room

In the Tenth Street blaze Private Weatherall was overcome by smoke when he attempted to rescue Mrs. Roberts. Fireman Mullins received a lacerated wrist when struck by a falling woodwork. Mrs. Brunch suffered a broken arm and leg and an injured back when she jumped from a second-story window. The others suffered from minor burns.

Three of the dead children were found in a back room on the first floor—where the stove was located—another child and Mrs. Josie were in a front room. Firemen said that the flames probably were smoldering in the back room until an upstairs window was opened, thus whipping the flames through the building.

The F Street fire blocked traffic from Fifth to Eighth Streets along F Street and from E to G Streets along Seventh Street from 4 to 4:30 p. m.

Firemen believe the fire started in the rear of a third floor apartment in the four-story building at 621 F Street, among some stored furniture. A crowd of about 500 spectators gathered on the south side of F Street.

The apartment was occupied by Mr. and Mrs. John Powell and their three children.

Little blond-haired Marie Powell, 2 years old, was the sole occupant of the apartment when the fire started. She stood several minutes watching the flames until her 10-year-old brother, Jackie, ran upstairs and took her to safety. Afterwards she smiled to reporters and said: "Fire was pretty. See my hat."

The fire originally was discovered by her brother, 8-year-old Ronald Powell, who noticed the smoke when he returned from school. The children's father, John Powell, 32, operates a furniture repair and cabinet-making shop on the second floor and used a part of the third and fourth floors to store unrepaired furniture. Damage was estimated at several hundred dollars. The Powells made arrangements to stay with relatives for the night.

Business in candy shop on the ground floor was suspended for a time as a result of water seepage.

Porter Warns Householders

Fire Chief Porter advised householders to consult competent heating engineers if their heating plant proves inadequate, rather than to attempt to overload it.

Chimney and smokestacks should be checked to see that they are in good condition and not themselves fire hazards, he said. Persons who use coal-oil stoves and other emergency heating devices should take care to locate them away from draperies, partitions, woodwork and other inflammable material.

Miss Annette B. Nelson, 47, War Department employe, was fatally burned at 1 a. m. yesterday when fire broke out in her room at 351 Eleventh Street Southeast. Cause of the blaze was still undetermined last night.

The two other fire victims this week were: William H. Kreitzer, 82, of 418 A Street Southeast, and 5-year-old Prince Wright, jr., Negro, of 509 Second Street Southwest.

Blackout Law Invalid, Hankin Says

District utilities, responding to blackout orders or other defense measures altering their services, stand a strong chance of legal responsibility for personal injuries or property damage incident to their action, Gregory Hankin, chairman of the Public Utilities Commission, asserted last night.

Hankin said he did not consider local blackout instructions—issued by Commissioner John Russell Young, United States defense coordinator—legal unless approved by the PUC. He said he intended to so notify Washington utility officials if the situation were not straightened out to his satisfaction.

Earlier in the day the PUC chief received a frosty reception from the Commissioners to his charges they are attempting to "sabotage" functions of his office.

The city heads all declined public comment on Hankin's accusations Wednesday night before the Public Utilities Forum.

They were "too busy"—in the words of Young—with urgent municipal affairs to engage in a controversy with the PUC.

Hankin, in contending that local utilities stand liable for consequences if they comply with defense moves without authorization from his group, recalled that he was not consulted on Washington's recent night blackout test.

This was one of the opening wedges in a rapidly widening breach between Hankin's office and the Commissioners.

"Public utilities in Washington, under existing laws," said Hankin last night, "must render services in accordance with rules and regulations of the PUC."

It would be a "simple matter," he declared, for local defense officials to issue their orders to utilities through his office.

"If they did that," Hankin said, "the services rendered by utilities—under such orders—would be lawful.

Failure of civilian defense authorities to issue orders to utilities—such as the Capital Transit Co., Potomac Electric Power Co., etc.—without consulting the PUC constitutes a variation of services from those authorized by law, Hankin declared.

A member of Congress, instrumental in framing the "blackout" legislation for Washington, added this comment:

"The man's statement is pure poppycock."

Headed by the Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of Baltimore and Washington, Catholic leaders last night called for a bolstering of spiritual and material missionary strength for a world-wide post-war religious revival.

They spoke at the Willard Hotel at a dinner launching a Nation-wide home and foreign missions drive under sponsorship of the Archdiocesan Society for the Propagation of the Faith, and heralding the celebration of Catholic missions Sunday, January 18.

"Should our missionary-mindedness ever grow lessened," warned Archbishop Curley in his address, "God help the church in America."

He appealed for priests and laymen to be inspired with a great love for missions everywhere.

Leaving the foreign missions discussion to other speakers, for the most part, Archbishop Curley urged that "we don't forget our own at home," and said that missionary conditions in certain parts of America—especially in the South—were comparable to the missionary needs in some foreign lands.

Archbishop Curley recalled that as a young priest in Florida 25 years ago, he had lived in a $2-a-week room over a store, had eaten on $4 a week, had gotten down on his knees and scrubbed the parish hall and church floors.

Next to speak was Msgr. Thomas J. McDonnell, national director of the Society for the Propagation of the Faith, who warned that the church is passing through the greatest missionary crisis in its history.

With countless priests, bishops and sisters facing privation, hardships and even death on foreign soil, we in America must be in "the front line trenches of faith" in the missionary cause, he said. The work of a quarter of a century must not cease, he added.

In the same vein, the Rev. John S. Spence, assistant director of the Archdiocesan Society for the Propagation of the Faith, called upon the churches to "muster their resources" for the drive, not waiting for a "better day." He predicted a postwar depression and lack of material depressions "the like of which America has never seen before."

Msgr. Louis C. Vaeth, archdiocesan director of the society and rector of Our Lady of Victory Church here, in his address that climaxed the dinner called America "the arsenal of divine democracy in the world."

2 Convicted In Hyattsville Bank Holdup

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Jan. 8.—A Federal jury deliberated for 16 minutes today and convicted Hilliard Sanders and William L. Keefe of a $52,616 robbery from two bank messengers in Hyattsville, September 25.

Judge W. Calvin Chesnut postponed sentence until Tuesday when defense motions for a new trial will be argued. The men were convicted on a two-count indictment and face a maximum prison sentence of 25 years.

Sanders and Keefe were identified as the holdup men by four witnesses, including the two Prince Georges Bank messengers from whom the money was stolen.

The defense offered testimony was in Florida on the day of the purporting to show that Sanders robbery and couldn't have participated.

But the two messengers said Keefe and Sanders were members of the holdup trio. The third man has not been arrested. The messengers testified that the third man held a shotgun on them while the money was taken from the car.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

The Nats of 1942 may not be the best team in the league next season, but they'll merit at least one superlative. They'll be the most remodeled club in the league. None can match the Washington club's turn-over in talent. Between the Army draft and trades that have been made, the Nats have undergone the league's No. 1 face-lifting job.

POVICH

The change in the Nats will be there for all to see on April 14 when the new season begins. Just to give you an idea of how far-reaching the effects have been, Outfielder George Case will be the only man on the field, aside from the Washington pitcher, who was there when the Nats launched their 1941 campaign.

Not a face remains from that 1941 infield which started the season for the Nats. The first baseman was, you remember, a fellow named George Archie, who had been named the most valuable player in the Coast League the season before. He was the first baseman, but there were already grave doubts that he was the answer to the club's first base problem. Archie couldn't hit very well.

The fellow who will be at first base on April 14 was Archie's understudy when last season opened. Mickey Vernon ran Archie out of the job within a couple of months and is now the fair-haired boy of the team, with his fancy fielding, superlative throwing arm and power at bat. Vernon performed with such success when given the chance that now he is tentatively rated as the club's clean-up hitter.

At Second Base: Frank Croucher

Jimmy Bloodworth was a fixture at second base when the 1941 season commenced. He had beaten out the venerable Buddy Myer for the job, and his swing always contained the threat of power. He's no longer a member of the Nats. His presence was not deemed exactly vital to the club's success, what with his failure to hit consistently and his slowness on the bases, and he was traded to the Tigers last month.

The man who will play second base for the Nats was a .236-hitting shortstop with the Tigers last year. He's Frank Croucher, whom the Tigers included along with Bruce Campbell in the deal involving Bloodworth. The assignment of Croucher to second base comes under the heading of noble experiment. Bucky Harris has a well-defined idea that the fellow is a better second baseman than a shortstop, although what beneficial effect the transposition may have on his .236 batting average is just a bit vague.

The painful difference between the Nats of 1941 and 1942 will be felt at shortstop. That's where Cecil Travis used to play, you remember. When the Army inducted Travis yesterday, they grabbed a .356-hitting shortstop who was the league's best. When they lifted Travis' face from the Washington lineup, they left a difficult plastic job.

A lad named Bob Repass has tentatively been assigned Travis' job, and that act by Manager Harris was accompanied by no handsprings of delight. If he had been given his choice of any shortstop in the big leagues in a trade for Travis, Harris would still have taken a loss on the deal. Repass is up from Columbus, via the $7500 claiming route. He comes tagged as "a pretty good ball player" but if he fills the vacancy completely it will come under the heading of stupendous first-year success in the majors.

A year ago, Buddy Lewis was at third base in the Nats' opening lineup. The Army got him, too, and his enlistment was accompanied by great suffering on the part of Manager Harris. In Lewis, Harris saw the second best hitter on his club pass into an Army uniform. The Nation was still at peace but it looked for all the world to Harris that the United States had declared war on the Washington club.

Nats' CCC Outfield Disrupted

A chap named Hillis Layne will be there at third base next April 14. He has a half-dozen games as his big league background. But he was some shucks as a hitter in the Southern Association, and if he can field a little bit Lewis' loss may be assuaged. Young Layne does, indeed, look like a swell sort of hitter, and Harris is not exactly reluctant to go along with him.

Rick Ferrell was the club's catcher at the outset of 1941, you remember. In mid-season they swapped him to the Browns for Pitcher Vernon Kennedy, in a deal that was no compliment to Ferrell, if you follow us. The man who will catch the opening game for the 1942 Nats was the third-string catcher when last season commenced. He's Jake Early, who finally got a chance to catch regularly last season and did very well, thank you. So well that the club's catching is no longer a problem.

Case was a member of Washington's CCC outfield of Case, Cramer and Chapman at the beginning of 1941. His buddies aren't with the club any longer. Chapman got his unconditional release in June, and Cramer was traded to the Tigers last month. Case will team up this season with Bruce Campbell, former Tiger, and Stan Spence, former Red Sox, who will be donning Washington uniforms for the first time. After all these years, the park concessions will get a break because, verily, you can't tell the players without a scorecard.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Jan. 8.—Sportin' around:

Joe Louis' generosity is without limit. Now he'd like to fight Billy Conn for the Army equivalent of the Navy Relief Society. If he is permitted to do so the revenue will make tomorrow night's fine show at the Garden seem like chicken feed—for the next Louis-Conn match stacks up as a million dollar show . . . As for tomorrow night's Louis-Baer fight, Dan Morgan says, "If Buddy uses his window-washing reach, keeps circling Joe Louis and leans those 245 pounds on Joe, Buddy might last five rounds." . . . Fair enough estimate.

CONSIDINE

Rodger H. Pippen, sports editor of the Baltimore News-Post, rates an assist for tomorrow night's great charity fight. It was Pippen, sitting near the bellkeeper in Washington last May, who jumped to his feet and yelled to Ancil Hoffman and Izzy Kline to demand that Louis be disqualified for hitting Buddy after the bell sounded ending the sixth round. Hoffman obeyed; in fact, kept obeying until Referee Donovan disqualified Baer, because Hoffman and Kline were in the ring when the bell sounded opening the seventh round.

They say nobody loves an umpire, but Bill Klem has gotten a number of votes in our poll of old-time baseball fans. Veteran baseball enthusiasts rate the old arbitrator as more than worthy to join the immortals in the Cooperstown Hall of Fame.

Among those who are all in favor of Joe DiMaggio demanding and getting $60,000 for the 1942 season are the Federal and State income tax collectors . . . Radio broadcasts of ball games will take a dizzy drop next season . . . During World War I Army regulations permitted only one story to be telegraphed from baseball press boxes to the papers. It served for all the papers.

Dan Burley, the colored sports writer who has been criticizing Louis for fighting for the Navy Relief Society, writes me that he thinks Joe is the greatest fighter the ring has known, but that he should have gotten some expression from the Navy, before fighting for its relief fund, regarding the Navy's future policy toward colored men. "We are proud of the fact that the Army recognizes us and allows our youngsters to attend and graduate from West Point like all Americans, and to attain high rank in the Army, as in the case of Gen. Benjamin O. Davis," Burley writes. "Negroes are getting a break in the air force, too. But there is no public record that the Navy is going to bring its colored men up from the galleys and mess halls, allow them to drop their shoe shine brushes and grab guns and help fight for their country, instead of being lackeys and menials for it."

Louis has bought 14 seats for Fats Waller's concert at Carnegie Hall next Wednesday . . . Pardonably bursting with pride, George Marshall wired the following from Beverly Hills after his man Sam Baugh had passed to the third All Stars' touchdown: "Lot of people write about who is the best forward passer, but when you get them all together on the field, Uncle Sam does right fair."

About the first governmental move to make Hawaii tougher was Congress' approval of 15-round boxing matches for the islands, instead of 10-round limits. The legislation went through three days after Pearl Harbor was bombed . . . Wonder how many in the audience know Buddy Baer's first name? It's Jake . . . Louis was trying to make it 28 victories in a row the night he met Max Schmeling and got knocked out by the German. Tomorrow night he'll try to stretch his new winning streak to 28 . . . If 6-foot 6½-inch Buddy wins, he'll be the tallest champion since Goliath—Jess Willard was a quarter of an inch shorter than Buddy and Primo Carnera three-quarters of an inch shorter, the runt.

Joe Louis Risks Title for Charity Tonight

Gate of $200,000 Expected; Champion To Give $75,000 To Navy Relief

By Bob Considine

New York, Jan. 8.—Joe Louis adds one more record to his file tomorrow night at Madison Square Garden when he fights Buddy Baer, his biggest and hardest punching challenger, for not one cent of the expected $200,000 gate.

The champion's entire purse, which is expected to total $75,000, will be turned over to the families of Navy men and Marines who gave up their lives at Pearl Harbor, Manila and the hot dots that stretch between those two cankers on the Pacific map. It is the first time in the history of the heavyweight division that a champion has made such a gesture.

Baer, serious younger brother of the Livermore, Calif., clown who frittered away the championship, will fight for 15 per cent of the net gate. He will turn back 2½ per cent of this to the Navy Relief Society. Promoter Mike Jacobs will turn over all of his own profits. The relief society is expected to benefit by more than $100,000 from the night's fighting.

Champ Weighs 205

Louis will weigh in tomorrow at 205 pounds, the heaviest at which he has ever campaigned. Baer, who knocked Joe out of the ring in the first round of their fight in Washington last May 23, will weigh 245. He stands 6-feet-6½ inches and if he wins he will be the biggest man ever to hold the title.

No one here tonight, except Baer and a few loyal handlers, thought he was going to win. Such betting as there was evolved around Baer's chances of evading a knockout at the hands of the docile-looking colored man who is turned into a two-fisted savage at the sound of a bell. Sam Boston's betting office tonight quoted Louis as a 1-to-7 shot to win, a 1-to-3 shot to knock out Baer. Gamblers believe it is even money that Baer will not last beyond the fourth round.

The fight will mark Louis' twentieth defense of the championship he won from Jim Braddock in Chicago in 1937. He has now defended his title almost as many times as all of his predecessors as far back as John L. Sullivan defended their crowns. Louis also will be gunning for his twenty-eighth consecutive victory. The last time he tried to make it 28 in a row was in 1936, and Max Schmeling knocked him out. But Schmeling later became just one more of the new crop of victims on Louis' new winning streak.

End Was Wild

The Louis-Baer fight last May ended in the wildest scene of any of Louis' fights. But the ending was hardly more than an anti-climax to the earlier thrills in the fight—what with Louis being knocked out of the ring with a crunching left hook and what with the violent counterattack that had Baer hitting the floor four times.

At the end of three minutes of

Blackhawks Beat Les Canadiens, 5 to 1

Chicago, Jan. 8 (AP).—The Chicago Blackhawks snapped a six-game losing streak tonight by defeating the Montreal Canadiens, 5-1, in a National Hockey League game. Only 6071 spectators, smallest crowd of the year, came out to the Chicago Stadium to see a game marked by three player fights, one of which broke out after the match ended and threatened for a while to run into a general riot.

Buddy Baer, Challenging for Second Time Confident of Victory in 15-Round Benefit Fight

By Tony Neri
Post Staff Writer

New York, Jan. 8.—Realizing that opportunity is knocking for the second time within eight months, Buddy Baer, towering "Little" brother of "Madcap" Maxie, stands ready and confident that he will succeed in accomplishing what he failed to do that memorable night in Washington—the dethroning of Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis.

Tomorrow night in Madison Square Garden Baer will answer that knock with the hope of opening the door and finding as his reward the "heavyweight championship of the world."

A record throng of more than 20,000 is likely to witness the battle, scheduled over the 15-round distance. Promoter Mike Jacobs, who is staging the fight for the benefit of the Navy Relief Society, is anticipating a record gate for the Garden.

Louis, the imperturable Brown Bomber, is donating his share of the gate. Jacobs has also kicked in, and is staging the show without allowing himself one cent of the profits. And Baer is giving a portion of his purse to the worthy cause of Navy Relief.

28 in Row for Joe

Twenty-eight consecutive bouts the Brown Bomber has won. In nineteen of these Joe has successfully defended his title, but never was Louis' crown in such a precarious position as that night in Washington—May 23, 1941. And the man who came within inches of toppling that crown—Buddy Baer—is in there again tomorrow night eagerly and unafraid to match his best with the Bomber, whom many boxing experts call the best of "all time."

In that first meeting between the pair the unsung Baer knocked Louis through the ropes in the first round with a smashing left hook. The perplexed champion climbed back into the ring and opened a barrage of leather which Baer gamely took and then returned a fusillade of his own. Action was so intense that it baffled Referee Arthur Donovan, who stopped the fighting before the bell ended the round.

Confusion marked the fight throughout. In the sixth round Louis smothered Buddy with his heavy ar-

Detroit Bows To Americans' Rally, 5 to 4

By the United Press

New York, Jan. 8.—A pair of goals by Billy Benson in the final period enabled the Brooklyn Americans to defeat the Detroit Red Wings, 5-4, in a National Hockey League game played in Madison Square Garden tonight before 8742 fans. Benson's second goal—at 19:33—won the game.

Benson's first goal at 13:54 on passes from Pat Egan and Buzz Boll put the Americans ahead in the final period, but Mud Bruneteau tied the score for the Wings at 17:38. Egan fed another pass to Benson for the deciding marker.

Eastern Five Beats Little Generals, 34-22

Eastern High, improving as the game progressed, downed Washington-Lee's smart, young five, 34-22, yesterday in the scholastic basketball feature at the Tide gym.

The Little Generals put up a stiff battle for one half, but couldn't keep pace with the club of veterans which Eastern tossed at them in the second half. A 12-10 deficit at intermission soared to 25-16 at the end of three quarters and from there in it was no contest.

It was the sixth straight triumph for the White Tide, and W.-L.'s second loss in four games.

In keeping with its policy of turning out a new high scorer in every game, Eastern yesterday owed the high individual effort to little Jim Brady and his eagle eye from far out. Brady registered 10 points, eight on long tosses.

Except for Brady's work, most of the Tide scoring took place after fast passing under the basket. Mike Lieb's seven points from the side court and foul line was second high, and George Pigott and Harry Bond ran next with 6 apiece.

On the losers' side, Bob Huff led with 8 points. Though in competition for only half the game, John Grinnell ran second with five.

Travis' Goal Tops U. Va. for Terps, 35-34

Charlottesville, Va., Nov. 8.—Maryland's All-Sophomore basketball team nosed out Virginia, 35 to 34, tonight in a game that saw the lead shifting rapidly throughout both halves. Ernie Travis was the Terrapins' scoring star, caging 20 points and crashing through with the winning basket in the final minute.

First Virginia, then Maryland, took a short lead during a nip-and-tuck first half in which Travis, Old Line sharpshooter from Silver Spring, caged five field goals and four foul baskets to give the Terrapins a two-point lead after ten minutes.

Then Virginia's Dick Wiltshire and Billy Preston got the range and pulled the Cavaliers in front by five points. Bob James, who was acting captain for Maryland, and Tommy Mont tied the game up, but Virginia's Al Lowman sank a long floor shot just before half time to give the home team a 20-to-18 advantage.

Several minutes of the second half clicked by before Lowman rang another from long range to

Kansas State Clears Tucker As Athlete

By the Associated Press

Manhattan, Kans., Jan. 8.—M. F. Ahearn, Kansas State director of athletics, today cleared Gerald Tucker for sports participation at Oklahoma next semester, and said "as far as I am concerned the Tucker case is now closed."

Ahearn said he had received a letter from L. E. Haskell, Sooner athletic director, stating reasons why Tucker had enrolled at that school after nine weeks at Kansas State.

"Haskell's letter complies with the Big Six migrant athletic ruling," he said, "and therefore I have no objection now to his becoming eligible at the end of the present semester."

However, at Lawrence Dr. F. C Allen of K. U., disclosed he was requesting a meeting of faculty representatives to reconsider Tucker's eligibility and also to consider the eligibility of Lester Layton, Oklahoma baseball player.

I Ain't Hurt, Mom, Buddy Schmeling Might Have Said

Proof of the keen interest at least one D. C. citizen takes in sports was contained in a call to The Washington Post sports department last night.

"Hello," a matronly voice hailed. "can you give me the result of the fight tonight."

"What fight?" a bewildered sports writer asked.

"Why the Buddy Baer—Max Schmeling fight they had in Madison Square Garden, of course."

Hoyas Fall Far Behind In 2d Half

2500 See Rams, Led by Karpowich, Roll Up 33 Points After Intermission

By Merrell W. Whittlesey
Post Staff Writer

Fordham brought the classiest New York club to appear in Washington for several years to Riverside Stadium last night and routed Georgetown, 53 to 31, in an affair that was strictly no contest after the first half.

The Hoyas, suffering either from the holiday layoff or a bad case of the jitters, disappointed a crowd of nearly 2500 with their poorest performance since moving to Riverside. They would have been more at home with the parochial league teams which played during the half.

After the slow-starting clubs matched baskets during the first ten minutes to an 8-all deadlock, the Rams stepped out to a 20-15 halftime margin and, playing at a never-miss pace in the second half buried the Hoyas deep under an avalanche of perfectly executed play-up shots. Their final 22-point margin could have been 50 if the game had lasted much longer.

Karpowich Leads Attack

Tony Karpowich, a court smoothie who tucked in six field goals from his usual under the basket position, Moon Mullins, an elusive forward who was always where the Hoya guards were not and lanky Dick Fitzgerald, the bespectacled guard who played a major part in grabbing the ball were coheroes for the high-scoring Rams who fell just shy of their 56-point-per-game average.

Joe Croke and Art Savage also had a big hand in the Ram success. Karpowich, a sophomore, maintained his high scoring pace while Mullins was next with 12 points and Croke nine. Big Bill Bornheimer, the high scoring junior center of the Hoyas, was horribly off last night and it seemed contagious. Even Buddy O'Grady, who stuck in there for ten points but with only a part of his usual ball handling antics, had a bad night.

Bornheimer No Help

Bornheimer played the first 16 minutes without making a point and he left with three personal fouls at that point. Coach Ripley put him back in midway in the second half but after cashing in with a single one-handed two-pointer he drew his fourth foul of the night and left the game. In his first half stay he was way off his usual ball-hawking form as the Rams collected the ball off both backboards and romped the length of the floor as they pleased.

It was obvious from the first few minutes that Georgetown was in for a bad night and instead of getting better things got worse. The Rams were intercepting passes, grabbing the ball on the follows, passing the Hoyas dizzy and when

Just-Before-Battle Blurbs by Buddy And the Bomber

New York, Jan. 8.—Here are the final prebattle statements of Joe Louis and Buddy Baer for their fight tomorrow night:

LOUIS—I'm predicting a knockout. You know I never pick the round, but it'll be as soon as I can catch up to him. I'm in better condition right now than I have been for some time.

BAER—I'm going to win. We will fight the kind of fight Louis decides to fight. If he wants to slug, I'll do that with him. If he elects to box, we'll fight it that way. The beat bothered me in Washington the last time I met Joe, but I'm in perfect condition now.

Lions' Revised Lineup Beats New Haven, 8-3, Ending Slump

D. C. Team Packs Punch, Never Trails

Chamberlain and Trudal Star With Two Goals Each In Easy Triumph

By Jack Munhall

Ching Johnson's revised line-up paid quick dividends last night as his Washington Lions ended a three-match losing streak with their highest scoring total of the season burying the New Haven Eagles, 8-3, in an American Hockey League match.

With Louie Trudel ending his personal scoring slump with a pair of rapid goals in the third period and Newcomer Murphy Chamberlain recording his first markers here, the Lions never trailed.

Chamberlain, on loan from Les Canadiens, worked well with Capt. George Mantha and Polly Drouin to match Trudel's brace of goals and in addition the boyish-looking winger flashed unusual skating speed. Chamberlain, incidentally, came to Washington as somewhat of a surprise, for when Coach Johnson sent a hurry call to Les Canadiens it was for a defense man to replace the injured Burt Janke.

Lions Display Spark

All in all it was one of the most pleasant matches of the season for the Lions who had scored only three goals in their last four starts. Not only did the veteran Trudel regain the offensive form which has enabled him to produce almost half of the Lions' goals, but the "kid" line continued to improve.

Frank Mailley, Walter Zuke and Stan Rooke comprised the Lions' young trio last night and they displayed more spark and drive than ever before, with Zuke rapping in a pair of counters.

Connie Tudin, shifted from wing to defense to bolster the department weakened by Janke's injury, more than lived up to Johnson's expectations. The swift-moving former Canadien played the position as though he were brought up in it and none of the Eagles' three goals was in any way his fault.

The Strangler, Steele Win And Will Meet

By Oscar Elder

Approximately 1300 fans saw Ed (Strangler) Lewis and Ray Steele win the co-feature wrestling matches at Turner's Arena last night, and thereby lay the groundwork for a epic struggle amongst themselves in the near future.

Both grapplers won the plaudits of the crowd for the manner in which they did their stint, and Promoter Joe Turner broached the subject of matching them against each other. Steele boastfully asserted that he was not all averse to picking up a spare buck or two, and that his only worry was for Mr. Lewis' welfare. The big Strangler merely waggled his bushy eyebrows, in the manner of his illustrious namesake, John L., and grunted that Steele could be scrapped.

Lewis easily stepped over another obstacle in his comeback campaign by disposing of Stanley Pinto, the comic opera athlete, with a headlock in 11 minutes. Moving remarkably fast despite his 274 pounds, Ed came out fast at the whistle and clamped on a headlock and then a bear hug as Pinto scrambled for the ropes.

Pinto became ambitious and uncorked some slugging. As Referee Casey Berger stepped in to remonstrate, Lewis waved him away and cracked, "Relax, chum, and leave him be. Me and Providence will take care of this chump!" And that's just what happened, for less than five minutes later Lewis grabbed Pinto's thinkpot, got set with his famous headlock, and the match was over.

Steele's chore was a big longer in execution, for he required 46 minutes and something he termed an upside down reverse stepover toe hold to quell Pat Fraley, a fellow Californian. This match was power versus power all the way, and the advantage changed hands more frequently than the lead in an eight-day bike race.

First, Fraley was squarely in the switches when Steele misused him with a combination head scissors and wristlock. Then it was Steele in agony when Patrick wriggled free and found an authoritative armlock. When the opportunity presented itself Pat landed with his old favorite, the donkey kick, and booted Steele almost out of the inclosure. This maneuver mollified Fraley somewhat for his loss, for he counts it a dismal evening when he can't sneak over his patented punt at least once.

The finish finally came with startling suddenness. Fraley bounced off the ropes and hit Steele with a flying tackle. In following through he missed an Australian leglock, and Steele pounced on with his leglock. Fraley conceded the match at this point.

Fred Grobmier downed Fred Carone in 18 minutes with a figure four hold after a rough match, and Maurice La Chappelle, of France, won a scientific opener from John Vansky on an airplane spin after 22 minutes.

La Haight Gets Mixed Up With Ice Skates, Variety Club and Some Press Agents

Dear Boss:

It must be because it's easier for me to move my head up and down than to turn it from side to side that I'm always getting talked into things. Now take this afternoon. I was sitting in "pneumonia nook" minding my own business when a messenger boy came in with a telegram.

HAIGHT

It was from Carter Barron, Mr. Big of the Loew's theaters. Certainly was good to hear from a friend so far away. In fact, Carter sent it from away up on F Street at the Capitol Theater. So distant is his office from ours that he could have opened his window and shouted across the alley.

The telegram started: "When the 'Ice-Capades', the popular ice show, comes to Washington to open on January 14, the opening night will be sponsored by the Variety Club with all the proceeds, except actual operating expenses, going to the Navy Relief Society."

Well, Boss, I'll always suspect there was some expert timing involved in this. I was just starting to read the second paragraph of the telegram when what to my wondering eyes did appear but Lee Holland, who beats the publicity drums for Uline's Arena. Now if I could have put 2 and 2 together I would have smelled a raccoon, but I didn't.

Holland doesn't pay you al la Herman and he doesn't run in and out of the office in the same motion a la Holman, but Holland gets places in the handout department. He just walked up to me quietly and said, "Haight, I think it would be a good idea—."

I didn't hear the rest of the sentence because the fire engines went by and my next recollection was that he was saying, "O. K. How would you like to be a tender?"

"Come on, Haight, get your coat. I'll get Ching Johnson to give you some lessons as a goal tender," replied Holland.

Well, Boss, the only thing good about a hockey goal tender's job is that you can put on 40 pounds and then take it off when the game's over. But hockey is no game for me. I don't like that idea of all ice and no Scotch, and besides, I was so tired when I finished getting into the outfit, despite excellent cooperation from Lou Miller, that I couldn't have tended a sheepskin coat.

Then there's another angle to a goal tender's gear that is not encouraging. Although you are padded and repadded in the front (where I really don't need it) there is practically nothing in the rear but a thin piece of silk trunks, if you know what I mean, and when I fell down I didn't land on my well-padded elbows, my well-upholstered tummy or my cushioned face.

Well, anyway I crashed so hard that, for a moment, I thought I had gone right through the floor and I was mixed up in a battle between the Chinese and Japs outside of Changsha. They laughed when I came on the ice and they laughed when I sat down.

I guess there are some advantages to being a goal tender. If a guy can't get to Florida he can keep fairly warm in those stuffed clothes and then again he is fairly safe from hotfoots, an item of some import when it is taken into consideration that Bill McCormick is a Variety Clubber if only by default, if you know what I mean.

I was thinking, Boss, that the playing floor of the Lions would be a swell place to stage a party. Just think, you wouldn't have to stall off your guests while the cubes were forming in the electric icebox. You could just present each guest with a small ice pick, bring in the other ingredients and let them go for themselves.

Perhaps this isn't funny, Boss, but it is one way an ex-Navy guy like your blubber boy can aid a serious cause like the Naval Relief Society. We can't all get in the Navy, Boss, but we can all help. We can get in to see a darned good show in the "Ice-Capades" next Wednesday at Uline's Arena and do our daily good deed in the bargain.

Always your ace,
CHEAP SKATE HAIGHT.

P. S.—What's the name of that thing the hockey players bat around?

Joe Cronin's Sub Reclassified 1A

Boston, Jan. 8 (AP).—Joe Cronin's plans to quit shortstopping and become a bench manager appeared headed for the discard today when Boston Red Sox officials were informed by Johnny Pesky that his Portland (Oreg.) draft board had reclassified him from 3A to 1A.

As a result Pesky, rated as Cronin's most likely successor in the infield, is subject to an immediate call by the United States Army.

Al Treder, Manor Golf Pro, Breaks Wristbone in Fall

Loss of Assistant Complicates Things For Links Mentor

Eddie Stevens' recall to Army service cost Al Treder his pro golf assistant at Manor Country Club early this week and then day before yesterday Treder slipped and shattered a major bone in his wrist in a nasty fall.

Treder, a right-handed golfer but southpaw in everything else, will be about for several weeks with his left arm in a sling.

Treder's broken bone was set by Dr. Howard L. Smith, the prominent amateur golfer at Congressional Country Club who broke his collar bone in a fall from a horse two weeks ago. Dr. Smith worked with his shoulder strapped.

Stevens, who was drafted early last summer, was released from the Army in November as he is a year over the 28 age limit but was recalled after war was declared. He will report to Fort Meade January 21. He was married in the meantime.

Manor Club members will elect members to the board of governors Monday, January 12, at the clubhouse. The board will then elect a president and other officers. W. L. Jones is president.

16 Amateur Ring Titles at Stake Tonight

Amateur boxing champions of Washington will be crowned tonight at Uline's Arena, where the ninth annual Golden Gloves Boxing Tournament comes to a close with a total of 16 bouts, the finals in both senior and novice events. Starting time will be 8 p. m.

A near-capacity crowd is anticipated by Gloves headquarters, but a new paid-attendance mark is certain to be set. Fist-swinging in all classes from 112 pounds to heavyweight will be fast and furious, with short-order knockouts and upsets always expected.

Bouts will be over the three-round route as in previous years, but each round will be extended from two to three minutes.

Boys Club Is Favorite

Lou Gevinson's popular Boys Club of Washington representation will go into the novice finals the team favorite as a result of having placed five of its original nine starting representatives into the finals. National Training School is a close second with four.

The St. Mary's Club of Alexandria sends seven warriors into the senior finals, but one of these boys faces automatic elimination in the 175-pound class where teammates square off. The Apollo Club is the runner-up with four entries.

Hottest bout of the night is scheduled for the 147-pound senior division where Nick Latsios, terrific punching St. Mary's Club favorite, engages Red Vernon of the Knights of Columbus.

Both Vernon and Latsios qualified for the Eastern Golden Gloves finals in New York last winter and will be facing one another for the first time tonight. Whereas Vernon fought as a lightweight last winter and Latsios as a welterweight, both squaring off at 147 pounds tonight.

Cady vs. Barber

Practically the entire student body of the St. John's cadets will be sitting in for the heavyweight senior final in which Frank Cady, formerly a star athlete with the cadets and now equally as brilliant at Charlotte Hall Military Academy, meets Bill Barber, the Apollo Club's hard-hitting star. Cady boxes for the Red Shield Club.

In his only previous Gloves appearance Barber scored a one-round knockout of Art Gore of the St. Mary's Club, and is expected to extend Cady to the utmost tonight. Cady will weigh 230 pounds as against 195 for Barber.

THE PAIRINGS

Army May Take Dempsey Yet —Recruiting Officer Gives O.K.

Ex-Champ Recommended to Washington, Called 'Fit as a Fiddle' at 46 Years

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 8.—Jack Dempsey's application for enlistment in the United States Army as a buck private was forwarded to Washington today by Col. George H. Baird, Second Corps Area recruiting and induction officer, with the recommendation that the former heavyweight champion be accepted despite the fact that his 46 years place him 11 years over the age limit.

Dempsey, who attempted to enlist Tuesday after hearing President Roosevelt's speech, was found to be "fit as a fiddle" physically by the recruiting office but was advised that they could not accept him because he came outside the age limit.

Dempsey's case was reconsidered today by Col. Baird who decided that the Army might find a place for the old Manassa Mauler.

S. C. to Quit Boxing After Maryland Match

Gamecocks Will Disband Team, Due to Army Inroads, Says Coach

Whether South Carolina University's Gamecocks have a winning or losing boxing season in 1942 will depend entirely on their showing against Maryland U. tomorrow at College Park, it was disclosed last night when the Carolinians' coach announced the match would be the Gamecocks' sole outing of the season.

Coach Frank DeMars, speaking for school officials, said boxing would be abandoned by the Columbia, S. C., institution following the Terp clash at Ritchie Coliseum. A shortage of material and the Gamecocks' prospects of sending numerous men into the armed forces were given as the reasons in an Associated Press interview.

For its single ring engagement, however, South Carolina will boast a comparatively strong line-up. Five of the eight sluggers who paced the invaders to fourth place in the Southern Conference Tournament last year will be in action, along with several fine newcomers.

Tops on the South Carolina squad is Harry Lofton, 155-pound captain and Southern Conference champion. Other veterans will be Ray Kirwin, 127; Sam King, 135; Ernie Bauer, 175, and Tom Stevenson, heavyweight.

Bauer and Stevenson will have to be extra good to do any real business against the Terps in their respective classes. Bauer must face Herb Gunther, conference champion, who never has lost a bout, and Stevenson must tackle Len Rodman, whom Coach Bob Goldstein rates as just about the best college heavy he's seen.

In fact, Goldstein is happy over hsi entire line-up which also includes John Cicala, 120; Judson Lincoln, 127; Matt Beccio or Tom Jones, 135; Hotsy Alperstein, 145; Pat Quinn or Alex Bebenlo, 155, and Jack Gilmore, 165.

Western High will play the Maryland frosh at basket ball at 8 o'clock in a preliminary.

Blood Bank Pin Tourney Plans To Be Settled

Officials of the Fraternal Blood Bank Bowling Tournament will meet Sunday afternoon at the Elks' Club at 4 o'clock to make plans for the third annual tournament for the benefit of the Children's Hospital Fund. District bowlers are invited to attend to lend suggestions.

Picked teams from eight fraternal orders will roll at Convention Hall February 8 in the all-star program. The Elks, Knights of Columbus, Masons, Odd Fellows, Almas Temple, Royal Arcanum, Knights of Pythias and American Legion will all have representative teams in the competition.

The duckpin tournament of last season boosted The Post Blood Bank Fund by $568, and sponsors hope to double that figure this year.

Okeson Is Honored By N.Y. Touchdown Club

New York, Jan. 8 (AP).—Walter R. Okeson, of Lehigh University, veteran chairman of the football rules committee, received the Touchdown Club's annual award for outstanding contribution to the gridiron sport at a dinner attended by 150 members of the organization here tonight.

Woodward Five Loses to Fairfax, 34-22

Fairfax High basketers took their fourth straight victory yesterday on the home court, stopping Woodward Prep by a 34-22 count after leading all the way. At intermission the hosts were ahead, 13-9.

Fairfax's Earman, with 11 points, was high individual scorer of the game, but only 1 point back was the losers' Noyes.

Blitz your old belongings into cash!

WHAT good is a lamp gathering dust on a shelf? Sell it! What good is a bike gathering rust in the yard? Sell that! What good is a spare bed or a stored-away dining room suite—those unbreakable dolls smiling wistfully in the attic—that tarnished trombone, typewriter, sewing machine, old safe—what good is anything that's outlived its usefulness to you?

So man that pencil—get up a list of "sellables" right now! Take over the telephone—just long enough to call NAtional 4200 and give your ad to a Post Ad-taker. Then . . . ready yourself for ACTION! Snow Ridge Wins Miami Feature; Three Get $3627 Double

Army Song Second in Top Event

One Jest Third as Guest's Entry Scores By Half a Length In Comeback Effort

By the Associated Press

Tropical Park, Fla., Jan. 8.—The successful return to competition of the former Wheatley Stable stakes horse, Snow Ridge, in the Miami Springs Purse, and one of those telephone-number daily double payoffs highlighted the sport here this afternoon.

Snow Ridge, which last started in the Widener Handicap almost a year ago, when he wound up eighth, today carried Winston Guest's silks to a half-length score in the feature. Army Song, the favorite, and One Jest were next over the wire, three lengths apart. The winner, a 4-to-1 chance in the field of five, was timed in 1:42 1-5 for the mile and 70 yards. After One Jest and then Army Song had had their flings setting the pace, Snow Ridge drove up from third place for his last-furlong victory charge.

$3,627.80 Double

Holders of the three winning daily double tickets sold on the combination of Silent Host and the aptly named High Luck received the big thrill of the afternoon, for each $2 ticket called for $3,627.80, highest payoff of this season to date.

Harry Witte, from Ellendale, N. Dak., now a waiter at a Miami Beach Hotel, and his wife split one of the tickets. White said this was his first trip to the races and his first winning wager. The Wittes, of modest means, liked the numbers 9 and 3. Five New Yorkers split another ticket, while the third was owned by an elderly man who would only say he came from Coral Gables. He left the track, intending to cash in at a later date.

The national record double payoff of $10,772.40 was recorded at Washington Park in 1939, the appropriate combination being Joy Bet and Merry Caroline. Seven years ago, at this track, a young Jersey truck driver named Harry Topser, enjoying a vacation, won a $7,205.40 double, the record here.

It was later reported that Mr. and Mrs. Witte were granted their request to have three track policemen escort them to Coral Gables, where they bought $3000 worth of defense bonds (costing $2250 in cash) and deposited $1000 in a postal savings account, which left them $377.50 in cash of their profits on the day.

C. U. and Hoya Hockey Team Tangle Tonight

The collegiate hockey season will be resumed tomorrow night after a lay-off of three weeks when Georgetown University's undefeated club meets Catholic University at 8:30 at Riverside Stadium.

The Hoyas and Cardinals will be continuing a series begun in 1939, when they played one of the first ice hockey matches of any kind ever seen here. The intercity rivals split even in their two games that year and have not played since.

Georgetown, victor over LaSalle College (12-0) and Penn (4-1) in its first two games, will be favored over the Cardinals, who will be in their season's debut.

Averaging eight goals a game, Georgetown expects its twin scoring aces, Bill Deegan and John McQueeny, to prove a little too tough for the less experienced Brookland team to stop.

Cuban Yacht Race Goes On as Planned

Havana, Jan. 8 (AP).—The National Sports Commission announced today the international star class yacht races would be held here, as scheduled, between January 31 and February 7.

The series of races brings together Cuban and United States yachtsmen in competition for the Cup of Cuba and the Bacardi Trophy.

There is some doubt, however, that the annual St. Petersburg, Fla., to Havana race will be held due to the war.

Eagles Meet River Vale Tonight

Only 15 players will break into action for the Washington Eagles tonight when they return to Riverside Stadium for an Eastern Hockey League game with the River Vale Skeeters, of River Vale, N. J., at 8:30 o'clock.

Already a player short due to the injury suffered by Tommy McCormack last week, the champions tonight must do without the services of Paul Courteau, high scoring center and winger, who was checked and injured by big Defenseman Al Yourkewicz, of the Boston Olympics, at the Boston Garden last Wednesday night in what Coach Redvers Mackenzie describes as "an unwarranted and unprovoked attack."

River Vale Bolstered

The return of Defenseman Rolly McLenahan, who served a one-match suspension against Boston last Wednesday after having been charged with a match penalty the night previously, will offset the loss of Courteau in some measure.

The Eagles tonight will be bidding for their fifth victory in a row over a River Vale team that has been strengthened through the recent acquisition of Don Durno, big defenseman released to the Skeeters by the Eagles. In their last four games the Skeeters have tied the Eastern League leading Boston Olympics and won consecutively over Atlantic City, Baltimore and Johnstown.

Durno was reluctantly passed along by Mackenzie when the Eagles appeared overloaded with players, and since has played a major role in the rise of the Skeelers from the depths.

The Eagles tonight will be out to terminate a two-game losing streak that has extended to four of their last five games. The champions must hit a long winning streak in short order or else face elimination as a possibility to retain the title they won last season.

Leoffler Seeks Forfeit

Owner S. Leoffler, sr. of the Eagles, today entrains for New York for an Eastern Hockey League meeting at Madison Square Garden, where he will demand that the Boston Olympics forfeit the 7-to-6 game credited them over the Eagles at Riverside last Tuesday night.

N. Y. Race Body Reelects Vanderbilt and Bull

New York, Jan. 8 (AP).—President Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, of the Westchester Racing Association, and President George H. Bull, of the Saratoga Association were reelected today at the annual meeting of the Jockey Club, which operates the five New York tracks.

Bull, also president of the Empire City Racing Association, was named for the thirteenth consecutive year to head the Spa course, where thoroughbred meetings have been held since Civil War days.

Selections at Tropical Park

Dear Al:

I guess we all could use a piece of that monster daily double at this track yesterday. Came right on the heels of no tickets sold on the winning combination at Fair Grounds the day before. But Charles Town still holds the record with no tickets sold on the winner of a single race. What happened? The West Virginia track paid off the win mutuel on the second horse. This couldn't happen at most tracks because the operators buy a $2 ticket on every horse in every race. Jockey Don MacAndrews, who injured his wrist at Pimlico last fall, says his hand is strong again. Jockey M. N. Gonzales has canceled a call he gave the LeMar Stock Farm and is riding free lance. Ben Whitaker seems to have a pretty fair hide in Eternal Peace, a recent winner here. He purchased this son of Peace Chance and Abeth at the Saratoga sales for $2900. John (Red) Pollard, regular rider of Seabiscuit when that one was in his prime, has affiliated himself with the stable trained by Nat Ray. If anybody sees Jockey Danny Scocca, tell him to drop by Alan Clarke's farm at Clarksville, Md., when he gets a chance. Promoters of a new track at Camden, N. J., have been trying to buy the equipment of the defunct Gulfstream Park, just north of Miami. Only in this fashion could they obtain speedily the steel and other material needed. Frank G. Menke, who turns in a swell publicity job for the Kentucky Derby, has fired his first shot of 1942 in the form of a letter which reads, in part: "Kindly fill out the enclosed post card and breeze it back to me at the earliest moment, so that I can have the mailing list up to date—and correct. As I've pointed out in previous years, sports editors have a habit of advancing very rapidly in life, due to their brains, of course, rather than their beauty, and a sports editor of yesteryear might be a managing editor now, or an editor, a publisher, or maybe a millionaire, with, or without, gout."

BILL.

First race—MEXICANA appears well placed in the day's opener. The company is right and I'm going to string along. RUGGED ROCK belongs close with these. ELOOTO for the minor money.

Second race—Maiden 3-year-olds compete in this sprint and SISTER DON gets my call. McCreary will do the riding. TOUR, from the Bryson string, should be in the thick of contention. BUNDLING for the minor money.

Third Race—LIGHT SWEEPER appears the best of those gathered for this dash. Gets in light and needs only a hustling ride. FANTASTICAL and SERGEANT BOB appear capable of filling out the money bracket.

Fourth race—HIS SHADOW could be the right one in this rather open affair. He is the light weight of the party. LAYAWAY and JACK K. seem to have something on the others.

Fifth race—SHADOWS PASS turned in a fine effort last out and that performance repeated should win a race of this kind. BALMY SPRING is good but may be overmatched at 120 pounds. TONY WEAVER should be no farther back than third.

Sixth race—ABOYNE gets my call in this sprint. Don Meade is scheduled to do the booting and he knows the shortest way home. HARP WEAVER belongs in the first flight and is dangerous. RED CHIP for the show money.

Seventh race—SANDY BOOT should go well in this distance event and would have the right rider if Wayne Wright is aboard. TIME SHEET is a fair sort and belongs close. AVESTA for the show end.

Eighth race—MEMORY BOOK is as good as they can patch up those ailing legs. If right, he will gallop. WAR POINT has speed and is a threat. LEONARDTOWN, in present shape, deserves respect.

Best Bet—ABOYNE.

Fishing with JACK BELL

Gun owners don't need to be ashamed of their safety record, according to Mr. C. B. Lister, secretary-treasurer of the National Rifle Association. Speaking before the New York Conservation Council at Rochester, N. Y., recently, he stated that only 2400 of nearly 100,000 fatal accidents occurring in this country in 1940 were caused by firearms.

"Automobiles caused 15 times as many fatalities," Lister said. He continued, "Simple falls caused 11 times as many. On the basis of all accident claims filed with the accident insurance companies in 1940, baseball was responsible for four times as many as hunting."

You might have trouble in making your mothers, and yes in many cases your wife believe it, but the cold, unbiased figures of the insurance companies show that picnics and similar outings were responsible for more claims than hunting.

One of the encouraging results of the past hunting season was the reduction in hunting accident toll. Despite great concentrations of hunters, the boys were certainly more careful and apparently the Fish and Game safety drive all over the country by Outdoor Writers, is proving more than worthwhile.

A northwestern survey shows that America's six million hunters provide the Nation with a far broader base for home defense guard than Great Britian had at the start of the war. The study cites ten million rifles sold in the past ten years as an indication that Americans are far more proficent in handling firearms than citiens of Britain, in which country hunting is much less prevalent, only for the upper classes.

A few months ago we told how Julian Hill, Virginia Game Warden caught three men who were hunting out of season and without licenses for squirrel. W. S. Crute, warden down Mecklenburg way may or may not have had Hill's experience in mind when he used his pipe to call up three turkey hunters whose activities were not in strictest accordance with the game laws.

Crute knew the turkey hunters were in the woods but he was pretty certain he could not approach them unnoticed. The next best thing was to have them come to him. He climbed a beech tree, knocked the ashes out of his pipe, and 'yelped' the hunters in just as an old hen calls in her poults. Not wanting to be mistaken for a turkey to the extent of having to pick some number 4's out of his hide, Crute slid down out of the tree when he saw the hunters coming through the woods. He stepped out into sight when he heard one of them say, "I know I heard a turkey up here somewhere."

Here are the results of the one week open season held on the Cumberland, Buckingham-Appomattox, and Prince Edward State forests in Virginia, from December 8 to 13. A total of 281 permits were issued at the five hunters' contact stations. Only 2 hunters checked in on the 13th. A heavy rain and sleet storm kept all others out on this last day of the hunt.

Thirty-three turkeys, 93 quail, 28 squirrels, two foxes and five raccoons were reported killed. The heaviest turkey tipped the scales at 17 pounds 4 ounces, and the next in size weighed just 16 pounds. Two others weighed over 14 pounds. Twelve gobblers and 21 hens were included in the bag.

Moe Dubilier, Brewer Star, Joins Army

Moe Dubilier, for two seasons a star with the Washington Brewers professional basketball team, yesterday enlisted in the Army, it was announced.

Dubilier hopes to land in the Air Corps, Coach Mack Posnak said. His joining the armed forces to "do his bit to beat the Japs and Nazis," as he put it, leaves a wide gap in the Brewers' ranks as they point for Sunday night's league game with the New York Jewels, 1938-39 champions, at Turner's Arena.

Already hard hit by the absence of Pete Berenson and Irving Rizzi, two guards, now on the ailing list, Coach Posnak is faced with the problem of securing up some good pro talent to replace them before Sunday's game. To fill one hole, he has decided to return to the game against the Jewels, but with Dubilier out of the fold permanently Posnak will be missing the services of a valuable floor man and shooter.

Leading scorer of the team last season, Dubilier has averaged between 8 and 10 points per game since he joined the team after they had played two contests.

Posnak indicated he might make a trip East to dig up some replacements.

The Brewer players, besides Posnak, available for Sunday duty are Ben Kramer, Nat Frankel, Ben Goldfaden, Georgie Slott, Whitey Wilson and Herman Knipple. With the Jewels are such standouts as Mac Kinsbrunner and Willie Rubenstein, former All-Americans; Ace Goldstein, Hal Benson and Hagan Anderson.

Washington is two games from the league-leading Wilmington Blue Bombers, and hopes to overhaul them ere the first half ends.

"Ladies Night" will be observed again Sunday, with all feminine fans to be admitted free when accompanied by an escort.

Local Finance Firm's Control Changes Hands

The National Funding Corporation has purchased controlling interest of the $3,500,000 Seaboard Finance Corporation of Washington, it was announced yesterday by W. A. Thompson, president of the Pacific Coast firm.

Headquarters of the Seaboard firm, which has 20 offices in nine eastern and western States, are in the Southern Building here. The finance corporation operates extensively in Maryland and Virginia. Founded by Scott B. Appleby in 1935, the organization's present officers are Mr. Appleby, chairman of the board; Paul A. Appleby, president; James M. Johnston, vice president; W. W. Roach, secretary and treasurer; W. B. Davis, jr., assistant secretary.

Seaboard officers and employes will be retained, according to Mr. Thompson's announcement, and the purchase will expand the number of offices operating by National Funding Corporation to 45 in 13 States. National Funding headquarters will remain in Los Angeles.

Seaboard has about 1000 shareholders, many of whom are in Washington. Net earnings reported for the year ended September 30 were the largest on record.

New Director Elected

Edwin J. Walton was elected a director of Morris Plan Bank of Washington at the annual meeting of stockholders yesterday. All other directors were reelected as follows: Willard G. Barker, Edwin A. Mooers, W. Cameron Burton, William Clark Taylor, Paul B. Cromelin, Robert J. Bulkley, Thomas C. Boushall, Arthur J. Morris and Ralph W. Pitman.

At the directors' meeting of organization all officers were reelected. They are: Willard G. Barker, president; Elwood G. Childers, vice president; V. Walton Rhine, assistant vice president and assistant secretary; Edwin H. O. Stokes, assistant vice president; G. Crawford Turnbull, cashier and assistant secretary; Louis K. Lynn, auditor; Samuel E. Collegeman, Ferdinand E. Walter, John E. Wilson, Joseph A. Carpenter, Louis O. Hodges, jr., assistant cashiers.

Home Life Insurance

Home Life Insurance Co., of New York, reports new sales in 1941 of $53,055,075, an increase of 21.7 per cent over 1940, according to an announcement just released to the field force here. Total new business paid for last year made 1941 the fourth best year in the company's 82-year history, with only the predepression years of 1928-'30 exceeding last year's production.

December's volume of $9,551,852 set a new all-time high for a single month's issued volume, breaking a record previously set 14 years ago in December, 1927. Paid volume exceeded December, 1940, by 16.8 per cent.

Bank's Idle Cash Up 300 Million in Week

The Federal Reserve Board said yesterday the return flow of Christmas shopping money to the banks boosted lendable excess reserves of the banks 300 million dollars to a total of $3,390,000,000 in the week ended January 7.

The Board's statement said:

"During the week ended January 7 member bank reserve balances increased 267 million dollars. Additions to member bank reserves arose from decreases of 204 million dollars in Treasury deposits with Federal Reserve banks and 52 million dollars in money in circulation, and increases of 25 million dollars in Reserve bank credit and six million dollars in gold stock, offset in part by increases of five million dollars in Treasury cash and 16 million dollars in November deposits and other Federal Reserve accounts. Excess reserves of member banks on January 7 were estimated to be approximately $3,390,000,000, an increase of 300 million dollars for the week."

Wholesale Prices Now 17.6% Above Year Ago

Wholesale prices continued their upward trend during the week ended January 3, reaching a point 17.6 per cent above a year ago. The price level, however, still was below that of the costly days of 1929.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics index for the week was 94.3 per centt of the 1926 average or 1.7 per cent below January 1929. It was, however, 11.3 per cent above the same week of January, 1937.

The index rose 2.3 per cent in the past month and was 0.5 per cent above the previous week.

The bureau reported that the upward movement was quite general with chemicals and allied products up 3.7 per cent, farm products 1.5 per cent, foods 0.8 per cent, building materials and house furnishings 0.2 per cent, and hides and leather products, textile products and miscellaneous commodities 0.1 per cent.

The 1.5 per cent advance in farm products placed this group's index at 96.9 per cent of the 1926 average, the highest point in nearly 12 years.

Sugar Deliveries Heavier in 11 Months

Sugar delivered to American markets under the quota system totaled 7,360,080 short tons, raw value, during the first eleven months of 1941, the Agriculture Department reported yesterday.

Deliveries during the corresponding period in 1940 totaled 6,323,849 tons.

The deliveries were as follows: By refiners, 5,005,744 tons; by beet sugar processers, 1,746,512; refined sugar by importers, 538,827, and, by mainland cane mills, 68,997.

Stocks of sugar held by the distributors on November 30, 1941, totaled 2,027,125 tons compared with 2,135,208 on the same date in 1940, the department said.

OPM Moves to Speed Output of Ship Steel

The Office of Production Management submitted to the country's steel makers yesterday a plan to speed up and expand the production of steel plates—one of the most vital elements in the Government's vast shipbuilding program—and urged them to operate 24 hours a day and 7 days a week.

A principal part of the production program would be a detailed plan calling for greater use of continuous strip mills. War demands for steel plates which could be produced only on sheared plate mills, the OPM said, were so great that these mills should be relieved of all orders which could be scheduled on other plate producing facilities.

C. E. Adams, chief of the OPM's iron and steel branch, said the program would result in an "appreciable increase" in production. The January output, he said, was expected to be 12 per cent higher than the all-time high of 600,000 tons in December. By March, he said, a further 10 per cent increase should be reflected without taking into consideration any new facilities now under construction.

Price Ceilings Mapped on Furniture Materials

Before the end of this month the Office of Price Administration plans to set maximum prices on Southern hardwoods, and it is studying veneers and Appalachian hardwoods preliminary to stabilizing prices, if necessary.

This announcement was made by Paul M. O'Leary, assistant director of the OPM price division, in an address to the National Retail Furniture Association meeting during the big furniture exposition in Chicago.

O'Leary said the OPM had attempted to keep down the costs of materials entering into furniture manufacture and would do more. Since September 10, he said, prices of furniture upholstery fabrics have been frozen, prices of Southern pine, Western pine and Douglas fir controlled, paper prices had been stabilized and leather prices fixed.

"In an uncertain world," he said, "predictions are unreliable. But it does seem probable at this time that no insurmountable problems will confront the furniture industry in 1942."

He said furniture manufacturers and retailers must exert every effort to resist excessive price advances which past experience has taught "are merely a prelude to business disaster."

Discussing inflation, O'Leary recalled that in the first two years of the World War the purchasing power of the dollar dropped to 92 cents, and by June, 1920, to 48 cents. The trend is being repeated, he said, for in less than two years of this war it has dropped to 94 cents.

He said that since August, 1939, wholesale prices of household furniture had risen about 30 per cent and on December 1 retail prices were reported 31.6 per cent above the August, 1939, level.

Stocks Again Depressed by Tax Worries

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 8.—Stocks were under the handicap of further tax fears today and market leaders operated at lower levels throughout.

While a few shipbuilding, rubber, utility and specialty issues managed to cling to modest plus signs, losses of fractions to a point were far in the majority at the close, with isolated setbacks of 2 to 5 or so in evidence.

The principal consolation for bullish forces was the drying up of activity on the retreat. Transfers of 532,900 shares compared with 629,570 yesterday and were the smallest for a full session since October 27. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was off .6 of a point at 37.8.

A. T. & T. Off Sharply

Softness of American Telephone—this "blue chip" was down 5⅜—contributed to the pessimistic market tinge, brokers said. The stock had recently come back about 20 points from its low reached just after Christmas. Thoughts of mounting taxes, costs and the possibility Congress would pass a law permitting the President to take over all wire communications for the duration of the emergency were restraining factors.

Far from comforting marketwise was the idea the 59-billion-dollar national budget would call for sucn huge taxes on corporate incomes that forthcoming earnings and dividends would be substantially dented in many cases. The war news provided nothing in the way of speculative inspiration, doubts arising as to the fate of Malaya and the Philippines in the broadening Japanese invasions.

Coca-Cola at New Low

Coca-Coca hit a new bottom for 1941-42 as the suggestion was heard that sugar rationing might cut sharply into soft-drink profits. Sears Roebuck and Montgomery Ward backtracked when holders began to envision difficulties these mail-order concerns may run into as the result of shortages in consumer goods lines.

Steels, rails and coppers were relatively narrow. Carriers seemingly were undisturbed by a less than seasonal rise in last week's freight loadings. Hopes continued that rail rate increases would be granted and that restrictions on automobile manufacture and tire sales would bring back more motor users to the passenger roads.

Prominent stocks in the rear ranks included Bethlehem Steel, Westinghouse, duPont, Union Carbide, American Can, Texas Co., Great Northern, Douglas Aircraft, International Harvester, Kennecott, General Motors and Chrysler.

Morgan Firm Buys Big Board Seat

New York, Jan. 8 (AP).—The name of Morgan, famous on the New York Stock Exchange for 45 years, returned there today when the investment banking firm of Morgan Stanley & Co. became a member by purchasing a seat for $25,000.

Henry S. Morgan, a partner in the firm, is a son of J. P. Morgan, the banker who until 1940—when he sold his seat—had been a member of the exchange since 1895.

The original stock exchange firm of J. P. Morgan & Co. is now a commercial bank. Morgan Stanley & Co. was an offshoot.

G. M. Suspends Sales Reports

New York, Jan. 8 (AP).—General Motors Corporation announced today that, in view of the curtailment of automobile production, its monthly report of car sales would be discontinued for the duration of the war.

General Motors has published its monthly car sales for nearly 20 years and for the last 10 years these reports were released like clockwork at 12 noon on the eighth day of every month.

Heavy Construction Awards Shrink 10%

New York, Jan. 8 (AP).—Engineering construction awards this week totaled $141,152,000, a decline of 10 per cent from the same week a year ago, Engineerin News-Record reported today.

Public construction was 4 per cent greater than a year ago, but a 64 per cent decrease in private contracts more than offset the rise in public work.

Reserve Bank Assets Jump $268,195,443

The annual report of the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond shows a growth during the past year of $268,195,443 in total assets. The bank covers Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland, North and South Carolina and the District of Columbia.

As of December 31, total assets amounted to $1,042,943,453, as compared with $774,748,010 on December 31, 1940. During the year, Federal Reserve notes in actual circulation increased from $283,520,205 to $431,488,610, and total deposits rose from $404,334,583 to $514,440,473.

There were no loans to member banks outstanding at the end of the year. Industrial advances amounted $764,973 and commitments to make industrial advances aggregated $856,636.

Current earnings for 1941 were $2,364,347, while expenses amounted to $2,085,947. The resulting current net earnings were $278,399, as compared with $483,129 for 1940.

After taking into consideration additions to current net earnings consisting principally of profits on sale of United States Government securities and deductions from current net earnings consisting chiefly of reserves for losses on industrial advances, net earnings for 1941 amounted to $332,735.

As to the distribution of net earnings, $330,179 was paid to member banks as dividends and $13,808 was paid to the Treasurer of the United States under provisions of section 13B of the Federal Reserve Act relating to industrial advances, the surplus being charged the small sum of $11,252.

British Steel Group Honors Eugene Grace

New York, Jan. 8 (AP).—The British Iron and Steel Institute, it was learned today, has awarded its Bessemer gold medal for 1942 to Eugene G. Grace, head of Bethlehem Steel Corporation.

Grace was honored by the British steel makers for his achievements in "fostering collaboration between the steel industries of the two leading nations of the world."

Forms for Making Returns

No. 5 of a Series

Forms for filing returns of income for 1941 have been sent to persons who filed returns last year. Failure to receive a form, however, does not relieve a taxpayer of his obligation to file his return and pay the tax on time—on or before March 16 if the return is made on the calendar-year basis, as is the case with most individuals.

Forms may be obtained upon request, written or personal, from the offices of collectors and from deputy collectors of internal revenue in the larger cities and towns.

A person should file his return on Form 1040, unless his gross income for 1941 does not exceed $3000 and consists wholly of salary, wages or other compensation for personal services, dividends, interest, rent, annuities, or royalties, in which event he may elect to file it on Form 1040A, a simplified form on which the tax may be readily ascertained by reference to a table contained in the form.

The return must be filed with the collector of internal revenue for the district in which the taxpayer has his legal residence or principal place of business on or before midnight of March 16, 1942. The tax may be paid in full at the time of filing the return or in four equal installments, due on or before March 16, June 15, September 13 and December 14.

Latest Profit Statements

Bankers Trust Co. of New York reported operating earnings in 1941 were $7,967,486, or $3.19 a share, compared with $8,399,166, or $3.36 a share in 1940.

British-American Tobacco Co., Ltd. Britain's second biggest stake in the world tobacco field, reported today net profit for the fiscal year ended September 30, of £4,087,564 ($16,432,007), after charges and provision for taxation, compared with profit of £4,865,441 ($19,559,073) in the preceding fiscal year.

(British-American is the parent concern of Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corporation, of Louisville, Ky.)

Lukens Steel Co. and subsidiaries reported for the fiscal year ended October 11, 1941, net income of $2,195,604, after provision for taxes, depreciation and other charges, or $6.90 a common share. This compared with net earnings of $709,488, or $2.23 per share in the previous fiscal year.

Selberling Rubber Co. reported a net income for the year ended October 31, 1941, of $813,918 after provision for all taxes, compared to net income of $219,488 for the previous year. The 20-year-old tire concern showed net sales of $13,693,952 for the year, against $9,609,826 for fiscal 1940. Net worth of the company during the year increased $376,964 to a total of $5,619,216.

Slack-Clad Girls Put on Airplane Assembly Lines

Columbus, O., Jan. 8 (AP).—Women took their places beside men on production lines at Curtiss-Wright's warplane plant today.

Twenty women now are employed in the plant proper and 20 others are in training. They were the vanguard of several hundred women to be trained by the company to replace men drafted by the Army and to relieve skilled men needed in other jobs.

Girls reported for work clad in slacks and were assigned to production work in the fabrication, heat treatment and cover departments.

Employment of women in the Columbus factory where Navy scout planes and dive bombers are being made is Curtiss-Wright's first experiment along this line. If successful, the plan will be adopted at other Curtiss plants in St. Louis and Buffalo.

Steelmakers See All Output Soon For Armaments

Cleveland, Jan. 8 (AP).—Steelmakers expect all tonnages available for civilian consumption to disappear when the new armament plans announced by President Roosevelt begin to take effect, Daily Metal Trade said today.

"General opinion is that aside from the warehouses, which will be cut down on tonnage but not entirely pushed out of the picture, only priority-rated tonnages will be put on mill books," the trade publication continued.

"Furthermore, the scope of the new armament plans indicates that full allocation of all steel products must be forthcoming shortly, in time to meet the heavy increases in demand which will be the natural result of manufacturing speed-up. Some civilian tonnage is expected to get a 'war' rating in order to care for essential civilian needs, but even manufacturers producing such essential items may be forced to take on a certain amount of war work if they are to avoid partial plant shutdowns."

Syndicate Offers Gen. Motors Stock

New York, Jan. 8 (AP).—A public offering of 60,000 shares of General Motors Corporation common stock was announced today by a syndicate headed by the Union. Securities Corporation and Lee Higginson Corporation. The stock was priced at 32.87½ a share, which was today's closing quotation on the New York Stock Exchange.

Wool Blanket Maker Cancels Fall Line

New York, Jan. 8 (AP).—The Chatham Manufacturing Co., largest maker of all-wool blankets, has canceled its scheduled opening of its fall line planned for January 15 and notified salesmen it would offer only a limited line of part-wool numbers at that time.

Sears' Head Made Army Adviser

Chicago, Jan. 8 (AP).—Gen. Robert E. Wood, chairman of the board of Sears Roebuck & Co., will join the staff of the Army's Chicago ordnance district as a full-time adviser, it was announced today.

The announcement was made today by Fred A. Preston, district chief of the ordnance branch. He disclosed also that Gen. Thomas S. Hammond, president of the Whiting Corporation, and James F. Oates, jr., an attorney, would serve in similar capacities.

Gen. Wood, who headed the America First Committee before it was dissolved after the Pearl Harbor attack, will direct his attention to the production field in the ordnance district.

Two Interhigh Series Games Set Today

With night play called off as an air raid precaution the final four teams in the eight-club public high school basketball series get their series seasons started in the daytime today, hooking up in a doubleheader at Tech gym at 3:30. The games feature a schedule of 11 games, 8 of them on local and nearby courts.

It will be Woodrow Wilson against Tech in the opener, and approximately one hour later Western takes on the defending champion, Roosevelt.

The shift from dark to daylight may, and most likely will, cut down on the crowd today, but it should have no effect on the class of competition. This is expected to be of the highest sort, with Wilson and Western coming out on the long end.

Easiest Time

Wilson's Tigers appear to be in for the easiest time of it. Their record of three straight victories is matched by Tech in number, but not in quality of opposition. The Tigers have five polished lettermen to hurl against a Tech squad that has one, increasing their favoritism. The only hitch may be a cut on the hand of Don Hillock, Wilson scoring star, which may not be healed yet.

In addition to a psychological edge gained last year when it accounted for Roosevelt's only interhigh setback, Western goes into today's finale with a considerably better record. The Red Raiders have won two of their three preseries starts, and their only loss was by one point to the George Washington freshmen. The latter, incidentally, is by far the best effort turned in by a scholastic five against the hot Colonial frosh.

Riders Lost 3

Roosevelt's preliminary record lists two victories and three losses, one of the latter to a Gonzaga club it had whipped earlier and another to Bethesda-Chevy Chase after three overtimes.

A scoring duel might easily develop, with the Raiders' Jimmy Karas battling Charley Howard. Karas has registered 44 points in three games to date, while Howard is credited with 47 in five.

Of today's other engagements, Gonzaga's invasion of Eastern at 3:30 may steal the spot. The hosts will be protecting a six-game winning streak.

Fordham Defeats Georgetown, 53-31

they really turned on the heat in the second half they made lay up shots and snowbirds as if the Hoyas were not even there.

Don Martin who handles the Georgetown play-making duties with O'Grady, pushed in a lay-up, side-court shot and one-hander in the first 10 minutes to keep Georgetown in the ball game at 8-all, aided by O'Grady's side-court potshot.

Karpowich and Mullins put the Rams ahead at 13-8, however, and it was all Fordham from that point. The New Yorkers raced ahead at 35-28 midway in the second period and the Hoyas stuck within 10 points for a short period but later were outclassed as Fordham scored the last 11 points, half against the Hoyas' reserves.

The Hoyas were big, bad boys in the eyes of the often booed officials, Joe Burns, of New York, and Paul Menton, of Baltimore, particularly the former. Only two fouls were called against the Rams in the first 31 minutes of play, while Georgetown was "guilty" 23 times during the game; Bornheimer and O'Grady both leaving the game with the maximum of four each. The booing was so loud and the Hoya protests so bitter in the second half that it took the play away from the ball game.

From Roll Gonzaga

Georgetown's unbeaten freshmen club hit on a scoring spree in the second half to route Gonzaga's defending Metropolitan champions, 58 to 14, in a preliminary, after leading only 16-7 at half time. Louis Patellichio was high scorer for the Hoya Frosh with 16 points.

Sacred Heart defeated St. Matthew, 13-11, in a game between parochial league teams played between the prelim and the varsity contest. The little fellows put on a good show.

Father Richard Law, S. J., Prefect of Discipline at Georgetown, presented Clark Griffith with a plaque in behalf of the student body before the varsity contest in appreciation of Griffith's cooperation with the school in past athletics. Griffith tossed up the first ball.

Wesley's 417 Tops Series

Four-hundred sets were plentiful last night in the Brookland Merchants League at Russ Diehl's alleys, with four big totals registered. Elmer Wesley, Diamond Cab, sparked the quartet with 417, a 407 by Ray Watson, a 408 by Eddie Hutchinson and a 401 by Karl Gochenour following in the order named. Lou Kreamer, Cannon's Restaurant, led his team to a sweep over Brookland Bakery with 152. The Hite's Shell quintet won team highs with 838 and 1807, while Shadid's Restaurant, the Friars Club and DePerini Delicatessen scored respective whitewashes over the Tavern, Willis Esso and Yuengling's Beer.

ARLINGTON

Virginia Wright of Heflin's, with 137, and Jackie Polaski of Bauserman's Service with 331 topped the Arlington Ladies League with the latter aiding her quintet to high team set of 1464 and three in a row from the Heflin's. Marge's Beauty Salon rolled high team game of 508 and scored a sweep over Sher & Cohen.

ICE PALACE

Bucky Lamp, of the Electric Shop, and Carl Myers, of Material Testing, topped the Model Basin League at the Ice Palace with respective totals of 350 and 359, with the latter's team being enabled to win two from Electric Shop because of the nice count. The team highs were garnered by Propulsion with 873-1630 which also included a pair over Machine Shop No. 1. The Officers won a sweep over Machine Shop No. 2 despite Dutch Duerst's 353 set for the losers.

Joan Bransford, of the Woodpeckers, with 125, and Pauline Ford, of the Redskins, with 328, topped the Ice Palace Ladies League with the former team winning a pair from the latter. The Orioles and Woodpeckers split team honors with respective totals of 511 and 1442, Woodpeckers winning the odd game. The Cardinals scored a sweep over the Bears.

MOUNT RAINIER

District League star Len Smith, Maryland Electric, was top man in the Mount Rainier League with his 170 game and 416 set to help his boys win a sweep over Northeast Electric. Johnny Parke's 143-397, Chet Lilley's 160-389, and Harry Dawson's 144-385 sparked Pincus Grill to the team highs of 828-1815 and a whitewash of the American Home Improvement boys.

Regal Soccermen To Play Marlboro

Two of the teams in the Washington-Suburban Soccer League get a rest this Sunday as only two games are played. Regal Clothiers, undefeated while winning the first-half championship, feature action at Gonzaga Field in a battle with Marlboro, and Maryland Sport Club will be the guest of Waldorf. Both contests start at 2:30 p. m.

Louis Risks Championship For Charity

fearful fighting in the sixth round of their first fight, the faulty bell at Washington sounded its tinny note. Baer heard it, dropped his hands and started for his corner. Louis, who had been backed up into Baer's corner, did not hear the bell—and thinking Baer was coming at him threw a terrible right-hand punch that caught the defenseless giant flush on the jaw and heavily felled him.

It was patently a foul, though accidental. Manager Ancil Hoffman and Trainer Izzy Kline protested so bitterly to Referee Arthur Donovan, after dragging the prostrate Baer back to his corner, that the bell sounded opening the seventh round and Donovan disqualified Baer—because his handlers were in the ring.

Buddy Confident

Baer was confident tonight that the Washington fight had proved that he could take Louis' best punches, and fight back. He pointed out that after being knocked down a couple of times, he got up in the fifth round and made Louis hold on, with a two-fisted attack. He believes he learned a lot about Louis in the first fight.

Louis has been a terror in training, flooring his durable sparring mates in droves. That he respects Baer's punching power may be gained from the fact that he has trained hard for the match. He finished his training early this morning when, with the moon still out and the mercury down to 10 below zero at his Greenwood Lake, N. Y., training ground, he jogged several miles. Baer also confined himself to roadwork this morning.

The record indoor gate for boxing is the $201,000 drawn by Jim Maloney and Jack Delaney at the Garden in 1928. If tomorrow night's fight is a complete sellout that mark will be surpassed—thanks to an acre or so of $30 ringside seats. The cheapest seats, 1,000 general admission tickets at $2.50 each, will go on sale tomorrow evening. The Garden will hold about 20,00 spectators. The advance sale passed the $100,000 mark yesterday.

The fight probably will be Louis' last before his induction into the Army.

Louis Risks Title to Baer Again Tonight

tillery, twice smashing the California giant to the canvas. A few seconds after the bell had sounded ending the sixth round, Louis shot over a right that again dropped the helpless Baer to the floor. Ancil Hoffman, Baer's manager, claimed a foul demanding that Louis be disqualified for striking after the bell. Donovan disallowed the foul claim but disqualified Baer when Hoffman and Izzy Kline, Buddy's trainer refused to leave the ring at the bell for the seventh round.

Louis wants to erase the memory of that first meeting with the younger Baer. His determination to finish the Californian early isn't so strong as it was the night he knocked out Max Schmeling in the first round of their second meeting, but it's still there and it bodes an unhappy end for Brother Baer.

In all of Louis' return fights with battlers that had made creditable showings, the Brown Bomber crushed with his devastating dynamite. There was Godoy, the haughty Chilean, who had gone 15 rounds against mighty Joe, and Washington's Natie Brown, who went ten, and the back-pedalling Bob Pastor, who stayed the limit. They all felt the full fury of the Louis power in second engagements. Godoy was knocked out in eight rounds, Brown in four and Pastor in 11.

Buddy Baer has a big task ahead of him. But he has his rooting section. And strange as it may seem one of his biggest boosters is Lou Nova, that old whirling dervish of a Yogi man. The great Nova announced today that Baer would win in six rounds. That distance must be par for the course. Nova went six rounds with Louis—but he isn't saying how.

Baer expects to weigh in at 245 and the champion will probably come in at 205, the highest he has weighed for any encounter. The betting is 5 to 1 on a Louis victory with few takers.

Regardless of the outcome of this heavyweight championship fight, the cause is great and it is only fitting that the boxing game salutes Uncle Sam's Navy with a pugilistic "Anchors Aweigh."

Maryland Edges Virginia, 35 to 34

jump Virginia further in front, and Fraley converted a foul to put the Cavalier five up before Mont broke into the scoring for Maryland.

Preston received a head cut in a scramble under the Terp basket and left the game temporarily and the Old Liners cashed in on his absence by shaking Mont free to take the lead. When Travis got the range it was the Marylanders' turn to be five points ahead, with seven minutes remaining.

Virginia swiftly regained the lead as Wiltshire, Picket and Lowman looped in field goals. James put Maryland one point in front and Preston returned to the game to restore the Cavaliers to a scant lead.

After Mont sank a goal the Terrapins attempted to freeze the ball, but Wiltshire broke through to take the ball and a few seconds later he caged one. With 90 seconds remaining, Wiltshire was fouled and missed, and the Terps worked the ball to Travis who added his eighth field goal to win the ball game.

U.S. Peace Aims Parallel Pope's, Bishops Say

America's war aims include "the things which the Pope points out as requisites for the peace, which our victory will establish," a special Catholic bishop's committee announced here yesterday.

"Our . . . country is contending against strong, resourceful, clever enemies . . . for a world order under the law of nations," the bishops stated.

"Without surrender of our sovereignty or injury to our free institutions, proud that we have been accused by an enemy nation of idealism, we are ready to make hard sacrifices and to give generously of our abundant resources to outlaw forever the domination of international life by brute force, lying propaganda, and privileged nationalisms."

Based on Right

The committee, appointed here last November at the annual meeting of Catholic bishops, was created to promote the study and publication of Pope Pius XII's peace plan, as elaborated in the holy father's Christmas message, calling for the establishment of the "law of nations."

"This law," the bishops asserted, "is basically nothing more than right and wrong in international law."

Application of the "law of nations," the committee's statement declared, does not impose on any nation the surrender of legitimate sovereignty or the abandonment of its cultural resources. Rather, the law envisions "all nations living under the law of the all-just God and prizes righteousness above material aggrandizement, without however overlooking the temporal happiness of peoples."

"Hate, Passion" Ruled Out

"When hate and passion and pride are cast aside," the bishops said, "human reason easily discovers the fundamental provisions of the law of nations . . . Our holy father calls to the leaders of men everywhere to make this law the basis of their peace structure."

The committee issuing the statement consists of Archbishop Samuel A. Stritch, of Chicago; Bishop James H. Ryan, of Omaha, and Bishop Aloisius J. Muench, of Fargo, N. Dak.

Funeral Service For A. W. Sheridan Set for Today

Funeral services for Anthony W. Sheridan, 38-year-old linotype operator for The Post, who died Wednesday at Gallinger Hospital, will be held today at Huntsmann's funeral parlor, 5732 Georgia Avenue, at 4 p. m.

Mr. Sheridan, who had lived in Washington for 11 years, was employed by The Post for the last eight, and previously by other Washington newspapers. He was born near Charleston, S. C., and was educated in Charleston.

Seven years ago he married the former Miss Annabelle Lovelace, of Chilhowie, Va. In addition to his wife, he leaves his mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Sheridan; a brother, Thomas Sheridan, and a sister, Mrs. Paul O'Brien, all of Charleston.

Mr. Sheridan lived at 1121 New Hampshire Avenue Northwest.

Henry W. Francis' Funeral Today: Was Veteran

Funeral services for Henry Wood Francis, who was an employe of the Old Age Pension Branch of the Social Security Board, will be at 1 p. m. today at Fort Myer Chapel.

Mr. Francis died Wednesday at Mount Alto Hospital following an illness of several weeks. He was 54 years old.

Survivors include his mother, Mrs. Lulu W. Francis, who lived with him at 143 Grafton Street, Chevy Chase, Md., and a sister, Miss Grace Francis, San Francisco.

Born in Winchester, Tenn., Mr. Francis served in France with the Tank Corps during World War I. He was an active member of the American Legion.

Funeral Services Scheduled Today For Philip Plyler

Funeral services for Philip L. Plyler, former newspaper writer and salesman, will be held at 11 a. m. today at the Gawler funeral home, 1756 Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest, with burial in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Ethel B. Plyler; his mother, Mrs. Martha J. Plyler, and ten brothers and sisters, most of whom live in Gastonia.

D. C. Youth Among 10 Lost As Ship Sinks

Ten sailors, including a 25-year-old Washington man, perished yesterday when the mine planter Arnold sank in a gale while being towed off Portsmouth, N. H., the Army announced last night. Only the ship's master was rescued.

Robert S. Walter, jr., whose parents live at 5425 Connecticut Avenue Northwest, was mate on the mine planter, whose crew he joined only a few weeks ago. The last letter he wrote his parents told of his work laying mines on Christmas Day.

The Arnold apparently burst at the seams and sank without warning 50 miles off the coast while it was being towed by the mine planter Baird in heavy seas. So suddenly did the 98-foot craft founder, that the mine planter L-88, also being towed by the Baird, was almost drawn under by the towline attached to the sinking vessel.

Robert S. Walter, sr., administrative assistant in the Office of the Petroleum Coordinator, said last night that his son had joined the Army transport service, a civilian job, last July, after service at sea with the Merchant Marine. Two of the vessels the younger Walter served on were the Lehigh and American Trader, both subsequently sunk by the Nazis.

Born here, Walter got his secondary school education at Swavely, Manassas, Va. He then joined the Pennsylvania State school ship, the Annapolis, and after two years' training joined the United States Lines.

Birth of a son to his wife eight months ago caused Walter to give up sea duty for service closer to South Westport, Mass., where he made his home. He last visited his parents here on Thanksgiving Day. His wife presently is in a New York hospital.

Also surviving are a brother, George, a selectee stationed at Fort Myer, and a sister, Mrs. Fred Morhart, of Washington.

Penny Milk A Big Success, Teachers Say

"Penny milk," rounding out its first week in Washington, already has established itself as a success.

Teachers and welfare workers yesterday expressed hearty approval of the innovation, by which nearly 30,000 children living in low income and relief areas of the Capital are receiving free half-pint bottles daily.

In the 14 parochial schools where 4200 bottles are being distributed each day, the program is running smoothly, said an official of Catholic Charities. He emphasized that, despite the defense boom, there still exist numerous families whose incomes are too low to supply adequate food for all members.

"The children from these homes are particularly fortunate in having the milk program," he declared.

Miss Margaret Cross, director of Georgetown Children's House, said attendance has risen sharply since the project was initiated on Monday. Six other settlement houses also are participating in the program, along with 50 public schools.

Arthur Deavers' Funeral Rites Set for Tomorrow

Funeral services for Arthur Deavers, 40, native Washingtonian, will be held tomorrow at 11 a. m. in Chamber's funeral home, 517 Eleventh Street Southeast. Burial will be in Congressional Cemetery.

Mr. Deavers died yesterday after an illness of three months in his home, 1112 H Street Northeast. He lived there with his mother, Mrs. Mary F. Deavers, who survives him. He was educated in the District schools and was a painter by trade.

He leaves besides his mother two sisters, Mrs. Sarah R. Dallman, of 4909 Quarles Street Northeast, and Mrs. Ellen Warden, of the same address.

Mrs. Cummings, Wife of Retired Clergyman, Dies

Mrs. Minna M. Cummings, 69, wife of the Rev. George M. Cummings, retired pastor of Garden Presbyterian Church, died yesterday in Alexandria Hospital following an illness of several weeks.

Mrs. Cummings was active both in church and community affairs. She leaves, besides her husband, a daughter, Mrs. Fowler Dugger, of Birmingham, Ala.; two sons, Albert B., of Des Moines, Iowa, and Harold G., of Washington, and four grandchildren.

$83,000 Given to War Fund Of Red Cross in Washington

Large donors yesterday included Temple Bailey, $100; Kresge Co., $700; Mrs. Thomas A. Given, $500; Mrs. Fenton Fadeley, $250; Miss Harriet Shaw, $100, and Mrs. Sotheron Key, $100.

Robert P. Smith, chairman of the professional group in the campaign, yesterday appointed the following sub-chairmen for his committee: Dr. M. M. Alexander, dentists; Dr. John Hugh Lyons, doctors; Dr. Edward S. Jones, Negro doctors; Thomas H. Locraft, architects; William Spicer, Washington Institute of Public Accountants; Wayne Kendrick, Institute of Certified Public Accountants; Gorham F. Freer, patent attorneys; William Wagner, engineers; Miss Janet Fish, nurses; Mrs. T. J. Hoverton, osteopaths, and Beatrice Clephane, women lawyers.

George Vass, financial chairman of the War Fund, announced his committee as follows: George Ferris, Col. Lewis W. Cass, Andrew Saul, Joseph Marr, Albert Howard, and J. B. Powers.

Miss Mabel T. Boardman, vice chairman of the District War Fund in charge of special gifts, will discuss the importance of first aid training at dinner meeting of Washington Gas Light Co. employes at 6:30 p. m. at the Hotel Raleigh. Twenty-five graduating instructors in first aid will be honored at the dinner.

Robert Dunkin, Red Cross coordinator of instruction, will also speak at the dinner, and Marcy L. Sperry, president of the gas light company, will outline the company's plan to make every employe a graduate in first aid.

Listen! with Glynn

If you're at all quizzical about the popularity of radio's quiz shows, those question and answerable programs in which you get paid for having common knowledge, it may please you to know that the newest and biggest of them all starts over WJSV and the Columbia network at 7:30 tonight.

Biggest, that is, in the rather important sense that it will pay individual prize winners up to $800—which unquestionably is not small. It's to be called "How'm I Doing?" and will be run by your old friend, Bob Hawk, who until a couple of weeks ago was the deviser and quizmaster of "Take It or Leave It," which has had no trouble at all being uproariously popular these past two years.

Further than to report that the questions of "How'm I Doing?" will be of the type that can be answered in a word or two, Mr. Hawk refuses to tell anything more about it. But that it probably has what it takes is indicated by the fact that its sponsor, Camel cigarettes, has usually produced nothing but the best up to now and that Mr. Hawk is being paid by them the not inconsiderable sum of $2500 a week, and no questions asked.

Bob Hawk, in the rare case that you don't know about him, is the good-natured and fast-talking gent who admits quite frankly that his prodigious repertory of gags and puns are either awfully simple or just simply awful. But people like him even when he says such things as: "A counter-irritant is a woman who looks at everything but buys nothing."

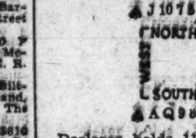
Contract Bridge

The enviable skill of the experts is in reality nothing more than infinite attention to detail, and any one who desires this ability for himself must study the elementary plays, for there contracts are won and lost. In the next paragraphs we will continue today with advice as to how best to manage suits with missing honors.

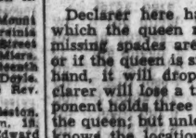
We have previously shown how declarer may finesse against honors held by the opponents when he or dummy has various combinations of broken honor sequences. Just because these conditions exist, however, is no reason for declarer always to finesse. There is another way to capture outstanding high cards.

When a suit is split between the closed hand and dummy so that a missing honor seems likely to drop on the lead of a higher honor, it is usually more profitable not to finesse. Consider this situation:



Declarer holds 11 spades in the combined hands, and it is quite possible that the adversaries each hold one. If such is the case, the king will drop upon the play of the ace. Declarer, of course, forfeits his opportunity to finesse against the king, but the finesse works only when East holds both missing spades. As the king may be singleton in either hand, or either hand may hold two spades; the finesse can succeed only in one of these four situations.

The best play, therefore, when the partnership holds 11 cards, except king, small, is to play for the drop. This same strategy can also be applied to lower-ranking honors. For example:



Declarer here has two leads on which the queen may fall. If the missing spades are evenly divided, or if the queen is singleton in either hand, it will drop. Of course, declarer will lose a trick if either opponent holds three spades, including the queen; but unless he believes he knows the location of the missing honor, it is best not to finesse.

Salvage Group Issues List of Items to Save

Answers to your questions about what to save in the "Salvage for Victory" program and how to get the salvaged articles on the market, as outlined yesterday by the District Salvage Committee, follow:

1. Waxed paper, such as comes on bread and inside cereal boxes, cannot be salvaged.
2. Cereal boxes and other cartons can be salvaged, regardless of the amount of colored printing on them.
3. "Tin foil" yields very little return, is expensive to reprocess, usually has no tin in it. The D. C. Salvage Committee would prefer not to have it.
4. Old bottles of various sizes are not yet salvageable, but do not throw them away. According to OPM, some cities are salvaging them. Even broken glass, in some instances, can be reused. So save them up for harder days, if you have the room for them.
5. Tin cans are not being accepted by the salvage committee—yet. They are expensive to reclaim, yield little in return. Some cities, however, are collecting them already. Others may come to it.
6. Papers do not have to be absolutely clean or new to be reclaimed. Old papers that have been stored in garages, for instance, are welcomed with open arms.
7. Four charitable organizations will collect salvaged materials in the metropolitan Washington area—but they cannot make trips for small amounts. The four are Salvation Army, Goodwill Industries, Volunteers of America and the Self-Help Exchange.
8. If you want to take your material to a regular junk dealer, it is all right with the salvage committee. Perhaps a child in the family or the maid would like to make some extra money in this manner.
9. Calls for additional information can be made to Republic 8488.

Plans for establishing regular collecting depots in each community, so that individuals could make their deliveries there and trucks be spared needless trips were discussed yesterday at the first meeting of the executive board of the District Committee at the Board of Trade.

Harry N. Stull, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, suggested that each citizens' association be asked to establish a salvage committee, which in turn would set up the collection depots. The board accepted the idea.

Nugent Dodds and Claude W. Owen were elected first and second vice chairmen of the committee, respectively, to serve in the absence of Chairman James E. Colliflower.

A resolution from the Washington Waste Dealers was read at the meeting to show the dealers ready to "operate on a 24-hour basis, seven days a week, to expedite the flow of paper, metals, rags and rubber in the interest of national defense."

Japs Reported Led by Europeans

London, Jan. 8 (AP).—Evidence is accumulating that some of the Japanese troops striking at Singapore may be led by European officers, the British news agency Reuters reported today in a dispatch from the Malayan front.

A Punjabi sergeant major was quoted as telling of a hand-to-hand fight with an officer who was "a flaxen-haired giant who carried a long sword and was dressed in khaki with knee-high rubber boots."

Another Indian—an officer—said a platoon of Indians was holding a bridge in the earlier part of the campaign when a small car drove up.

Two uniformed Europeans stepped out and shouted in Hindustani: "Let us across. We are your officers." The Indians had been forewarned; the pseudo-British were answered with bullets.

British officers also had reported encountering tall and fair-haired enemy officers of European appearance, said Reuters.

Nation Counts On Volunteers, Briton Asserts

The more action taken by voluntary groups in the national emergency the more it is proved that what the Nation is fighting for is not obsolete, Noel Hall, British Minister to the United States, told the Junior Board of Commerce yesterday.

Thousands of voluntary, democratic organizations exist in Britain today and that they persist is a guarantee of democracy's survival, he said.

Prime Minister Churchill was referred to as a great parliamentarian and lover of parliamentary government. In a recent and private conversation in Washington Churchill said, according to the Minister, that one of the things he was most anxious for is the return "to our way of life in England." He was said to have repeated the lines from Kipling:

"Leave to live without your leave underneath the law."

Navy Summons Dr. Glenn To Active Duty as Chaplain

DR. GLENN

The Rev. Dr. C. Leslie Glenn, rector of historic St. John's Episcopal "Church of the Presidents" at Lafayette Square, and a bluejacket in World War I, has been called into the Navy chaplain service, effective January 20, it was learned yesterday.

The St. John's vestry has granted Dr. Glenn a leave of absence "for the duration." He has been a lieutenant in the Naval Reserve for the past three years.

During his absence the work of the parish will be carried on by the Rev. Dr. Norman D. Goehring and the Rev. John G. Magee, assistants. Dr. Glenn said. The Rev. Magee's son, Sergt. Pilot John Magee, last month was killed in action while flying with the Canadian Royal Air Force.

In amessage to his parish, Dr. Glenn said that it is a "hard wrench to leave St. John's Church, even though it is only for a short time."

"In the short year and a half I have been here," he wrote, "I have come to count many people as my dear frinds and have been constantly upheld by the affection and enthusiasms and faith of this great parish."

Dr. Glenn sad he was sure his church "will continue to carry on its work without lessening because every member will be loyal."

Dr. Glenn in 1917 left his studies at Stevens Technological Institute in New York City to enlist as seaman in the Navy. He returned to that school and was graduated in 1921. After a year in construction engineering, he taught mathematics at Lawrenceville (N. J.) Preparatory School for one year, then enrolled at the Episcopal Theological Seminary in Alexandria, and was graduated in 1926.

He served a year as assistant rector of All Saints' Church, Worcester, Mass., then became secretary for college work of the Episcopal National Council, and helped organize the Church Society for College Work, of which he is now president. From 1930 to 1940 he was rector of Christ Church, Cambridge, across the Common from Harvard Yard.

Active in city-wide religious and civic work, Dr. Glenn has served on several committees of the Federation of Churches, and is chairman of the associations, schools and colleges committee of the District Red Cross war fund campaign. He lives at 2374 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest.

Georgia Railway Official Dies

Savannah, Ga., Jan. 8 (AP).—H. D. Pollard, 70, an official of the Central of Georgia Railway for more than 40 years and a director of the Ocean Steamship Co., died at his home here last night.

He started with the railroad in 1898, became president in 1931, receiver in 1932 and cotrustee in 1940 when the Federal Court granted a reorganization of the railway company.
